BRUSSELS, Nov. 10.—The Catholic marriage uniting in marriage the Belgian Crown Prince Leopold, Duke of Brabant, and Princess Astrid of Sweden was celebrated today with great pomp in the Church of SS. Michael and Gudule. The church is an old building, dating chiefly from the thirteenth century, with massive gray stone, high pointed arches and great carved figures of saints on the columns of the nave.

The sun shone brilliantly all day, streaming through the old sixteenth century windows of the south transept, the prevailing tone of which is bright red and gold, as if in happy augury, this being the national colors of the house.

Time was, as it has done during the last three days, Brussels poured its whole population into the streets to line the route to the church. The procession numbered about 9,000, including several thousand more than the St. Gudule's held before at one time in its long history.

The ceremony was set for 11 o'clock, an hour before that all the space in the church, except certain places reserved for the especially distinguished, was already full.

The strains of bugles and fanfares announced at the church doors, following the rattle and clash of arms presented by troops of the First Regiment of Carabineers lining the route, the arrival of the Princes and potentates of countries. They made a brilliant procession.

Prelates in Striking Robes.

More prominent than any of the clergy were the Papal Nuncio, Monsignore Micara, titular Archbishop of Stauropolis and doyen of the Diplomatic Corps in crimson, and Mgr. van Roey, Archbishop of Malines, in amethyst and white robes and mitre, but most conspicuous of all the scarlet gowns of the municipal authorities of Brussels and the Judges of the Belgian High Court. Men not in uniform wore dark costumes all were evening dress and decorations.

The ladies had been instructed not to wear black, because that is the color of mourning, or white, because it would be too obtrusive. Therefore, they were all dressed in harmonious shades of blue, manve, maize or yellow. By special permission they were allowed to appear in church without coverings for their heads, and the majority did so. Some few had their heads veiled in lace and others wore tiaras or rubrons.

The organ remained silent for a whole hour preceding the ceremony. The shuffling of feet and the rustle of dress with the clamor of bugles and the clash of arms, filled the church, while an endless stream poured in to seek places where there was no place. It still lacked a few minutes of 11 when a fanfare announced the arrival of the first royal cortège. Heretofore everybody had entered by the transept doors, north or south, but the royal party was to come by the great west door and proceed up the whole length of the nave.

Europe's Royalty Arrives.

The first cortège included the King and Queen of Denmark, the Grand Duchess of Luxemburg and her consort, the Crown Prince of Norway, Princess Marie Jose of Belgium, Prince and Princess Axel of Denmark, Prince Henry of Great Britain, the Comtesse of Flanders, the Duke of Ostergotland and the Princess Martha of Sweden, brother and sister of the bride; Prince and Princess of Bourbon-Parma, Prince and Princess Sixtus of Bourbon-Parma, Princess Ingrid of Sweden, her brothers the Dukes of Vasterbotten and of Upland, and her uncle, the Duke of Scania, Prince Xavier of Bourbon-Parma, Prince and Princess Bernadotte, uncle and aunt of the bride, and Prince Jean, Count Carl and Count Folke Bernadotte.

It had been expected that the second cortège, the bride's, would arrive a few minutes after the first, and the ecclesiastical procession, with the Nuncio and the Archbishop, passed down the nave to be ready to welcome the bride and the bridegroom at the west door.

But minutes passed to a quarter of an hour and then to half an hour. The great congregation began to grow restless and apprehensive lest something untoward should have caused the delay. At last, at 11:35, the roar of voices outside gave notice of the approach of the King and Queen and the bridal couple.

The organ then began to play. From without came the clangor of bells and of drums in the national anthem, but above all rose the blare of the trumpets, which continued till the royal party had entered the church.

The second cortège consisted of three carriages, the first containing ladies and gentlemen in attendance, the second the King and Queen of the Belgians and their son, the Duke of Brabant, and the third the Duke and Duchess of Västergothland and their daughter, Princess Astrid.

The party was met by the Archbishop, and the procession was immediately formed to pass up the nave with the ecclesiastics ahead, including

Cold Snap Here on Schedule; New England Now Shivering

The thermometer hovered a few degrees above freezing point most of yesterday afternoon and the cold snap forecast by the local weather bureau was well on its way here last night. Slightly colder, clear weather is expected today. This city and the vicinity fared much better than New England, where heavy rains preceded a cold wave that sent the mercury below the freezing point in many places.

The temperature here was thirty-six degrees at 10 o'clock last night, while the average for the day was forty degrees, six degrees colder than the same day last year. The temperature at 12:01 A. M. yesterday, before the change set in, was 62 degrees.

Fair and continued cold for today with rising temperature on Friday and Saturday was the forecaster's prediction late last night, with the added statement that probably Saturday, when several of the season's most important football games are scheduled, will be clear and crisp.

INNOCENT NOVELIST JAILED AS SWINDLER

FOR A CALIFORNIA CRIME

Another Daly Sought—Protests Disregarded—He Will Press Complaint.

Carroll John Daly, a novelist and short story writer of 37 Concord Avenue, White Plains, told yesterday of how he had been arrested by a United States Marshal as another man wanted by the police in California, and locked up in the Tombs last Friday night despite the efforts of neighbors and city officials to convince the marshal that Daly was not the man named in the warrant.

The warrant called for the arrest of John J. Daly, 7 Concord Avenue, White Plains, who is wanted in California for using the mails to defraud. A man of that name who came from Los Angeles, stayed a few days this Summer in White Plains near Carroll J. Daly's home, and then went to visit friends in New Rochelle.

The proximity of Carroll Daly's house, and the fact that his home number contained a seven, apparently appealed to Deputy United States Marshal Schwartz, who went to White Plains last Friday to serve the warrant. He asked for Daly and was told he was not at home, according to authorities in the Federal Building in Manhattan, but that evening called him on the telephone and asked for an appointment. The marshal said the business was private, and added: "You know, John, it's about sandwich machines." Daly told his caller that he had the wrong man and hung up. Five minutes later, according to Daly, a man rang the door bell and when he refused to state his business Mrs. Daly sent the door. Daly was about to call the police, he said, when the man outside said, "If you want the police they are here." Then Daly opened the door and the marshal, addressing him as John Daly, said he had a warrant for his arrest on a charge of swindling.

The marshal insisted that Daly go with him to the local police headquarters, where Daly got in touch with John McMillan, President of the White Plains Board of Aldermen; James A. Dargan, Sumner Whitney and Fred Brutschy, all neighbors, who told the marshal he had the wrong man. Marshal Schwartz insisted on taking his prisoner to New York, and told Daly that he could spend the night at the Hotel Belmont. Instead, Daly says, the marshal had dinner with him and locked bim np in the Tombs.

"Saturday morning," said Mr. Daly, "Marshal Schwartz took me to Assistant District Attorney Murdock, and I heard the latter tell Judge O'Connor that the bail should be reduced to $1,000 from $10,000 because White Plains people that he couldn't ignore had vouched for me, but the Marshal was 'reasonably sure' I was the man. I finally got bail and it cost me $50. Charles J. Wallace of Yonkers appeared as my attorney, and on Monday he was told that there had been a mistake and the incident was to be regretted. If I can do anything about it, I can assure you that those who put me in this predicament will have cause for regret."

It was said at the Federal District Attorney's office yesterday that when it was learned that a mistake might have been made "the wires were burned np" getting confirmation from California that Carroll Daly was not the man wanted. The mistake proved. Daly was released at once.

DRY AGENTS OUSTED AS UNFIT BY MILLS; SHAKE-UP PROMISED

Local Administrator Calls Six Men "Speak-Easy Buyers" Who Lack Initiative.

25 MAY BE DISMISSED

Honesty of Those Discharged Is Not Questioned—Three Are Republican Captains.

WANTS GREATER EFFICIENCY

Prefers One $3,600 Man Who Will Reach Big Sources to Two at $1,800 Who Do Not Try.

Six Federal agents were discharged yesterday for inefficiency and lack of initiative by Prohibition Administrator Chester P. Mills in what was declared to be the beginning of a general shake-up in the local administrator's office. It was said that, wit the next few weeks, twenty-five agents might be dismissed.

"I am tired of having agents who get evidence only in speakeasies," said Major Mills after he had made known the dismissal of the six agents. "I have no complaint to make about the honesty of these men, bnt their records did not compare with those of other agents. They were just speakeasy buyers. There are large sources of supply in this city, such as breweries, garages and plants that hold big stocks of liquor. But these six agents never seemed to get the men who controlled these caches of booze and alcohol."

Major Mills frankly admitted that there were a number of grafters on his staff. "Bnt just as soon as I find them out," he added, "they are going."

The agents dismissed were John J. Kerrigan, Ike Friedenberg, Harry Weltman, Arthur Van Tassel, David Levy and Samuel Murray. The first three named are Republican district captains. Kerrigan worked under County Chairman Samuel Koenig. Friedenberg under Executive Leader Oppenheim and Weltman under Leader Costuma.

One Previously Suspended.

Van Tassel, who comes from Hudson, N. Y., was suspended several months ago, but recently, at the request of United States Attorney Buckner, General Lincoln C. Andrews reinstated him. Levy is a son of Republican district leader Morris Levy.

Major Mills said that he must have a more efficient staff. "If I can get one agent for $3,600 who will operate in an intelligent manner and bring in the people who control the sources of supply," he said, "I shall be doing more effective work than at present, where we have two agents each receiving $1,800.

"This might mean fewer agents, but I would rather have efficiency with fewer men than tolerate present conditions, which give me a large staff of incompetent men at smaller pay."

Donbt was expressed by the administrator that the metropolitan area had been stocked with Christmas liqnor as reported. "It hasn't come in over the water," said Major Mills. "In my opinion the bootleggers are cutting their stock on hand with ethyl-acetate, a commercial alcoholic product not under control of the prohibition forces and difficult to detect in chemical analysis because its presence is not generally suspected. This product is being used because the sources of specially and completely denatured alcohol are being dried np."

Manufacturers Agree to Help.

He said that at last Monday's conference at prohibition headquarters, which was attended by General Andrews and twelve manufacturers of thyl-acetate, the manufacturers agreed to cooperate with the prohibition forces and promised to sell their product only to reputable persons.

Major Mills declared that 300,000 gallone lese of denatured alcohol were used last month than in October, 1925, and said that this proved that bootleggers were supplying less drinkable liquor. He said half the liquor seized by his men now showed the presence of wood alcohol and 98 per cent. showed doctored alcobol of some sort.

Asked whether good beer was obtainable in the city, Major Mills said he doubted it. "All hreweries in the district," be said, "either are being watched by agents twenty-four hours daily or are under surveillance for fiegal hrewing. The beer that is stronger than the prohibition standard is mostly near beer to which denatured alcohol has been added."

He declared that the informal treaty between the United States and Great Britain had made Rum Row a thing of the past and said very little liquor was being smuggled in by land. He estimated that 500,000 gallons of liquor were being manufactured monthly in this district for ebipment and local consumption.

Canada Appoints Vincent Massey Her First Minister to Washington

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Nov. 10.—The Honorable Vincent Massey was appointed Canadian Minister to Washington at the Cabinet Council today, the first in history. The appointment bas been signed by the Governor General.

Mr. Massey is now in England, wbere, with Premier MacKenzie King, he has been in consultation with the British Government to decide the powers of the Canadian Minister and arrange for cooperation with the British Embassy at Washington.

Mr. Massey, who is 39 years of age, for years has been a student of international affairs and has been closely associated with a British group the members of which dovote much time to this purpose.

Until his entrance into politics in 1925, he was at the bead of the Massey-Harris Company, the largest manufacturer of agricultural implements in the British Empire He entered tbe King Cabinet without portfolio in 1925, but was defeated in the general election which immediately followed. He was not a candidate in the recent election.

The Massey family accumulated a large fortune in business. Members of the family have been generous in contributions to charity, education and the general betterment of Toronto. They built for Toronto Massey Hall, a great auditorium, and for Toronto University Hart House, which, in drama and literature, is playing a large part in university life.

Mr. Massey married a daugbter of Sir George Parkin, wbo was bead of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust. The couple have two sone.

For a time it was expected that Mr. Massey would represent the British Empire at Washington in the absence of the British Ambassador, but at the present imperial conference representatives of other units of the empire objected, and his powers and duties will be solely with Canadian affairs.

At different times in the not remote past the proposal to send a Canadian envoy to Washington has been put forward. Until recently the British Government opposed the innovation on the theory that such a departure from convention would strike at the "diplomatic unity of the empire." Now this idea has disappeared, apparently, giving way to the hroader theory of self-governing and self-functioning units within the British Commonwealth. How Great Britain, however, would look upon the sending of an American envoy to Ottawa is problematical.

CROWDS LINE ROUTE OF COOLIDGE TRAIN

OVATION FOR MRS. COOLIDGE

Special to The New York Times.

ON BOARD THE PRESIDENTIAL TRAIN, INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 10.—Speeding on his way to Kansas City, where tomorrow he will deliver an Armistice Day address at the dedication of the Liberty Memorial, President Coolidge today saw many signs of prosperity through the windows of his observation car.

Leaving Washington late last night, President Coolidge's train traversed Maryland and at daylight had reached the industrial centre of the Keystone State, Pittsburgh. For hours thereafter, the President, sitting in his observation car, observed the activities of the steel and allied industries in Pennsylvania and Ohio, obtaining for himself first hand views of the prosperity of the industrial sections of those States.

He followed with a lively interest the panorama spread before him, studying not only the visual aspects but statistical matter concerning them. Mrs. Coolidge also took a deep interest in the same subjects, reading with the President descriptions of the leading cities and towns and of their key industries.

Crowds Await Train.

Not only did the President see prosperity issuing from the smoking chimneys of the hundreds of industrial plants along the route, but also in the big crowds that turned out at every station where his train stopped, beginning in the early morning at Pittsburgh.

Leaden skies, crisp air and occasional snow squalls ushered in the day. Reminder of the coming Winter was seen in the turned-up collars of the men and the fur coats of the women, who appeared to get a glimpse of the President and Mrs. Coolidge at every stopping place.

All along the way big crowds awaited the train. At Pittsburgh the President and Mrs. Coolidge went out on the rear platform of their car to be cordially greeted by workmen and railroad employes. At Carnegie several hundred school children were lined up on either side of the track, while enthusiastic crowds were on hand at Wilkinsburg and East Liberty, Pa.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge had breakfast in the dining car and waved to those at the stations as their train passed through the suburbs of Pittsburgh. A large gathering at Dennison was rewarded with a close-up of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge, but nothing could induce the President to say a word. Mrs. Coolidge had a smile and a wave of the hand for the eager crowd. As the train skirted the well-known hilliside farm of Isaac Baughman at Blackrun, east of Newark, Ohio, the President's attention was called to a numher of sculptured figures standing on the lawn, representing several latter-day Presidents and groups of animals. They are the handiwork of the farmer-artist, Mr. Baughman, who during the last ten years has carved the figures out of the lims and limestone that abounds in this section. At present he is eogaged on a statue of Mr. Coolidge.

Sorority Ovation for Mrs. Coolidge.

The President's train reached Columbus just before 1 P. M. There Senator Willis of Ohio and Representative Speaks climbed aboard and extended their greetings. Three hundred railroad employes and other spectators waved adieu as the train proceeded.

The farewell was acknowledged by the President and Mrs. Coolidge, Secretary Davis and the visiting Congressmen from the rear platform.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge dined well tonight, a canvasback duck having been put aboard the train just before its departure from Washington. The duck was the gift of one of the directors of the Pennsylvania, J. Keleman, who had just returned from a shooting trip.

At Indianapolis President Coolidge was saluted as the party leader by an

MARLBOROUGH SEEKS THE AID OF THE POPE

Duke Wants His Marriage to Consuelo Vanderbilt Annulled So He Can Join Church.

DIVORCE NOW BARS WAY

And His Second Wedding to Miss Deacon of Boston Would Have to Be Regularized.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Duke of Marlborough, according to The Westminster Gazette, has applied to the Pope for reception into the Roman Catholic Church. As be was divorced there is an insuperable barrier to the Duke's admission hnt he has appealed to the Pope to annul his first marriage.

The Duke was first married in 1896 to Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt. The union lasted twenty-five years and there were two children. His second wife, the present Duchess, also was an American. She was Miss Gladys Marie Deacon, daughter of Edward Parker Deacon of Boston and one of four beautiful sisters. The wedding took place in the drawing-room of Miss Deacon's cousin in Paris and was performed by a Presbyterian minister who used the Church of England service with the word "obey" omitted.

Matter Held Up for the Present.

"Our Church does not do the sort of thing the Duke desires unless there is really just cause," said a Catholic authority who is in possession of all the details of the application. "The whole matter is held up for the present. If the marriage with the present Duchess is to be regularized it will be done privately by a priest. Before the Duke can be received into the Church the stain of his divorce will have to be wiped out and he will have to undergo a period of informal preparation and instruction. Nothing more can be done for a Duke than for a tramp."

The Duke, for some time past, has been attending St. Aloysius Catholic Church at Oxford. It is recalled that in 1922 the late Dr. Burge, Bishop of Oxford, created a stir by banning the Duke's attendance at the Oxford Diocesan Conference on the ground that not being a communicant of the Church of England he could not be a member of the conference. It was suggested at the time that the Duke, being a remarried divorcé, could not be a communicant.

The Duke of Mariborough is the ninth in succession to the famous hero of Blenheim and holds Blenheim Palace direct from the King.

Raises Many Church Problems.

The appeal of the Duke of Marlbourgh to the Pope for an annulment, if true, raises interesting questions of Church policy.

It comes under the regulations which accept civil and non-Catholic marriages as binding on both contracting parties. Thus, it was argued in Church circles last night, the marriage could not be annulled under Catholic Church law, and that it was doubtful if, as a matter of policy, the Pope would undertake to annul a marriage performed in a Protestant Church by a Protestant minister, resulting in the birth of two children, and which was accepted as binding by both sides for twenty-five years.

The marriage of the Duke and Consuelo Vanderbilt, daughter of the late William K. Vanderbilt of New York, was the pre-eminent social event in the annals of international unione. The wedding took place in St. Thomas's Church, New York, Nov. 6, 1895, and was one of the most elaborate functions ever held in this country. It is said to have cost the Vanderbilt family the then fabulous sum of $1,000,000.

It was regarded as a love match. The Duke was high in the peerage of England, and Consuelo Vanderbilt was beautiful and wealthy. For twelve years there was no outward signs of disagreement, and then a breach occurred. Efforts at reconciliation failed and eventually the Duchess began an action for divorce on the technical grounds of desertion and misconduct. The Duke did not defend the suit, and she received her degree.

The couple had two sons, the Marquis of Blandford and Lord Ivor Spencer-Churchill.

Consuelo then was married to M. Jacques Balsan of France and the Duke took Miss Gladys Deacon of Boston as his bride.

The Duke's reported intention to join

PRINCETON SEVERS TIES WITH HARVARD AFTER LONG DISCORD

ENDS HISTORIC "BIG THREE"

Lampoon Attack Not the Direct Cause of Break, but Evidence of Existing Feeling.

HARVARD POLICY A FACTOR

Princeton severed athletic relations with Harvard last night. The Board of Athletic Control of Princeton University voted unanimously against holding further competitions with the Cambridge institution.

The extreme animosity against Princeton displayed in the Princeton number of The Harvard Lampoon contributed to this action. President Lowell of Harvard and Dean Greenough of Harvard telegraphed apologies to President Hibben and Dean Gauss of Princeton. These were received yesterday, but by that time feeling had become too acute between the two institutions.

The Board of Athletic Control at Princeton met last night and concluded that an atmosphere existed which made friendly athletic competition impossible. The decision to break with Harvard was communicated to William J. Bingham, Director of Athletics at Harvard, in the following letter:

Princeton, Nov. 10, 1926.

Dear Mr. Bingham:

At a meeting of the Princeton Board of Athletic Control held this afternoon, the board voted unanimously to sever athletic relations with Harvard in all sports. We have been forced to the conviction that it is at present impossible to expect in athletic competition with Harvard that spirit of cordial good-will between the undergraduate bodies of the two universities which should characterise college sports. Unless athletic contests between colleges grow ont of and reprodnce a feeling of friendly rivalry and mutual respect, there can be no valid reason for their continuance. Competition carried on in an atmosphere of suspicion and ill-will of necessity falls short of all desirable objectives of intercollegiate sport.

Under these circumstances we prefer to discontinne competition with Harvard altogether. Should you wish, we will of course complete such engagements as may have been scheduled between us for the present academic year. We should regard these contests as inadvisable, but we will be glad to discuss the matter with you should you so desire.

I may also add that Princeton, so far as she is concerned, would never accept the implications of the athletic policy recently adopted by the Harvard Committee on Regulation of Athletic Sport and set forth in their resolutions of Oct. 18 which I received this morning.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES W. KENNEDY,
Chairman, Board of Athletic Control.

Kennedy Explains Situation.

Professor Kennedy said last night that the important cause of the break was stated in the first two paragraphs of the letter.

"We feel," he said, "that a situation has arisen where further athletic competition between the two universities would be a bad thing. Athletic competition should foster a good spirit, and in this case it is doing the opposite.

"Relations have not been severed because of the slurs printed in The Lampoon. They were not worthy of notice. Unfortunately, however, both the editorial in The Lampoon and that in The Crimson express a feeling which does exist at Harvard and which is fatal to the spirit which should surround athletic competition."

Harvard's resolution of Oct. 14, whose "implication" Princeton was unwilling to accept, sets forth a new policy which Harvard is contemplating. Under this policy Harvard would have only one fixed game on its schednle every year—its game with Yale. Ac-

RAZOR AS CRIME WEAPON EXHIBITED IN HALL TRIAL; MAID TELLS OF INTRIGUE

Developments in Hall Case; Mrs. Gibson on Stand Soon

The seventh day of the Hall-Mills trial brought these developments:

1. A razor was produced by the State as a possible weapon in the crime. Efforts to place it in the Hall home were checkmated by a former maid, who said Dr. Hall's razor was of a different size.
2. The same witness told of seeing the rector and Mrs. Mills at a tryst in a guild room in the church, and that Dr. Hall had registered anger when the former maid arrived in time to see Mrs. Mills spring from the clergyman's knee.
3. A detective told how Willie Stevens, emerging from an examination in the old investigation, asked, "Do you think they suspect me?"
4. A warrant was issued bnt held in abeyance for a New Brunswick undertaker who, according to one of yesterday's medical witnesses, said that an autopsy had been performed on the body of Mrs. Mills the day after the crime came to light. The autopsy was not performed until two weeks later.
5. Court recessed over Armistice Day and the advent of Mrs. Jane Gibson, star witness for the State, was postponed until next week.

DEFENSE SMILES AT BLADE

MRS. HALL CALM IN CRISIS

SEDAN SEEN IN THE LANE

"Do They Suspect Me?" Detective Quotes Willie Stevens—No Trial Today, Armistice Day.

Testimony that covered a wide range was written yesterday into the record of the Hall-Mills trial in Somerville, N. J. It dealt with a razor, which the State hinted was a crime weapon; it went deeply into medical evidence, and it touched upon the intrigue of the slain couple, the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills.

At the end of yesterday's session a bench warrant was issued, but held in abeyance, for John V. Hubbard, an undertaker, wanted as a State witness tomorrow when the Court resumes. Hubbard is said to be ill; but Assistant Attorney General Alexander Simpson doubts that he is too ill to testify.

The razor was introduced in casual fashion by Senator Simpson in the course of the evidence of Dr. A. L. Smith, one of the physicians who performed autopsies on the bodies. The production of the alleged weapon brought smiles to the defense lawyers and the three defendants seemed scarcely interested in it. Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall chatted as the keen-edged thing was flourished about by the prosecutor, and her accused brothers, Willie Stevens and Henry Stevens, gave their attention to the crowd in the courtroom.

"Suspect Me?" Stevens Asked.

Willie Stevens, however, had showed a burst of interest earlier. This was when George D. Totten, former Somerset County detective, testified to the interview which Stevens had with the investigators four years ago. As he emerged from that ordeal, according to Totten, Stevens remarked:

"Do you think they suspect me?"

"No," Totten said he replied. "Why should they?"

The detective said that Stevens's explanation, if one was offered, was lost in the scramble that ensued as cameramen ran forward to take their pictures. Stevens's reply presumably being muffled in his hat, which he crammed over his face.

"We have certain evidence about this," said Senator Simpson, as he picked up the black-handled straight shaving utensil and, after having it marked for identification, asked Dr. Smith whether such a weapon could have inflicted the savage cut in the throat of Mrs. Mills which the State contends was made thirty minutes after her death on Sept. 14, 1922.

The physician said that a razor could have been the instrument used. State Senator Clarence E. Case, in cross-examining the witness, sought to show that a razor would have been too flexible. He used two pencils to illustrate his point. Senator Simpson took the witness back and handed the razor to the witness. Dr. Smith gave the spectatore a thrill by passing the razor in realistic fashion across his own throat to demonstrate how it might have been done.

Not the Razor, Ex-Maid Says.

A short time later, however, much of the value of the razor in the State's case was clipped by the same witness who contributed a chapter on the rector's venturings with his choir leader. The witness was Barbara Tough, a decisive spoken Scotswoman who proclaimed her Aberdonian nativity in her speech. She was a maid in the Hall household at the time of the murder.

Senator Simpson asked her if she had ever seen a razor in Willie Stevens's room. She said that she had not seen one there, bnt that Mr. Hall had had one in the bathroom. The special prosecutor turned quickly to the razor. He asked Barbara if the razor in the Hall home had not been like the one he displayed. The former maid shot a quick look at it, and then shook her head determinedly.

"I think," she said, "that the one at home was a bit shorter than that."

The prosecutor frowned. The defense lawyers laughed. Senator Simpson demanded that the witness tell again that the Hall razor was shorter than the one he held. She did and finally the Senator had the witness measure off on the handle the exact size of the rector's razor.

The maid told of the events in the household the morning after the murder. Mrs. Hall, she said, told her that the clergyman had not come home and then Barbara suggested that he was being held for "a ransom." That idea, presumably gleaned from literature of a certain type, was rejected as ridiculous by Mrs. Hall, the witness said.

The witness denied that she had testified to certain statements before

FALL AND DOHENY ARRAIGNED IN COURT

Trial in Oil Lease Cases Set for Nov. 22 as They Plead Not Guilty of Conspiracy.

EX-SECRETARY HAS FAILED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, and Edward L. Doheny, oil magnate, were arraigned in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia this morning to plead to indictments charging them with having entered into a conspiracy to defraud the Government in the matter of the leasing of the Elk Hills oil fields in California.

Both entered pleas of not guilty, and the date of the trial, the first of the criminal proceedings involving Mr. Fall and Mr. Doheny, was set for Nov. 22. The Court ordered bail continued in the sum of $5,000 each.

Thirty-three months have elapsed since Mr. Doheny, appearing before the Senate Committee on Public Lands, admitted having loaned $100,000 to Mr. Fall, which he declared was nothing more than an effort on his part to aid an old friend in the hour of his need. The Government will contend that the loan was in fact a gift, if not a bribe, and that the lease of the Elk Hills Naval oil reserves was the price Mr. Fall paid for it.

Doheny Expected to Testify.

Mr. Doheny has expressed a desire to take the witness stand in his own defense, and his request has been submitted to his chief counsel, Frank J. Hogan of this city and Frederick R. Kellogg of New York. They have not, it is understood, decided to grant the request, bnt the impression is general that when the time comes Mr. Doheny will be called as the chief witness in his own defense. On the other hand, the impression is that Mr. Fall will not take the stand, although the question is still in abeyance, according to talk in court circles.

Mr. Fall and Mr. Doheny, escorted by their lawyers, entered the court room a few minutes before 10 o'clock this morning. Mr. Doheny seemed to be in fine health, but Mr. Fall looked

French Plan to Tax Americans' Incomes Here Disturbs Many Who Have Homes in France

PARIS, Nov. 10 (AP).—American residents in Paris are in somewhat of a flutter over the prospect of having to declare and pay income tax on all their property, not only in France but in the United States.

The Minister of Finance has codified all the legislation on the subject of taxation of foreigners, and the Government has issued a decree clearly defining their obligations.

The managers of the Paris branches of American banks, of which five are of first importance, are subject to taxes, as are also the representatives of great companies such as agricultural machinery, radiators, electricity, petroleum and lubricating oils.

Many Americans of wealth have houses or chateaux in France. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, James Hazen Hyde, Eugene Higgins, George Blumenthal, former Ambassador Wallace, Frederick Allen, Ogden Mills, Ralph Strassburger, Edward Tuck and A. Kingsley Macomber are some of the most prominent. The South Americans, A. Martinez de Hoz and S. J. Unzue, both of Argentina, are in the same category.

Besides the owners of houses, all Americans having apartments in France also come under the new law. It is estimated there are quite 3,000 residents from America affected by the ruling.

Leaps Before Husband Drives Car Into River; He Is Pulled Out and Held on Wife's Charge

Mrs. Helene Lupino, 26 years old, of 373 Hoyt Street, Brooklyn, who eloped with George Lupino, a sailor in the United States Navy, at Bordeaux, France, in 1919, was happy until a year ago. Lupino left the sea. She joined him here. He got a job as an investigator for a law firm. They became the parents of a girl, now six years old, and the future, she said, seemed secure until her husband insured her life for $10,000 twelve months ago.

The delivery of the insurance policy, she told the police of the Old Slip Station last night, started her unhappiness. First, she said, she protested because the policy was expensive and her husband answered her curtly. Next, she continued, she was worried because Lupino spent for swimming lessons money which she thought they should have put in the bank. Then she was concerned when her husband took her rowing in Sheepshead Bay and the boat capsized. Other rowers, she said, rescued her.

She still loved her husband, she went on, a month ago, while they were visiting his mother at New Haven, although, she said, he wasn't nice to her even after she had been made ill by gas which escaped mysteriously from a jet in her room. She thought nothing of these incidents last night when Lupino came home for dinner and said they were going to the opera.

"I've got the tickets and we'll go in the flivver," she said he announced jovially.

"I got ready early," she said. "We left our daughter, Josephine, at home and went across Brooklyn Bridge in our little car, but instead of turning uptown my husband drove downtown toward the river. I thought it was odd, but I didn't say anything until he turned the car deliberately toward the water and drove fast. I screamed and jumped out just as the car went overboard."

Mrs. Lupino's screams brought Patrolman Joseph Pins, who found only the tail light of the car showing in the water off South Street. He turned in a fire alerm and firemen found Lupino clinging to the car, crying that his right arm was broken. They took him to the Broad Street Hospital to be treated for the broken arm and for submersion. Later he was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where he is held on a charge of first degree assault by his wife as compalnant. Mrs. Lupino was treated for hysteria and went home.

DENVER FETES QUEEN DISCORD VANISHES

ON BOARD THE QUEEN OF RUMANIA'S TRAIN, DENVER, Col., Nov. 10.—Another rousing welcome—here on the eastern slope of the Rockies—seemed today to have drowned out the last remaining whisperings of discord on the royal train.

While Queen Marie was surveying the vista of snow-capped peaks from Lookout Mountain, near Denver, the one remaining centre of unrest on the train disappeared.

Loie Fuller, the former dancer; May Birkhead, her publicity representative, and Gabrielle Bloch, her secretary, left the Queen's train and departed for the East. They traveled in a special car provided by Colonel John H. Carroll, in command of the Queen's train, and attached to the regular Burlington train which left Denver at 1:30 P. M. They will go direct to New York and are due there on Friday night.

Every effort was made by Colonel Carroll to avoid any embarrassment to Miss Fuller and Miss Birkhead. He announced that they were going of their own free will because of engagements in New York which required Miss Fuller's presence. This explanation was in large measure accurate, for Colonel Carroll said this morning, before it was known Miss Fuller was going, that he had not the heart to carry out his earlier intention of compelling them to leave the train if they did not wish to go. The Queen, who two days ago was said to desire the departure of her old friend, was said today to be willing to have Miss Fuller remain.

Miss Fuller's party was accompanied by E. M. Westervelt, an official of the Burlington road, who is acting as host and has orders to make every possible provision for the comfort and welfare of his guests. Miss Birkhead is almost fully recovered from her recent nervous collapse.

With his one great problem settled, Colonel Carroll, who has borne the brunt of all the difficulties of the trip, excused himself from participation in the day's official ceremonies and locked himself in his room on the train for an uninterrupted rest.

Denver's Rousing Welcome.

Denver greeted the Queen, Prince Nicholas and Princess Ileana this morning when they descended from their car at the Union Station with blaring bands and a royal salute of twenty-one guns. Governor C. J. Morley welcomed them in behalf of the State and Mayor B. F. Stapleton in behalf of the city. Attended by a battalion of infantry as escort, the royal party was conducted to the huge municipal auditorium, where it was greeted by 14,000 persons, not to speak of the thousands who bordered the line of march through the city.

After these ceremonies the party drove to the home of Charles Boettcher on Caldrow Point, Lookout Mountain, for luncheon. After the luncheon a pageant was enacted by members of the Cactus Club, and the party visited the tomb of Buffalo Bill—Colonel William F. Cody.

The visit to the scout's burial place on the mountaintop was made at the request of the Queen, who as a young girl had heard many tales of his exploits from her uncle, the Grand Duke Alexis, who had Colonel Cody for his guide when he visited Colorado fifty years ago.

From the tomb the party motored to the Fitzsimmons General Hospital in Aurora, where the Queen spoke with disabled World War veterans. Then on to the memorial in Cheesman Park, where hundreds of school children gave the Queen a shrill ovation. Afterward the party visited the State Capitol, then returned to the royal suite in the Brown Palace Hotel.

After two hours of rest in seclusion, the Queen, the Prince and the Princess were guests of honor at a dinner given by the Mile High Club, whose name is based on the fact that Denver is situated 5,000 feet above the sea. Before the royal family departure they dropped in for a few minutes at the American Legion hall in the Municipal Auditorium.

Elaborate plans had been made for Prince Nicholas to ride on Denver fire apparatus, but they failed. In response to a telegram from the train telling of the Prince's desire to inspect, if not ride on, a fire truck, Fire Chief John J. Healey was prepared this morning to have a hook-and-ladder apparatus at the station when the royal party arrived.

J. B. Ayres, the Ford representative, who was put off the train at Seattle, heard of this, however, and showed the local Reception Committee a contract he had with the Rumanian Legation specifying that Lincoln cars alone should be used for transporting the party. In view of this, the truck was not sent.

Chief Healey, however, remained in touch with the royal party all afternoon, prepared to turn the fire department over to the Prince and even let him drive a truck if he liked. Bnt the Prince was unable to break from the official engagements arranged for his family.

Brief Stop at Omaha.

On Queen Marie's insistence, the train will stop for fifteen minutes tomorrow noon at Omaha, where, the Queen has been informed, 5,000 war veterans will be waiting to greet her. There will be a brief stop also at Lincoln, Neb., and probably at Council Bluffs, Iowa, across the river from Omaha. The train will then proceed to Kansas City by way of St. Joseph, Mo.

Preparations are already nnder way for the visit of Prince Nicholas and Princess Ileana to the Army-Navy football game at Chicago on Nov. 27. They will travel in a special train leaving Washington on Nov. 26, and will be accompanied by John H. Carroll Jr., a son of Colonel Carroll, and by Mrs. Stanley Washburn. While the Prince and the Princess are making this journey, their mother will be resting at Atlantic City. The family is expected to leave Washington the night of Nov. 29 for a trip South which will inclnde North Carolina and possibly Florida. Plans for the Southern trip are still formative.

Press correspondents aboard the royal train had no opportunity today to see the Queen personally in regard to the announcement yesterday of Professor Nicholas Ptresco that he would be liaison officer between the royal family and the prese and attend the Queen's press conferenees. Word came indirectly from the Queen's car, however, that she would not allow any one to hamper the freedom of discussion that has existed thus far between the press and the royal family and that the prese would be welcome in her salon as before.

What to Wear Agitates Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10 (AP).—Queen Marie's call at the City Hall for a formal visit with Mayor William E. Dever and the city fathers has been set for 5:15 P. M. on Saturday—near the borderline when afternoon dress passes out and evening wear appears. As a result she is likely to find Aldermen in business suits, Aldermen in tuxedos, Aldermen in cutaways and Aldermen in full evening dress. The City Council was unable to agree on the proper garb for the occasion, so each member was left to work out his own destiny and his own wardrobe.

The Queen's Chicago program was outlined today by a civic reception committee of 100. Charles J. Vopicka, former American representative in the Balkans and friend of the royal family, a civic committee and a delegation of Rumanian citizens will greet the Queen at the station and a cavalry escort will take her to the City Hall. At 8 o'clock she will he the gu est of the Reception Committee at a dinner, followed by a reception and a dance.

Queen Marie and other members of her party will visit Lincoln Park on Sunday and later inspect the Abraham Lincoln room at the Chicago Historical Society, this to be followed by a dinner given by Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick at her Lake Shore Drive home. From then until Wednesday noon, when the royal party departs for the East, a crowded program awaits the visitors.

Printers Would Welcome Marie.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 10 (AP).—With the assertion that "bad manners are not essential to democratic principles," J. W. Hayes, Secretary-Treasurer of International Typographical Union, announced today that Queen Marie of Rumania would be welcomed, "criticisms notwithstanding," at Typographical Terrace, headquarters of the organization, if she should accept an invitation extended by officials.

The statement came in reply to suggestions that the invitation be withdrawn in the light of an attack on Queen Marie by the Chicago Federation of Labor.

"Radicals are not justified," said Mr. Hays, "in making such attacks in the name of the American labor movement. Labor would do better to devote its energies to defeating American politicians with bad records than to insulting a gracious and charming guest at the behest of the propagan da bureau of the Third International."

Heboes Ask Queen to Luncheon.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 10 (AP).—Although they censured Queen Marie of Rumania yesterday as a "disseminator of organized propaganda for monarchy," delegates to the National Hobo Convention today invited the Queen to lunch with them during her fifteen-minute stop here tomorrow.

"We want her to visit us," said James Eads How, trustee of the National hobo organization. "Maybe we can do her a lot of good. But we consider outselves better than any Queen." The invitation does rot mean that the Queen is considered a member of the national hobo organization, although she is riding free."

There is little likelihood that the invitation can be accepted. A reception committee of prominent Omahans will take up the brief period greeting Queen Marie and her party.

May Carry Queen's Voice to King.

HASTINGS, Neb., Nov. 10 (AP).—If Queen Marie consents to make a radio address during her ten-minute stopover here tomorrow, officials of radio station KFKX will attempt to transmit the speech to King Ferdinand at Bucharest. The station, through a hook-up with an Eastern station, has been reaching Europe regularly, and radio engineers here believe there is a good chance for the King to hear the Queen's voice, sent from the centre of North America.

FEAR COUP D'ETAT IN RUMANIAN PLOTS

KING'S HEALTH IS WATCHED

Illness of Monarch Causes Anxiety Because Death Will Raise Succession Issue.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Nov. 10.—Investigations carried on in Bucharest reveal a growing nervousnese in better informed quarters because former Crown Prince Carol's return is not as certain as was sanguinely imagined when Queen Marie became reconciled to her son. The controversy is said to be developing into a struggle between former Premier Bratiano and the supporters of the former Crown Prince, which risks being ended suddenly in a coup d'état by one side or the other.

No one knows which will try it, no ne is at all sure which is more likely to succeed. Even those most confident that "Rumania is on the brink of a serious coup d'état" can offer no substantial grounds for this opinion.

While such a coup d'état must be considered as not improbable some time in Rumania, it does not at all follow that it is now imminent. Until more proofs are forthcoming such predictions as quoted above need be noted as an indication of the undercurrent of feeling rather than be accepted at face value.

Recall Secrecy of Abdication.

When substantial proofs are sought, Rumanians shrug their shoulders expreselvely and remind yon that most of the best-informed Rumanians had not the slightest suspicion of Carol's abdication a year ago until it was an accomplished fact. The Rumanians public undoubtedly now has less direct trustworthy knowledge even of ordinary Government affairs, than previously, but at the same time experience has sharpened its wits—perhaps too much.

The underlying facts are: M. Bratiano, whom the Rumanians call the uncrowned King, bosses the most powerful machine in Rumania. His strength comes not only from his personal ability, which makes him the master politician of the country, but reposes on solid financial and economic foundations.

Carol and M. Bratiano are hitter enemies personally and politically. The only serious threat to Bratiano's power and the interests it represents is the possibility of Carol becoming King. With that possibility removed, M. Bratiano's position was strengthened through control of the Regency when Carol abdicated. Restoration of Carol consequently means exposure of the Bratiano interests to a worse danger than before. There is undoubtedly a strong movement to restore Carol, which the Bratianos are stubbornly opposing and this struggle is becoming more tense.

The reason that it is becoming more tense lies partly in Queen Marie's reconciliation with Carol, which, rightly or wrongly, encourages Carol's supporters to believe that the royal family is no longer wearing hand in glove with Bratiano. The struggle takes also because of the King's poor health. The death of the King obviously would precipitate the succession question.

The King's health has long been unsatisfactory and it has not improved since Carol's abdication. This does not mean it is serious and even if serious does not mean his recovery is impossible. But recent recurrent official communiqués, first announcing a successful operation on the King, later stating he was improving—to say nothing of the persistent popular reports that he was sinking—were sufficient to keep the public reminded of the insecurity of human life at best, and of all that depends on the King's life.

In such circumstances the leaders who would be most directly affected by the vital issues involved in the question of succession are forced to consider all eventualities and he prepared now for the worst. These preparations naturally have been made in secret, consequently increasing the atmosphere of mystery. Moreover, the knowledge or fear of what the other side is doing tends to make the struggle develop into a race. That breeds the psychology of "the best defense consists of taking the offensive first," with the attendant danger that one or the other antagonist may think it advantageous to strike even while the King lives.

King's Health Is Vital Factor.

It is impossible for any hut the ringleaders to state which one of the above stages the Bratiano-Carol struggle has now reached. Public evidence of the King's health which would dissipate popular fears could remove the struggle's most dangerous possibilities, at least temporarily. So, too, would M. Bratiano and Carol reach a compromise agreement, which it is believed the royal family is trying to promote with uncertain success.

Otherwise much depends on the army. M. Bratiano generally is credited with controlling the Premier, General Averescu, who not only directly commands the machinsry of Government, including the army, but personally enjoys much popularity in and out of military circles as the national hero during the World War. If he really sides with Bratiano he gives the former Premier a decided advantage.

On the other hand, Carol has a strong following in the army. Some pretend that nearly all the generals want him back. Certainly, some of them, who openly criticise his actions as unbecoming a Prince, say they prefer him to a Bratiano regency. Many Generals who are Carol's friends have lost important posts and have been ordered to duty in distant provinces since Carol's abdication. Several officers in various services admit that though the Government has ordered the removal of Carol's picture from armories and barracks they have kept them ready at hand.

Carol further enjoys the support of the United National Peasant Party, undoubtedly the strongest single popular force in the kingdom. Indeed, this opposition party probably desires much more strongly than Carol himself to accomplish his restoration, for it feels that its only chance of gaining power lies in Carol's enthronement. They have a good reason to believe that they are in closer contact with Carol than hitherto and are as busily "preparing" as Bratiano.

Will Not Tolerate Dictatorship.

At a recent meeting of the National Peasant Party its leader, Juliu Maniu, served warning in plain and somewhat errogant terms that under no condition would they tolerate any sort of dictatorship, regardless of where it came from or who decreed it—meaning thereby to include the King.

This was considered his answer to rumors that M. Bratiano was contemplating removing Justice Busdugan from the board of three regents and substituting himself, and that the real subject of his negotiations with Premier Averescu is to prepare to use, if necessary, armed force to establish an open dictatorship and overcome the resistance such a change will be certain to arouse.

If popular sentiment were decisive Carol would oe an easy winner—hut popular feeling is not likely to count. The mass of the people is not involved in the present struggle and probably will not be. If there should be a coup d état, it will he the work of a comparative few. Even those who are now most nervous do not think there will be any bloodshed and believe the public will remain passive spectators, accepting the victory of either side.

only the shadow of the robnst man who was known so long in Washington, first as Senator from New Mexico and subsequently as Secretary of the Interior in the Cabinet of President Harding. In those days the Secretary weighed more than 190 pounds, but today it was said by one of his friends that he was under 145 pounds.

As soon as Justice Hoehling ascended the bench Mr. Hogan announced that Mr. Doheny and Mr. Fall were ready to plead to the indictment. The clerk put the question to Mr. Doheny, who answered "not guilty" in a voice that rang clearly through the room. A moment later Mr. Fell entered his plea of not guilty and the proceedings were then adjourned until Nov. 22.

The court room was packed to capacity when Mr. Fall and Mr. Doheny feced Justice Hoehling. It was the first time in history in which a former memher of the Cahinet had been arraigned, charged with a crime involving his administration of the executive department of which he had been head.

When the trial begins it is douhtful if the general public will be admitted, owing to the small seating capacity of the court room. If the crowd that sought to get into the room today—and not more than one-third of them succeeded—indicates what is coming, an auditorinm would be necessary to accommodate all those who will want to hear the trial.

The lawyers in the case will be Mr. Hogan, Mr. Kellogg, Harold Walker of New York, and Joseph J. Cotter of Washington, for Mr. Doheny, and ex-United States District Attorney Henry A. Wise of New York, Levi Cooke of Washington and Mark F. Thompson of New Mexico for Mr. Fall; Wilton J. Lambert of this city may also be counsel for Mr. Fall. For the Government the lawyers are ex-Senator Atlee Pomerene of Cleveland, Owen J. Roberts of Philadelphia and District Attorney Peyton Gordon of the District of Columhia.

The pending case has no relation whatever to the case of Harry F. Sinclair and Mr. Fall, which involves the lease of the Teapot Dome to the Sinclair interests. The criminal proceedings in that case are not expected to start until soma time in the early months of next year. A second case charging hribery is also pending against Mr. Doheny, Mr. Fall and Edward L. Doheny Jr.

enthusiastic crowd, who greeted him as the nominee for President in 1928. Mr. Coolidge, who stood on the rear platform, bowed and smiled as the cheers resounded. There were calls for a speech but the President declined.

An ovation was accorded Mrs. Coolidge by members of her sorority, Pi Beta Phi, of Butler College, who, to the nnmber of 200, gathered about the rear platform, sang songs and cheered her as she joined in the gayety. The President looked on smilingly and approvingly.

An hour later the train halted ten minutes at Terre Haute, the home of Everett Sanders, Secretary to the President, where 2,000 people cheered and welcomed the President as he and Mrs. Coolidge appeared on the rear platform with Secretary Sanders. There were frequent calls for a speech, but the President adhered to his program of not making impromptu addresses. The greeting was as much for its favorite son, Mr. Sanders, as for the President.

The President's train is the last word from the Pullman shop. His own car is a combination sleeping and observation car, equipped with baths and a phonograph. Provisions have also been made for the entertainment of the Chief Executive and his immediate party by the installation of a moving picture machine, and after the train had left Terre Haute tonight several of the newest reels were exhihited nnder the direct supervision of Jack Conely, representative of the film industry.

General Passenger Agent McCullough of the Pennsylvania Railroad system, who is stationed in Washington, is in charge of the train, showed to the President facts and figures about the improvements the railroad is making from the national capital to St. Louis.

TAFT ON PROHIBITION.

Chief Justice Denies Giving Views Since His Appointment.

Assemhlyman Louis A. Cuvillier announced yesterday that he had received a letter from Chief Justice William H. Taft in which the Chief Justice declared that he had been opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment before its adoption and that since he had become a member of the Supreme Court he had never voiced an opinion on prohibition.

The letter was in answer to a query from Assemblyman Cuvillier asking the Chief Justice if a statement made in a pamphlet recently issued by the National Temperance Society alleging that Justice Taft had declared his disapproval of modifying the prohibition laws were correct.

In the letter Justice Taft said that while he might have expressed such an opinion before he went on the bench, he was certain that he could not have done so since. He then went on to tell of his opposition to the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment and his consequent position after its adoption that since it was the law of the land it must he obeyed. He also said that the alleged quotation was unfair in that it gave the impression that he had expressed such a view since he had become a member of the Supreme Court.

Street car traffic on West Broadway was blocked for half an hour and for a time the Sixth Avenue elevated structure was menaced hy flames during a fire in a six-story loft huilding at 143 West Broadway, near Thomas Street, last night. Two alarms were sounded. Firemen, however, got the fire under control in less than a half hour and confined it to the three lower floors of the huilding.

Most of the damage was done to the ground floor, occupied by the firm of Emil Lubin, dealers in ladies' footwear.

LEOPOLD AND ASTRID MARRY IN BRUSSELS

the Archbishop of Malinee, the Bishops of the five other Belgian sees and the priests of fifteen parishes.

After the Archbishop, who walked last among the clergy, came the Queen with the Duke of Brahant, then the bride with her father, followed by the King with the bride's mother and, finally, eix witnesses and members of the suite.

As the procesion hegan to move the choir of 100 children and sixty men sang the Benedicat of DuBois. The Duke of Brabant, like his father, was in khaki. The bride was altogether charming in white, which always becomes her. She wore a beautiful Brussels lace veil and carried a large bouquet of white lilies and orchids. Her long train was carried by four pages, aleo all in white, drawn from families of the old Belgian nobility.

Archbishop Addresses Couple.

The service was conducted by the Archbishop of Malines, who made a short addrees to the young couple before the actual ceremony from the liturgy. As the bride is not a Catholic, there could be no nuptial mass.

The service lasted a little more than half an hour. At the signing of the register the witnesses for the Duke of Brabant were the Prime Minister, M. Jaspar; the Minister of Justice, M. Huymans, and the Connt of Flanders, and, for the Duchess, Prince Axel of Denmark, the Belgian Minister of Foreign Affaire, M. Vanderveive, and the Swedish Minister in Bruesels, M. Dardel.

As the hridal party passed back down the nave the choir sang Te Ergo Quaesumus and the Hallelujah Chorus. The Duke of Brabant now walked first with the new Duchess on his arm. On issuing from the door they paseed under an archway of eworde held by the Duke's former companions at the Ecole Militaire.

As the bride and bridegroom eppeared at the church door they were greeted by a roar of applauee from the waiting throng, and before entering their carriage they both stood for a minute or two while the Duchess wavsd greetings to the people with her bouquet with that same spontaneity and unaffectedness which ehe has ehown ever eince her arrival in Belgium and which has quite captivated her future subjects.

The drive to the palace was a triumphal procession the whole way, and after the arrival of the royal party the crowd stayed, shouting "Au balcon!" until the newly-married pair appeared on the balcony with members of various royal families.

At the family luncheon at the palace only members of the royal party, with the witnesses and their wives, were present, but later in the afternoon a reeeption was held, whieh more than 3,000 guests attended, thronging every apartment.

In the small ealon about forty members of the royal party assembled, and the doors were then thrown open for them to join the guests in the great drawing room. As doors spread apart the Chamberlain announced "la Duchesse de Brabant." She thereupon entered, still in her wedding dress and carrying her bouquet, the King and Queen and the rest following unannonneed.

The Duke and Duchese of Brabant left Brussels at 6 o'clock this evening by motor car for a destination officially unknown, but which the correspondent understands is a chateau in the Ardennes.

Belgium Gives Heart to Bride.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 10 (AP).—Princess Astrid of Sweden and Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium, united in marriage by a Catholic ceremony in the Cathedral of St. Gudule this morning, tonight left on their honeymoon for a destination which has been kept secret.

Fully 200,000 persons lined the magnificent streets and avenues of Brussels and gathered in so great a mass about the cathedral that many women and children were injured. Several scores were taken to hospitals or treated for their injuries in near-by drug stores.

All Belgium has given its heart to the young Princess, whose destiny but a few months ago appeared far removed from her entrance into one of the reigning houses of Europe. The fact that the match was one of love, and not for political reasons, had struck a responsive note in the hearts of the people and their enthusiasm could not be restrained.

Today's ceremony in the cathedral followed the civil wedding performed in the Swedish royal palace at Stockholm last Thureday. The religious ritee used in cases of marriage between a Catholic and a Protestant were not so elahorate as would have been the case had both been Catholic communicants.

The entire church ceremony, which began at 11:15, lasted forty minutes. When the Archbishop asked, "Do you take Leopold of Brabant for your husband?" Princess Astrid answered clearly, "Yes," while Leopold, in response to the similar question, answered in a more husky fashion.

So great was the volume of the cheering when the young couple arrived at the cathedral that it almost drowned the roar of the 21-gun saiute fired in their honor.

WALKER THANKS LEWISOHN.

He Attends Hunter College Concert, Expressing City's Gratitude.

Mayor Walker thanked Adolph Lewisohn last night for the free chamhar music concerts which are being given every Wednesday night at Hunter College.

"I came here tonight to thank Mr. Lewisohn on hehalf of the entire city for the wonderful thing he is doing in providing these concerts," said Mayor Walker. "This crowded hall is evidence that everybody in New York is not preoccupied with business to the exclusion of everything elee, hut that the city does appreciate the arts when given opportunity to enjoy them. We ought to have more."

Mr. Lewisohn expressed pleasure at being able to provide the concerts.

SENATE AS COURT SITS TEN MINUTES

Hears House Managers' Request to Drop Impeachment Trial of Judge English.

THEN MEETS AS A SENATE

Seats D. W. Stewart as Senator From Iowa and Adjourns Its Shortest Special Session.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—In the shortest special eession in its history the Senate met today for the first time eince Congress adjourned on July 3, went through the perfunctory business of organizing as a futile court of impeachment and, after a session of only ten minutes, took a recess until Dec. 13, when it will again deliherate as a court for the brief period necessary to receive a report from the House of Representatives recommending that as Judge George W. English of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Illinois had resigned his trial on charges preferred by the House should be dropped.

Vice President Dawes and fifty-three Senators appeared for this swiftest session on record. Most of them made a special trip to Washington, some from distant points, to go through the motions of conducting an impeachment trial they knew never would take place. In the circumstances this attendance was unexpectedly large for a body whose authorized strength of ninety-six has been reduced to ninety-three through vacancies.

Forty-seven Senators constituts a quorum of the present membership, and six above the number required to do business were present today. Senators who came, however, will suffer no lightening of their pocketbooks on account of railway expenses, for each of them has the right to draw a rather liberal mileage allowance.

Meets as Impeachment Court.

The Senate was called to order at 12:30 o'clock by Vice President Dawes, in pursuance of an order adopted early last Summer for its meeting todey as a court of impeachment. Although the occasion was unusual, impeachment trials having been few and far between, the galleries for spectators were only fairly well occupied. When the Senate's chaplain had offered prayer David S. Barry, sergeant-at-arms, assumed the unusual rôle of court crier and with the traditional "Hear ye, hear ye, hear ye!" proclaimed that the Senate was now sitting as a court "for the trial of articles of impeachment exhibited by the House of Representatives" against Judge English.

Then Carl Loeffler, doorkeeper of the Senate, announced the appearance of the managers on the part of the House. These were Representatives Michener of Michigan, Hersy of Maine, Summers of Texas and Tillman of Arkansas. They were really there as prosecutors, their function corresponding to that of a district attorney and his assistants in a trial court.

Representative Michener, speaking for the House managers, said Judge English had resigned from the Federal bench and his resignation had been accepted by the President. Therefore the House managers recommended that the trial be now discontinued. He added the qualification, however, that the managers wished time to present the matter to the House to obtain from it authority to drop the prosecution.

Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican floor leader, offered a resolution directing the sergeant-at-arms to notify all witnesses in the English case not to appear unless called by him.

When this was adopted without debate Senator Curtis offered another resolution providing that the Senate as a court if impeachment should adjourn until Dec. 13. As Congress will convene on Dec. 6 this will give the House a week to determine whether it shall confirm the recommendation of its managers that the trial of Judge English be abandoned. Nobody expects the House to reject the proposal.

Senator Stewart Sworn In.

Then the Senate changed its status from that of a court of impeachment to that of the Senate itself in order to hear some announcements and transact some business. The first hueiness was the swearing in of Daniel W. Stewart, elected on Nov. 2 to serve until March 4 next as the successor of the late Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa. The new Senator was escorted to the rostrum by his Democratic colleague, Senator Daniel F. Steck.

When Mr. Stewart had taken the oath Senator Steck announced the death of Senator Cummins and Senator Hale of Maine announced the death of Senator Bert M. Fernald of that State. The customary resolutions of regret and condolence on account of the deaths of Senators Cummins and Fernald were adopted, and, on motion of Senator Curtis the Senate adjourned sine die.

This meant that the Senate will assemhle as a legislative body when Congrss convenes in regular session on Dec. 6.

Few incidents, none of them striking, marked the gathering of the fifty-three Senators who attended today's proceedings. Senator Underwood of Alahama, who will retire from public life next March, was surrounded by associates, who greeted him cordially. There were cordial greetings, coupled with expressions of regret, for Senators Wadeworth of New York and Ernst of Kentucky, who were defeated for re-eleotion, and Senators Pepper of Pennsylvania and Lenroot of Wisconsin, who failed to obtain renomination in the Repuhlican primaries.

Beyond the huzs of animated conversation incident to these greetings, prior to the time Vice President Dawes called the Senate to order the scene had no outstanding feature. It was perhaps the tamest first day of a session that the old Senate Chamber ever had experienced.

Bigamist's Wives Aid Each Other.

Mrs. Marion Bond of 3,938 Fifty-eighth Street, Woodside, and Mrs. Catherine Bond of 814 Second Avenue, Manhattan, aided each other yesterday in the Supreme Court, Queens, in obtaining a divorce for the latter and an annulment for the former from John J. Bond, a higamist who is now serving a term in Elmira prison. Justice Druhan reserved decision on both actions. Bond pleaded guilty to bigamy when arrested in October, 1925.

NEW RIVER HIGHWAY IS ASSURED TO CITY

Sinking Fund Votes to Take Over 12th Av. Land to Push Elevated Motor Speedway.

PIERS IN PLAN ALSO

Whole West Side Development to Cost $25,000,000—Miller Elated by Step Forward.

CITY TAKES TITLE DEC. 1

Board of Estimate Is Expected to Approve Action Today, Winding Up Project That Started in 1916.

Two public improvements of vast importance were assured when the Sinking Fund Commission voted yesterday to vest title in behalf of the city in the waterfront property, between West Forty-seventh and West Fifty-first Streets, North River, on Dec. 1.

One of these great enterprises which, it is promised, will now go forward to completion without further delay is the construction of an elevated express highway skirting the river shore over Twelfth Avenue and extending from the entrance to the new Holland vehicular tunnel at Canal street to a connection with Riverside Drive at West Seventy-second Street.

The action by the Sinking Fund Commission at the same time paves the way for the building by the city of two of the greatest piers for the accommodation of ocean steamships that can be found anywhere in the world. When the city, within three weeks, takes title to this shorefront property under the provisions of yesterday's vote it will bring appreciably nearer to completion about $25,000,000 worth of public improvements in Manhattan Borough.

Two Projects Are Linked.

The projected express highway and the proposed new piers are dual enterprises that have become inextricably meshed. In their success Julius Miller, President of Manhattan Borough, and the Department of Docks have been equally interested. Borough President Miller has championed the express highway and the Twelfth Avenue extension plan for several years as an integral part of his scheme for traffic relief. The Dock Department has been eager to get started on what will be Piers 88 and 90, North River, both of which are to be large enough to accommodate adequately any ocean steamship now afloat.

Borough President Miller first proposed the elevated motor highway more than a year ago. Mayor Walker and the other members of the Board of Estimate agreed to adopt his plan and instructed him to proceed to acquire the necessary additional land. The express highway was projected, at an estimated cost of $13,500,000, to run from Canal to Seventy-second Street, topping the yards of the New York Central Railroad from Sixtieth to Seventy-second Street. The land between Forty-seventh and Fifty-first Streets was needed, but the Dock Department asked that waterfront property at this point be acquired at the same time, so that unnecessary additional expense might not have to be incurred.

The Board of Estimate, therefore, had withheld vesting of the title in the waterfront property until the Sinking Fund Commission could act, which it did yesterday. The Board of Estimate today, in its regular meeting, will probably place the official seal of approval on the whole transaction and will thereby clear up a situation which had come before it on Aug. 3, 1916.

Land Valued at About $2,000,000.

Sinking Fund Commission experts estimated that the value of the land involved in yesterday's action is between $900,000 and $1,000,000, but this is for the marginal way alone and does not include the inshore land needed for the Twelfth Avenue extension and the elevated express motor highway, which land will cost the city another million or so to acquire.

The Sinking Fund Commission also instructed the Corporation Counsel to institute proceedings for the condemnation of property outshore of Twelfth Avenue between West Thirty-eighth and West Fortieth Streets. This also is a necessary acquisition for the development by the city of the Hudson River waterfront. With yesterday's action, however, the municipal control of the North River waterfront south of Sixtieth Street is virtually complete except for the area between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-eighth Streets and for three or four small parcels of minor importance near Piers 17, 18 and 22.

Borough President Miller was elated over the action taken yesterday. "This," he said, "virtually removes the last difficulty in the realization of this great public improvement of New York's express traffic facilities. The express highway and the Twelfth Avenue extension will do a great deal to relieve traffic congestion in Manhattan in the north and southbound thoroughfares, which is bound to become more intense after the new Holland vehicular tunnel under the Hudson River is opened to the public next Spring. We will now create another great express boulevard along the Hudson as we have already created one in First Avenue, on the east side of the borough."

Actual construction work on the Twelfth Avenue extension may be said to be in progress. The New York Edison Company, the Consolidated Gas Company and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company are filling in several blocks to fulfill terms of real estate transactions obtained through water grants. Further fills will be made by the President of the Borough of Manhattan and probably also by the Board of Transportation from excavated subway material on the west side.

Highway Bill Approved.

A bill authorizing the construction of the express highway along the river shore was signed by Governor Smith last Spring. The necessary funds for its construction are to be raised entirely by assessments levied upon property owners in Manhattan.

The express roadway is to be sixty-five feet in width, or five feet wider than Fifth Avenue, allowing ample room for express traffic in both directions. Its length will be about four miles. A speed of thirty miles an hour or better will be permitted. It will thus be possible for automobiles to cover the distance between Seventy-second Street and Canal Street in ten minutes or less, which is considerably faster than the average speed of the elevated or subway service.

This broad, uninterrupted highway will be open to all manner of traffic. It will link together, incidentally, the piers that extend for four miles along the west side of Manhattan and will eliminate the dangerous grade crossings of the railroad tracks along the waterfront. It will, in a sense, create two wide thoroughfares for traffic, which will be carried respectively on the street level and on a tier above.

According to the Borough President's plan, the express highway will be twenty feet above the street level, affording ample clearance for surface traffic. The structure itself will be of steel, but will be covered with cement as a protection. The general design, it is said, will be simple but graceful. The sixty-five-foot width will provide accommodation for six lines of traffic, three in either direction. It is proposed to have two traffic lanes at the centre for slow moving vehicles and two lanes on either side for the faster cars.

Cross-Traffic Eliminated.

All cross-traffic will be eliminated, thus permitting an even flow of north and southbound vehicles. It is estimated that the four lanes devoted to express traffic will each accommodate about 1,000 vehicles an hour, while the slower lines of traffic will handle about 500 in the same period. The six lanes will thus provide for about 5,000 cars hourly, passing in both directions, which is more than twice the capacity of Fifth Avenue.

No street or avenue in New York at present enjoys complete freedom from cross-traffic. On Broadway, Fifth Avenue and other busy thoroughfares north and south traffic must be brought to a standstill every few minutes to permit the flow of east and west bound traffic. This will not be the case on the new elevated highway at any point, since traffic will enter and leave on the same side by an ingenious system of ramps leading upward from the street level at easy grades. These ramps will be nearly two blocks long and will emerge at the centre of the express roadway, thus eliminating crossover traffic. The ramps will be placed parallel to the main structure and will not interfere with the street-level traffic below.

The present plans call for ramps at Canal, Christopher, West Fourteenth, Twenty-third, Thirty-fourth, Forty-second and Fifty-seventh Streets. It will, therefore, be possible to leave or enter the express highway at convenient intervals.

The ramps will provide access to the important cross streets leading to docks and ferries. Cars will be able to travel from Seventy-second Street and Riverside Drive to the important docks and ferries in from five to ten minutes. The elevated roadway will also greatly reduce the congestion that now clogs West Street in the vicinity of the piers and ferry slips. Though the highway is intended primarily for fast vehicular traffic, a sidewalk three feet wide will be provided for pedestrians.

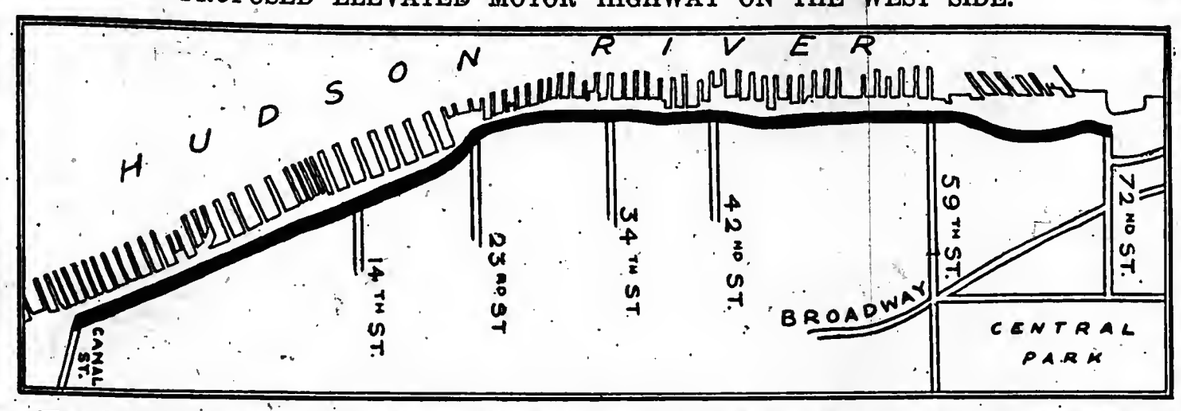
Further Extension Planned.

Plans have also been prepared for the development of the waterfront highway ultimately above Seventy-second Street, connecting the motor highway with an elevated roadway to be built above the New York Central tracks below Riverside Drive, at 129th Street. A wide margin of land is now being created along the shore below the drive. This will be made into a park.

Important changes in the Drive are under way above 155th Street. At that point a steel and granite viaduct, the plans for which were approved by the Municipal Art Commission last Tuesday, will extend the Drive northward across the 158th Street valley and will merge with Riverside Drive at 165th Street. This viaduct will be about 1,200 feet long. This section will command an uninterrupted view of the Hudson River and of the Palisades lining the Jersey shore. The property needed for this particular development has been already acquired by the city.

In its final stage of development there will be a magnificent express highway, including Riverside Drive, extending from Canal Street in lower Manhattan to the northern end of the island.

PROPOSED ELEVATED MOTOR HIGHWAY ON THE WEST SIDE.



Where the projected elevated motor highway from Seventy-second Street, Riverside Drive, to Canal Street, will run. It is planned to have ramps at Christopher, Fourteenth, Twenty-third, Thirty-fourth, Forty-second and Fifty-ninth Streets.

PRINCETON SEVERS TIES WITH HARVARD

cording to the resolution, Harvard would play Princeton some years, but not others. The reason set forward for this is that Harvard desires greater freedom in its football schedule so as to be able to play occasional games in the West. In other words, the resolution proposed to break up the Big Three's schedule as a permanent matter, but to hold casual games with Princeton.

This resolution was considered at Princeton as conveying the impression that Harvard would play Princeton when Harvard thought it convenient. It was said, however, that the indignation felt over Harvard's proposal for games with Princeton from time to time was not a cause of the break, but that the break was due to the generally bad atmosphere surrounding the relations of the two institutions.

Messages of Apology.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 9.

Dear Mr. Hibben:

You can imagine how humiliated we feel here by the action of The Lampoon. The policy of not censoring undergraduate publications is, I believe, in the long run right, but it is subject occasionally to breaches of propriety which give a false impression of the student attitude toward our friends in other institutions. This is particularly true of a comic paper. I can only tell you and all Princeton men how badly we feel for conduct that is wholly repugnant to the sentiments of Harvard men.

Yours very sincerely,

A. LAWRENCE LOWELL.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 9.

Dear Dr. Gauss:

I have just read the Princeton number of The Lampoon. It seems to me to require apology, and as Dean of Harvard College I apologize to you and to them for having shown such a lack of tact. I apologize to you as Dean of Princeton College for utterances which cannot help but have a bad effect on the relations of the two colleges.

C. M. GREENOUGH.

There was some tendency at Princeton to criticize the Harvard officials for lack of promptness in repudiating the Lampoon, but, on the other hand, it was felt that they delayed because they were reluctant to notice the Lampoon or dignify it with any official action until it was found that the relations of the two schools were endangered.

Surprise to Bingham.

Director Bingham said over the telephone from Cambridge late last night that the action of Princeton had taken him by surprise, and that he was not ready to comment on it.

"The Lampoon attack has been repudiated by President Lowell and Dean Greenough," he said. "I have not taken any action myself because I felt that it was a university matter which should be handled by the university authorities. I received a telegram from Princeton on the subject and passed it on to President Lowell, feeling that I had no authority to take any action as director of athletics."

At Princeton it was reported last night that the undergraduates generally regretted the break. They attributed the malice of The Lampoon to the series of defeats suffered by Harvard on the gridiron at the hands of Princeton and did not feel greatly annoyed to have Harvard in bad humor from this cause.

Three Previous Breaks.

Harvard and Princeton have broken off relations three times in the past. Ill-feeling between the two, based partly on old charges of unnecessary roughness in football and partly on "mutual antipathy," has smoldered between them for years.

In spite of the nation-wide prestige of the historic triangle of Yale, Harvard and Princeton, whose annual games have been classics of football, Harvard had under consideration last Summer the dropping of the Princeton game from her schedule. It was planned to substitute a Harvard-Michigan game for the Harvard-Princeton game. The matter was discussed between the Harvard athletic authorities and President Clarence C. Little of Michigan. The athletic authorities of Yale acted as a peacemaker, as they had done on previous occasions. They induced Harvard to cancel the plan to play Michigan, and the Harvard-Princeton game of 1926 took place on Saturday.

Harvard's eagerness last Summer to play Michigan was alleged to be due to the pressure of old graduates who live out West and wished to have Harvard play occasionally within easy reunion distance of the Harvard alumni of the Middle West.

Will Keep Triple Agreement.

Professor Kennedy said last night that the break with Harvard did not mean that Princeton intended to violate the triple-alliance agreement.

"Princeton still regards the code and spirit of the triple agreement as her statement of athletic policy," he said.

The leading articles of this agreement were against scouting for promising football material in the prep schools and against playing games in the West.

Princeton's game with Yale next Saturday will be the fiftieth between those colleges. Last Saturday's game was the twenty-eighth between Harvard and Princeton. Yale and Princeton held their first annual game in 1873. Harvard and Princeton had their first annual game in 1877.

Of the games between the two universities Princeton has won seventeen, Harvard has won eight and three have been ties. Since the war eight games have been played and Princeton has won five of them, Harvard one, and there have been two ties.

In 1924 Princeton rolled up a total of thirty-four points, in 1925 thirty-six points, and in the game of last Saturday scored a 12-to-0 victory over a Harvard aggregation that was judged a favorite on early season development. Princeton won Big Three championships in 1922 and 1925, while Yale swept the series in 1923. Harvard has not had a clear title to the crown since the post-war games began.

The break announced yesterday was the fourth between the two institutions. They did not play together in 1885, but resumed in 1886 and played until 1890. They broke off relations that year with mutual charges of professionalism. They resumed play in 1894. In 1897 they broke off again, Harvard charging unnecessary roughness. They resumed relations in 1910 and have played every year since that time except in the two war years.

Last week's edition of The Lampoon attacked Princeton in anecdote, poem and editorial. The following is typical of the alleged jokes:

"Are you a Princeton man?

"No, I was kicked by a horse."

The Lampoon editorial is as follows:

"This is no fitful burst of feeling; it has been growing up steadily through years and culminated this Summer in the proposal to drop Princeton from the Harvard schedule. That it was not carried out was not due to any change of heart on the part of the Harvard undergraduates. They would still like to see Princeton dropped, but they would like even more to see her licked. No doubt Princeton's feelings are the same. And as this may be the last opportunity, it is safe to predict that today's contest will be something to tell the children about. Lampy looks forward to no chivalrous exhibition of sportsmanship; it will be a glorious free-for-all masquerading under the name of football. Once more the old eye-gonging, bottle-heaving days will return and the Jester proposes to make the most of them. The mere mention of it brings a pleasant glow to his leathery old hide. * * * The Princeton brawl comes but once a year; it may never come again."

NEWS SURPRISES HARVARD.

Students Pleased, but Official Comment Is Withheld.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10.—The news of a break in athletics between Harvard and Princeton came as a complete surprise to all in authority at Harvard here tonight. Director of Athletics William J. Bingham, President Lowell of the university, Head Coach Arnold Horween, Graduate Treasurer Frederick W. Moore and the entire student body were completely surprised by the news.

William K. Bingham, Director of Athletics, when notified of the break at his home late tonight, said that as yet he had received no official notification from Princeton.

"The news comes as a complete surprise to me," said Director Bingham, "and I can, at present, make no official statement. I have, as yet, received no official communication of any kind from Princeton."

President Lowell refused to make any statement. Students at Harvard, when informed of the break, were less reticent.

"Excellent," said one. "It should have been done sooner."

Others were of the opinion that it would have been much better had the break come after Harvard had defeated Princeton at football. Another, and perhaps the most sane undergraduate opinion, was that the existing situation between the two colleges was "impossible" and that since it could not be remedied, it were best that relations be broken off altogether.

Director Bingham will make an official statement as soon as he receives official news of the break from Princeton authorities.

The following editorial appears in Thursday's issue of The Harvard Crimson:

"The Crimson commends Princeton for the stand taken by those in charge of Princeton athletics policy, as authentically stated in this morning's paper, for there is reflected in that stand a certain praiseworthy independence of spirit at all times commendable to them who truly respect the dignity of venerable and honorable institutions of American education.

"If that stand is the result of the usual nebulous policies of the Harvard Athletic Association, in this instance apparently more than maladroit, then not alone is the stand commendable, it is reasonable. If, however, this traces more directly to the unpleasant episodes of the last week-end, the Crimson, while admiring Princeton's maintenance of a decent and convincing self-respect, feels that the decision to break off relations with Harvard is too abrupt. The Crimson believes that such unpleasant incidents as those mentioned can be made unique in the history of Princeton—Harvard intercourse by means such as those suggested in yesterday's editorial; formal negotiation by proper representatives of the two undergraduate bodies. Nothing can do more to hurt amateur athletics in general and football in particular than the fact that two ancient and great American universities can not enjoy honorable and pleasant athletic relations. If Harvard, through her Athletic Association, is at fault, the Crimson can only deplore the actions of that association."

YALE REGRETS RUPTURE.

Daily News Criticizes Lampoon for Attack on Princeton.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—News of Princeton's act in breaking off athletic relations with Harvard was received at Yale with deepest regret. Yale's action in bringing Harvard and Princeton representatives together here this Fall after Harvard had begun negotiations with Michigan, intending to supplant Princeton, patched up the triple agreement, and today the Yale Daily News editorially criticized the Harvard Lampoon for its recent articles, and said the Harvard Crimson had shown a supercilious attitude to both Yale and Princeton this Fall.

Tonight Dean Clarence W. Mendell, for five years Chairman of Yale's Athletic Board of Control, said:

"It is a matter of the deepest regret that our triple agreement should go by the board. It was the best thing that we had for upholding American sport. That it should be broken in this way is nothing short of a tragedy."

"Previous to the Crimson's attempt to 'get at the root of the matter' and endeavor to 'eradicate what is at best puerile and futile,' there was but one opinion of the whole feud to give. Harvard was supercilious and Princeton was offended. It appeared that Harvard editors this year bore a peculiar malice toward their traditional friends and rivals of both Princeton and Yale. The Crimson editorial persiflage offended the Yale interests in the new chapel situation here, and the Lampoon's obnoxious parody of Princeton and the unhealthy relations which it pictured as existing between Harvard and Princeton combined to give the outsider an unkind opinion of Harvard.

"Either the editors of the Harvard papers were unconscious of the ease with which cordial relations may be strained or they were anxious to sever the ties which have meant much to their forebears through ages past. If the editors of the Lampoon who so proudly hurl their invective from the Cambridge printing presses are typical of the attitude which prevails along the Charles, a sad future lies in the offing for the three great sister universities. It means the dissolution of common interests and ideals and the culmination of the traditional athletic rivalry.

"In the circumstance, which seemed more imminent before the Crimson evidenced its regret for the 'teacup war,' Harvard's isolation would bring her no health or fortune. She would some day have to return to the fight for a place in the sun. An old phrase converted to modern usage might be heard referring to that aged institution:

"'The glory that was Harvard.'"

Professor George H. Nettleton, Chairman of the Yale Athletic Board of Control, tonight said:

"Yale will regret deeply any interruption of athletic relations that have been habitual under the triple agreement. Yale's own immediate athletic relations, both with Harvard and with Princeton, have never been closer or more cordial than at present, and no change in these relations has at any time been considered by the Yale Athletic Board of Control."

When informed that Professor Kennedy of Princeton had said that certain resolutions adopted last month at a meeting at the home of Professor Nettleton, when delegates from Harvard, Yale and Princeton voted to go ahead with the triple agreement, had never been endorsed by Princeton, Professor Nettleton said he thought this statement must have arisen from some misunderstanding, as no resolutions had been adopted except those which later were announced and were to the effect that the agreement should be continued. Professor Nettleton was inclined to think Professor Kennedy was referring to the resolution adopted by Harvard's Athletic Board, but not brought before the meeting in this city.

DOMINIONS APPROVE DOWNING STREET PLANS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Premier Baldwin's references in his Guildhall speech last night to the good results of the Imperial Conference were explained semi-officially today as applying particularly to the political side of its deliberations. Doubts were, of course, felt, before the conference opened, about General Hertzog's avowed intention of obtaining an explicit declaration of equality and the independence of the self-governing parts of the Empire. It has been found impossible to evolve anything like a written formula, though in the discussions carried on, particularly between Mackenzie-King of Canada, Hertzog and Lord Birkenhead and Colonel Amery of Great Britain, every attempt was made to do so. The written formulas, therefore, have been ruled out by common consent.

The report of the conference will be limited to an attempt to state the existing position and to remove certain anachronisms. It will not in any sense represent a new departure in imperial relations.

As to the foreign policy and the signing of the Locarno Treaty by the British Government, a full discussion is said to have led to a full understanding and to approval of the policy pursued in the past, and the line to be taken in the event of trouble with particular countries.

The Economic Committee of the Imperial Conference today began consideration of the question of exhibiting British films throughout the Empire. It has before it a memorandum from the Federation of British Industries, recommending the establishment of a central marketing organization to encourage the sale of British films throughout the Empire. The Federation estimates that a capital of about $1,000,000 would establish such a company, which could handle forty feature films the first year and sixty the second year.

This company would purchase the Dominion rights of the British Empire-made pictures on the basis of sharing the gross earnings equally between the producer and the organization and giving the producer an agreed sum in advance.

It would be extremely difficult, however, to obtain money in the ordinary channels, says the memorandum, unless protective legislation were introduced for the British and leading Dominion markets.

At a general meeting of the Stoll Picture Productions today the shareholders stated:

"American films are slimy and horrible. The habits and life of the American film people are appalling and you cannot expect such a degraded class to produce clean work."

Either Way Suits Us

WHEN making an investment people go about it in different ways. Some have found it better to select a responsible firm in whose integrity and investment judgment they have implicit confidence. They buy what it recommends. Others prefer to make their own analysis, study all the factors which might affect the value of a proposed investment and form their own personal judgment before they invest.

This Company serves both kinds of investors. Everything there is to be known about our First Mortgages and the security behind them is yours for the asking. We make it easy for you to judge exactly what you are buying. To those who prefer to invest on authoritative recommendation, we do more than recommend. We guarantee every First Mortgage we sell with our entire resources. We have been doing it for years. Whatbetterevidence of our judgment and conviction?

CITY PAYS TRIBUTES TO WAR DEAD TODAY

Business and Traffic to Halt as Soldiers Are Honored by Two-Minute Silence.

CEREMONY IN CENTRAL PARK

CHURCH SERVICES PLANNED

Patriotic Organizations Will Mark Occasion Widely, as Will Schools —Many Dinners and Dances.

New York will pay tribute to its war dead today in a series of Armistice Day exercises which will begin early this morning and conclude late at night. The tributes will vary from the individual one of displaying service flags in the windows of homes to the ceremonies this afternoon at the Mall in Central Park, when a war memorial to city employes who died in their country's service will be dedicated.

At 11 o'clock the entire city will pause for two minutes of prayer and remembrance. Mayor Walker in a proclamation dated Oct. 25 asked that all business be suspended and that all traffic in the city be stopped for this time. The Interborough and B. M. T. Companies have announced that they would suspend operation not only of trains but also of power houses and substations at that time.

Business Halts for Two Minutes.

All business activities on the exchanges and in banks in the city will be suspended for the two-minute period. Otherwise the markets of the city will do business as usual.

The exercises will have been commenced in this city, however, even prior to the two-minute silence. The Building Trades Council will hold its annual commemorative meeting in its hall at 67-69 Lexington Avenue, beginning at 10:30 A. M. Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, named as new Chief of Staff of the army, will address this meeting at 11:25 A. M.

The League of Remembrance has arranged a program which will be broadcast from WEAF. At 10:36 A. M. Percy S. Bullen, Honorary Secretary of the League, will speak, after which Frances Lawson Reade will sing "Land of Hope and Glory." William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce and Labor in President Wilson's Cabinet, will speak for ten minutes, and will be followed by Redferne Hollinshead, who will sing. At 10:50 there will be a bugle call to silence, and assembly will be sounded by Captain Chester Matheson, solo cornetist of the Salvation Army. Taps will be sounded at 11:02.

Memorial Services Planned.

Memorial services for men of the 107th United States Infantry and former members of the Seventh Regiment will be held at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine at 10 A. M. under the auspices of the 107th Infantry Post of the American Legion. Bishop William T. Manning and Bishop Herbert Shipman will conduct the services.

Requiems for soldiers, sailors, marines and all others who lost their lives in the World War will be held at 7:30 o'clock and at 10 o'clock this morning at the Little Church Around the Corner at 1 East Twenty-ninth Street.

At the exercises in the public schools "The Roll Call," composed by S. Walter Krebs, and officially adopted by the New York American Legion as an Armistice Day bugle call, will be sounded. Dr. Alexander Lyons, rabbi of the Eighth Avenue Temple, Brooklyn, will speak on "American Ability and Responsibility" at Wadleigh High School.

The students, faculty and alumni of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, will hold special exercises in Pratt Institute Park. After the two-minute silence has been observed there will be the unveiling of a memorial flagstaff. The inscription on the bronze base on the flagstaff reads: "To Commemorate the Services of the Men and Women of Pratt Institute in the World War, 1914-1918." The flagstaff is a monumental work designed and modeled by Willard Paddock. It will be dedicated by the trustees of the institute.

Canadian Club Luncheon.

The Canadian Club of New York will celebrate Armistice Day with a luncheon at which General C. H. Mitchell of Canada and General Robert L. Bullard will be guests of honor. Sir Harry Armstrong, British Consul General for New York, will be toastmaster.

The British Great War Veterans of America will hold their sixth annual ball at the Plaza tonight. The feature of the evening will be the massing of the colors at midnight following an elaborate military pageant. The proceeds from the ball will be used in relief work for veterans. Both the Canadian Club's luncheon and the ceremonies at the ball will be broadcast by WOR.

A memorial flagpole presented to the City of New York by Mrs. Charles Augustine Robinson, National Flag Lady of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, in commemoration of the heroism and sacrifices of the city employes who fought in the various wars of the United States, will be dedicated at the Mall in Central Park at 3 o'clock this afternoon. This will be the chief public event of the day.

Parade in Fifth Avenue.

The annual Armistice Day parade will precede the exercises at the Mall. The parade will start at 2 o'clock from Twenty-sixth Street and Fifth Avenue and proceed up the Avenue to Sixtieth Street and then to the Mall, where seats have been provided for the veteran organizations marching in the parade. Brig. Gen. George Albert Wingate will be Grand Marshal of the parade and Major Joseph Cacavajo will be General Wingate's Chief of Staff.

Mayor Walker will accept the flagpole for the city after the presentation speech by Mrs. Robinson. Major Gen. Summerall will unveil the monument upon which the flagpole rests and will speak. The other speakers are Admiral Charles P. Plunkett and Theodore Stitt, National Commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A cablegram from Marshal Foch, Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies in the World War, will be read at the public services to be held in the Town Hall at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon by the American Good Will Foundation. Dr. Henry Clay Risner, a friend of Marshal Foch's, who visited him in Paris a fortnight ago and arranged then for the sending of the cablegram, will speak on "The Meaning of Armistice as an International Factor."

The Women's Peace Society, 20 Vesey Street, under the Chairmanship of Annie E. Gray, Executive Secretary, will hold a series of meetings on Armistice Day. What is advertised as "A Mass Meeting of International Youth in Memory of 10,000,000 Martyrs to Moloch, 1914-1926" will be held at the Community Church House, 12 Park Avenue, from 4 to 6 P. M.

Many Dinners and Dances.

There will be a large number of dinners and dinner-dances by patriotic organizations tonight. General Summerall will be a speaker at the dinner-dance of the Military Order of the World War at the Hotel Astor. The proceeds are to be devoted to relief work for needy and disabled veterans.

The Federation of French Veterans of the Great War will give a ball at 8:30 P. M. at the Bronx Lyceum. This will be under the patronage of Maxime Mongrendre, the French Consul General here, and all of the French societies in New York will take part. During the day the French veterans will march in the parade and participate in the Central Park exercises.

The Aviators' Post of the Legion will hold their annual dinner at the Astor. This is expected to be preceded by an "air parade" of a score of fighting planes, piloted by regular and reserve officers, who will fly over Broadway. Among the speakers expected at this dinner are former General Mitchell, Colonel Benjamin Foulois, Major Tom Lamphier and Colonel Paul Henderson.

The second annual dinner and ball of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities will be held at the Astor. Two thousand persons, each of whom has paid $50 for his ticket, will be present. The proceeds go directly for the benefit of the charities.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 403 will hold a ball at the Waldorf. General Summerall will round out a busy day by attending this function for a short time and also reviewing the colors of the Veterans of Foreign Wars (Brooklyn Council) at the Knights of Columbus Building, 1 Prospect Park West, Brooklyn.

Ninety Gold Star mothers who met yesterday in the Downtown Chamber of Commerce Building, 150 Delancey Street, adopted a resolution asking Congress to make "Wilson Day" the name of Armistice Day.

Two bronze statues of heroic size, by Sally James Farnam, representing a soldier and a sailor of the American Expeditionary Force in the World War, were placed on exhibition yesterday at the southern end of the Mall in Central Park under the auspices of the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, in commemoration of Armistice Day. The figures, which are to form a part of the War Memorial of the village of Fultonville, Montgomery County, N. Y., provided for by the will of the late John H. Starin, will remain on view until Monday. The exhibition was arranged by Dr. George F. Kunz, President of the society, with the cooperation of Park Commissioner Francis D. Gallatin.

Long Island City Service.

The unveiling of a granite war memorial to the service men of Long Island City will be the principal feature of the Armistice Day celebration in Queens. The memorial has been erected in Astoria Park. The memorial, which cost $30,000 and was erected through the efforts of the Long Island City War Memorial League, will be accepted for the city by George Ryan, President of the Board of Education, who will represent Mayor Walker.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, Nov. 10.—Armistice Day will be observed here with two celebrations, one at 11 A. M. and the other at 8 P. M. A flag, presented by the Westchester County Chamber of Commerce, will be unfurled on the flagstaff in front of the City Hall.

Four bronze tablets, one bearing the names of the White Plains men who died in service in the World War and the others bearing the names of all who served in the war, which have been placed in the City Hall, will be dedicated tomorrow night. Mayor John C. McLaughlin and Lee Parsons Davis, former District Attorney of Westchester County, will speak.

CHURCH SERVICES TODAY.

Many Will Observe Armistice Day —Carillon Program Marks Occasion.

Many churches will hold Armistice Day services today or this evening.

A service will be held at noon in Trinity Episcopal Church, Broadway at the head of Wall Street. A bugler will sound the "church call" and "taps." The preacher will be the Rev. Dr. Roland Cotton Smith, formerly a rector in Washington.

The Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, and George W. Wickersham will speak this evening in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church under the auspices of the Greater New York Federation of Churches.

A rally under the auspices of the Brooklyn-Nassau Presbytery will be held this evening in the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, at South Oxford Street, Brooklyn.

There will be two services this morning under the auspices of the Gold Star Association. The first will be a requiem mass at 10 o'clock in the Church of the Paulist Fathers, Columbus Avenue and Sixtieth Street, at which the celebrant will be the Rev. Father Hoye, who was a chaplain in France. The second will be holy communion at 11 o'clock in St. Thomas's Episcopal Church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street.

The Sisterhood of the West End Synagogue, 160 West Eighty-second Street, will hold an Armistice Day celebration there this evening. A service also will be held this noon in the Brick Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street.

The West Side Y. M. C. A., Fifty-seventh Street, just west of Eighth Avenue, will hold a service this evening. There will be an address on "The Unknown Soldier" by Julius Hyman, speaker for the National Security League and author of the air pilgrimage idea.

There was an armistice program last evening beginning at 7 o'clock on the Rockefeller Memorial Carillon in the Park Avenue Baptist Church, at Sixty-fourth Street. The national anthems of the five leading allied nations were played.

CAPITAL WILL HONOR NATION'S WAR DEAD

Armistice Day Program Includes Services at Tombs of Wilson and Unknown Soldier.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Celebrating of Armistice Day here tomorrow will include memorial services at the tomb of Woodrow Wilson, America's war-time President, in Bethlehem Chapel of the National Cathedral.

A minute of silence will be observed at 11 o'clock at military and naval posts and in Government departments. A military parade will start at 10 A. M. and on the stroke of 11 the marching columns will halt and remain "at rest" for one minute. Chaplains of each organization will then offer suitable prayer.

The American Legion in the District of Columbia will hold its services in a local theatre at noon, followed by a special service in the afternoon at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, in Arlington National Cemetery. Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, who was a battalion commander overseas during the war, will be the principal speaker.

The services in memory of President Wilson will be held at the Bethlehem Chapel at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Bishop Freeman of Washington, the Rev. Dr. James H. Taylor, President Wilson's pastor, and Canon De Vries of the Cathedral staff will officiate.

The committee in charge of the chapel service has conducted Armistice Day services in honor of Woodrow Wilson since 1921. Before the President's death it was the custom for his followers to make pilgrimages to his home in S Street, where he always greeted them from his balcony. A floral tribute of olive branches and calla lilies, symbolic of the dominating ideal of Mr. Wilson's life—world peace—will be placed in his tomb by Gordon Grayson, young son of Rear Admiral Carey T. Grayson, who was one of the President's favorites during his days in the White House.

A statue of the late Colonel Charles D. Young, colored, will be unveiled at Arlington Cemetery by the Walker Post of the American Legion, colored. Colonel Young was American military attaché at Monrovia, Liberia, where he died in 1922.

Two minutes' silence on Armistice Day "to honor the dead and to emphasize the duty of the living to promote the spirit of peace, understanding, justice and good-will between nations," is the request of the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of Churches issued to Christians of America today.

FOCH BIDS VETERANS TO REMAIN UNITED

Marshal Sends Armistice Day Message to Millions Who Fought Under Him.

TELLS OF HIS LEADERSHIP

Recalls Having Flattered Haig and Pershing—Always Counseled Rather Than Commended.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Beflagged and in better spirits than for many years, Paris is getting ready tonight to celebrate the eighth anniversary of Armistice Day.

The old, passionate discussions of reparations and security which were the aftermath of the armistice have died down somewhat or been settled. Between France and her allies there is no longer the friction that there was even some months ago, for every one is beginning to understand that the debt question will sooner or later get settled amicably enough.

Germany does not loom quite so large a menace on the French horizon as she once did, and there is in the air a feeling of quiet satisfaction about the way the Italian affair has been ended.

In the past three months France has climbed gallantly back from the disastrous depths to which she had fallen, and, though perhaps at this armistice celebration a bottle of champagne and paté de foies gras will cost far more than ever before in real gold value, there is more content and less hysteria in the French outlook than there has been almost since the great day itself.

Tomorrow there will be celebrations and parades around the Arc de Triomphe and the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Along the Champs Elysées will be carried flags of 250 regiments which have been disbanded and in banks and shops the day will be kept a public holiday.

Foch to Participate Quietly.

At these ceremonies, taking a quiet part, will be Marshal Foch. More than any one else's it is his day. It was his command which made it possible and his will which bent the Germans to that fateful signature. In these eight years he has not changed. He has still no appearance of an old man. With that quick directness of speech and manner which have so often in the past disconcerted those who did not agree with him and rallied to him those who were not sure of their own minds, he gave this message yesterday to all those millions who fought under his command:

"Tell them to remain united and try to understand each other."

Then immediately to that he added: "But I have not any doubt they will. Those who fought together always get along well because they always understand. That is what I told General Pershing when he came to see me in Brittany to tell me about the visit of the American Legionaires next year.

"'Let us hope there won't be any incidents,' Pershing said, but I told him there never were any incidents between old soldiers.

"'There will be 30,000,' he warned me; '30,000 in Paris.'

"'Well, in that case,' I said, 'we had better cut short their Paris leave and keep them most of the time out in the country on the battlefields where the air is healthful.'

"To that Pershing agreed, laughing. We always got together quickly, he and I."

Reveals Secret of His Powers.

And from that text the Marshal began to give for the first time something of the insight into the secret of his great command. Only eight years ago he had more men of different nationalities under his orders than any one ever had in the history of the world, and a chance phrase on the extent of this command drew this reflection:

"You know, I never commanded in the way people imagine. What I did was to bring those about me to accept my opinions, which is quite a different thing from commanding."

To show how he worked Marshal Foch told how on July 24, 1918, he summoned Haig, Petain and Pershing to his headquarters and outlined to them his plan for the great offensive. The English were to attack first, then the French and then the Americans.

Haig had his word to say. His army was all shot to pieces; how could it advance? Petain spoke up to say that his men, too, were worn out. Pershing pleaded that his men were untrained and untried. "How can I throw them into a big offensive?"

Preferred Role of Counselor.

"I could have given a formal order," said Marshal Foch, "but that isn't how I work. People obey badly when they obey against their will. I always preferred the rôle of counselor to that of chief. I preferred to convince every one that my plan was possible, realizable, and to give every one a desire to carry it through.

"To Haig I gave the whole French army for him to command, thus flattering and stimulating him. I flattered Pershing, too, by telling him how his young American army was full of vigor and force and panting to cover itself with glory. To the Belgians I promised English and French troops under the command of King Albert and I loaned General Degoutte to help him.

"In that way I finally won every one over through his pride or by logic or by persuasion or by simply putting him face to face with responsibilities. In the end they all came right with me and, as you know, everything worked out enormously better than if I had simply imposed my authority."

Marshal Foch paused to light his pipe and then began again, this time to tell the history of Yser in 1914 when, though he had no authority over the British or Belgians, he got them to do as he said by the same methods of persuasion, by giving advice instead of orders.

"To command is nothing," was his verdict as his pipe finally was smoked out. He laid it down, saying:

"What is necessary always is to get a good understanding with those with whom one has to deal, to understand them and get them to understand you. That is the whole secret, not only of successful command but of living."

BRITISH TO REVERE DEAD.

King and Commoner Will Join in Exercises at Cenotaph.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—On the stroke of 11 o'clock tomorrow King and commoner, grouped around the Cenotaph in Whitehall, will fall into a reverent two-minute silence in memory of the British soldiers who fell in the Great War.

The annual Armistice Day ceremonies will be marked by the presence this year of the Prime Ministers from Great Britain's dominions assembled for the Imperial Conference. They will gather with the King, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York and the British Ministry at the Cenotaph, where the central memorial service will be held. The Queen, with the other ladies of the royal family, will watch the ceremony from the windows of the Home Office near by.

The two-minute silence in London this year will be more complete than ever before. Not even movie cameras are permitted to turn while it is being observed.

STORM KING ROAD BLOCKED.

Rock Slide Fills Highway Between West Point and Cornwall.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Nov. 10 (AP).—A slide of rock and boulders has blocked the Storm King Highway between West Point and Cornwall. Loosened by last night's rain, the rock filled the roadway cut into the mountainside. Some of the boulders are as large as automobiles.

Highway engineers hope to clear the road with air drills and blasts before tomorrow night.

POLAND TO OBSERVE DUAL ANNIVERSARY

DICTATOR TO REVIEW ARMY

Troops of All Arms Converge on Warsaw for Imposing Spectacle Today.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WARSAW, Nov. 10.—From dawn this morning Warsaw, in the midst of a week of fêtes, began to witness an imposing military spectacle. Thirty thousand troops at least and more than 50,000 if transport proves adequate, will be assembled here before daybreak tomorrow, when the day will be given over to a combined celebration of Armistice Day, Poland's first day of actual independence, and, above all, the anniversary of Marshal Pilsudski's triumphal return from the prison of Magdeburg, Germany, and his assumption of the office of Chief of State.

Residents were routed from their beds before 6 o'clock by the shrill call of bugles everywhere, the roar of armored cars, the rumbling of tanks, the clatter of cavalry, the steady tramp of infantry and the blare of military bands. For hours units of Warsaw's surrounding garrisons poured through the streets in rehearsal for tomorrow's national review. Late tonight troops were still arriving, their brown ranks lighted by torches, bringing thousands of spectators to the sidewalks and congesting traffic throughout the city.

Pilsudski to Review Army.

Tomorrow in the great square formerly occupied by the Russian cathedral, demolished as a sign of the end of tyranny, the troops will be reviewed by Marshal Pilsudski astride the war-charger he rode when as chief of the original Polish Legion in 1914 he led his followers, gathered while he was an officer in the Austrian Army, against Prussia, for which exploit he was imprisoned in Germany.

Pilsudski was released from Magdeburg Prison Nov. 10, 1918, and arrived in Warsaw the following morning, whereupon the German-created group of Governors of the temporary regency abdicated in his favor and he triumphantly entered the Belvedere Palace as Chief of the State—his first step toward the absolute dictatorship he now holds. The same night a group of ununiformed youngsters began demanding arms from Germans in the cafes and restaurants and before morning sufficient arms had been collected to establish the nucleus of the first regular Polish Army. From then on, during the revolution in Germany, arms were gathered in increasing quantities, sometimes peaceably, sometimes with bloodshed, and Pilsudski soon possessed a military force which made him the foremost figure in Poland.

Tomorrow will be the first public occasion on which he has appeared at the head of the troops since the May revolution, largely because of Communist threats of assassination, for which reason he failed to appear recently at the salute of the Warsaw garrison on the anniversary of the victory over the Bolsheviki at the gates of the capital in 1920.

Warsaw already has been in festive mood since Sunday, as 12,000 students of the university have been making a colorful display for students' week, during which an immense lottery has been conducted, producing nearly 1,000,000 zloty for poor students who would be unable otherwise to continue their courses.

Saturday and Sunday will be devoted to a celebration of the unveiling of a monument to Chopin, features of which will be a "Diplomatic Night" at the National Opera, a reception by the President at the Zamek Palace and masses in all the leading churches.

Political Fireworks Impending.

The week also will be marked by political fireworks on Saturday, when the Sejm, which is engaged in a bitter battle with Marshal Pilsudski, meets and is scheduled to open a last-ditch offensive against the dictator before taking up budget matters. The Socialists at a meeting tonight declared themselves thoroughly opposed to their original leader, who has turned them down flatly, and intend to ask Minister Moroczewski either to resign from the Government or the party.

When Pilsudski as Chancellor gave M. Moroczewski the Public Works portfolio he made plain that he was naming his as a friend and not as a Socialist. This action, followed by the Marshal's meeting with the Monarchists and receiving an invitation to assume the crown, broke the Socialists' hearts after their many overtures to keep in good favor at any cost, and they have sadly decided to become the Opposition, which is now nearly unanimous in the Sejm Senate. This, however, seems to be of not the slightest concern to Pilsudski.

The editors of most of the Warsaw newspapers at a meeting tonight demanded that the Government rescind Monday's decree providing summary punishment without trial for the oral or printed circulation of news rumors displeasing to any Government official. Vice Chancellor Bartel let it be known tonight that the decree would not be repealed, but would be applied only in extreme cases.

NEW GREEK CHAMBER MAY SOON DISSOLVE

Republicans Hold Lead, but No Progress Is Made in Plan to Form Coalition Ministry.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Nov. 10.—Today's returns for Sunday's elections for the Chamber, although not final, reduce the Repnhlican Party's strength to 152 seats, distributed among the Liberal Unionists, Republican Unionists and Independent Republicans.

The Opposition parties now have 124, divided among the Royalist Popular, Metaxists, and Independent Anti-Venizelists. The Communists have eight seats and the Independent Agrarians two.

Some unimportant changes may be effected in these lists on the receipt of the few remaining returns and after the process of counting the second and third preferences.

The difficulty of forming a Cabinet is still acknowledged on both sides, as no party has a working majority. The formation of a coalition ministry would be welcomed by puhlic opinion, but this presents many difficulties.

In some Government circles the possihility of an early dissolution of the new Chamber is already discussed and it is suggested that a different electoral system will have to be introduced to provide the resultant Government with a working majority. In that case a system similar to Yugoslavia's might be adopted in order to avoid the disintegration of the Republican parties dnring the new election.

M. Michalakopoulos believes that the new Chamber will be able to vote its own dissolution under the revisionary rights which it will have during its first fortnight.

These possibilities are, however, still in the preliminary stage and it is premature to forecast the eventual developments.

ATHENS, Nov. 10 (AP).—Premier Kondylis today gave out what he declared to be absolutely correct figures in the recent Parliamentary elections. He announced that 693,823 voters were in favor of the maintenance of the present régime, as compared with 186,304 for the Monarchist Party. This, he said, was a striking victory for the Repnblicans.

The Liberal and Republican unions, which had claimed a majority of more than 20 votes in the Parliament over all other parties, said the Premier, could form a Government by themselves, if a coalition Government, which is desirahle for the solution of the difficult problems facing the country, should for the moment become impossihle.

SOVIET TO PICK NEW ENVOYS

Will Not Return Koff and Kerakhen to Tokio and Peking.

MOSCOW, Nov. 10.—Although no decision has been announced about the posts of Soviet Ambassadors to Japan and China, THE NEW YORK TIMES is informed that it is quite unlikely that either Kopp or Karakhan will return to Tokio and Peking respectively.

There is every probahility of the nomination of Kamenef to Tokio—though whether the Japanese Government would find him persona grata is considered douhtful in some quarters.

For China the names of Sokolnikof and Smilgi, also certain members of the Communist Party Opposition are prominently mentioned.

RIGHTS OF STATES ASSERTED IN RUSSIA

BUT MOSCOW PLAN WINS

Appointment of State Ministers of Justice and Attorneys Now Subject to Approval.

By WALTER DURANTY.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Nov. 10.—The problem of adjustment of State and Federal rights, which played such a rôle in American history, already has begun to agitate the Russian Federation.

At a session of the Central Executive Committee of the Russian Federated Republics—which include the whole country save the Ukraine, Caucasus, White Russia and Central Asia, themselves federated members of the Soviet Union on an equality with the Russian Federation—a regular storm of protest was roused over a proposal of the Federal Ministry of Justice to reorganize the legal system of the autonomous republics, or States, as they would be called in America.

Federal Prosecuting Attorney Krilenko, in introducing the project, declared that from 40 to 50 per cent. of the decisions of the central State courts were erroneous and regularly being squashed by the Federal Court of Appeals. The local people's courts in the States cited showed a still worse picture—90 per cent. of incorrect decisions. To remedy this he demanded:

1. That all Ministers of Justice and prosecuting attorneys in the States be appointed or at any rate be approved by the Federal Ministry of Justice.

2. That all State courts from the bottom to the top be brought more directly under Federal control.

3. That no delays or difficulties be allowed to interfere, as now is often the case, with Federal inquiries about or revisions of verdicts of State tribunals.

The State delegates indignantly denounced this attack, as they termed it, upon their rights. The discussion waxed so hot that President Kalenin was forced at one moment to say sharply to the delegate of the German Volga Republic:

To which the German replied:

"Not at all. I am only speaking loud because people behind me want to hear."

Several speakers maintained that the project infringed the Federal Constitution, the delegate from the Chuvash Republic adding:

"There has been lately a distinct tendency by the Federal Commissariats to limit the rights of the autonomous republics. This has been noticed on the part of the Finance and Education Ministries and now their example is followed by the Ministry of Justice. This is a clear breach of existing legislation."

The Federal Minister of Justice came to Krilenko's support. He pointed out that there was apparently confusion in the minds of several speakers between the rights of the regional courts and the rights of the autonomous republics. The delegates asserted that the States they represented were now sufficintly developed to enjoy full juridical autonomy, whereas the facts showed that was not always the case. For instance, 47 per cent. of faulty decisions was admitted by one Siberian delegate in the course of six months.

In concluding his speech, Krilenko insisted on the need of reform, emphasizing the fact that 90 per cent. of States' people's court decisions were incorrect.

The session then voted the project with one dissenting vote and seven abstentions.

$100,000 for Part of Mayer Estate.

MOUNT KISCO, N. Y., Nov. 10.—A part of the country estate of the late Ernest Mayer on the Mount Kisco-White Plains State highway, near Wampus Lake, was sold today by Miss Mary M. Regan and the Mount Kisco National Bank as executors of the estate, to John Meckler of Scarsdale for $100,000. This is one of the biggest real estate transactions in Westchester County in years. The farm is near the country estates of John Magee, George M. Sidenberg and George C. Haas.

Action Is Taken by Paris Court, Pending Final Decree in Divorce Case.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—The divorce tribunal today for the first time considered the case of Mrs. Richard Washburn Child, who, as previously reported in THE NEW YORK TIMES, has filed a petition against her husband, the former American Ambassador to Rome.

The Judge signed a decree vesting in the mother provisional guardianship of the children until the case is finally settled.

The grounds given in the petition are neglect, desertion and refusal to live with his wife on the part of the husband.

PARIS, Nov. 10 (AP).—Decrees granted by the Paris courts to three American women were announced today as follows:

Ellen Henderson Rice from Robert Johnston Rice of New York City. They were married in New York June 22, 1925.

Katherine Cooks Brehm from Allen K. Brehm. Both gave Paris addresses. They were married in Buffalo, N. Y., June 28, 1910.

Dorothy Lipper Ames from Stephen Ames, a broker, giving a Paris address. They were married in New York Oct. 19, 1920.

All the decrees were on grounds of abandonment.

Persian Society Dinner Tonight.

The Persian Society will give a dinner tonight at the Waldorf in honor of S. H. Tagizadeh, Commissioner General of Persia to the Sesquicentennial at Philadelphia. There will be about 100 guests. Major F. A. C. Forbes-Leith, a retired British officer, will describe his experiences during six years in Persia.

RUNCIMAN TO RETIRE.

Will Not Seek Re-election to the House of Commons.

LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP).—Walter Runciman, one of the most prominent Liberal leaders in Great Britain, has written to the West Swansea Liberal Association that he will not seek re-election from West Swansea at the next general election.

It has been known for some time that Mr. Runciman and former Premier Lloyd George had been at political odds, causing a split in the Liberal party in West Swansea, and his proposed retirement creates little surprise. Mr. Runciman has always been an ardent supporter of Lord Oxford and Asquith, who recently resigned his leadership of the Liberal Party after an open break with Lloyd George.

In Liberal Administrations Mr. Runciman has been at various times Secretary of the Treasury, Financial Director, Minister of Education, Minister of Agriculture and President of the Board of Trade. He is connected with many shipping organizations.

Mr. Runciman was first elected to the House for Oldham in 1899. In 1900 Winston Churchill won the seat from him. In 1902 he was elected for Dewsbury and was appointed Parliamentary Secretary to the Local Government Board of the Campbell-Bannerman administration. He held his first Cabinet position in 1908 as President of the Board of Education. He was born in 1870, the only son of Sir Walter Runciman, ship owner.

SIX LOSE LIVES IN FIRE.

Father Perishes in Attempting to Save Children in Kentucky.

AUGUSTA, Ky., Nov. 10 (AP).—Everett Florer, 40, and five of his children were burned to death in a fire which destroyed their home in Bracken County, twelve miles from here, last night.

Mrs. Florer was severely burned. The children burned were Eugene, 16; Jesse, 13; Virgil, 10; Harry, 8, and Ruth, 3.

The father died in an attempt to save the children, Mrs. Florer said today. Physicians say she has slight chance of recovery. Another son, Vnnie, 15, was visiting neighbors when the fire occurred. Florer was a tobacco grower, living in a tenant house.

PLANS POLAR FLIGHT WITH MANY STOPS

International Society Will Use a Dirigible for a Scientific Exploration of Arctic.

NANSEN OUTLINES ROUTE

Tells Berlin Meeting It Would Run From Nome Across the Pole to Murmansk, Russia.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—The first congress of the International Society for Studying Arctic Regions by exploration with airships convened in Berlin today under the presidency of Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, the veteran explorer, with delegates from eight nations present.

The congress, besides reviewing the various expeditions made into polar territory and the results of their discoveries, intends to find ways and means of making an exhaustive research of the frozen poles, primarily to determine the effect the top of the world has on the climate of the temperate zones, and secondarily to complete geographical knowledge of the earth's surface.

The society agreed that merely flying over the Pole, allowing the explorers to make only the most superficial observations, was inadequate to obtain the correct meteorological and geographical data necessary for science, and that the next means of transporting a party must allow the party to land frequently in the hitherto untrod regions.

How far the present plans of Captain Bruns, experienced Zeppelin pilot, who is credited with creating the society and holds the position of its General Secretary, may be disrupted by the apparent rift between Captain Hugo Eckener, who piloted the Los Angeles to America, and the society is difficult to say.

When Captain Eckener first began to collect money by popular subscription for the construction of a Zeppelin as a means of saving the Friedrichshafen Zeppelin works from destruction by the Interallied Military Control Committee he used polar exploration with the Zeppelin idea as a means of enlisting the aid of the scientists. Captain Bruns submitted plans whereby the huge aircraft could effect a landing without the aid of landing crews and for enabling the staff of scientists to pursue research work without being hurried because of the inability of the airship to remain away from its base.

May Not Get a Zeppelin.

But the fact that Captain Eckener's name is not included in the society's roll and his statement that their efforts are directly working against Zeppelin construction and development lead to the conviction that the partly constructed super-Zeppelin at Friedrichshafen will not be placed at the disposal of the Arctic Exploration Society for two trips without charge, as Professor Kohlschutter informed the society today.

The advent of Geheimrat Schutte, who is head of the Schutte-Lanz Zeppelin Works, competitors of the Zeppelin Work, into a prominent position in the society is assumed to be the reason for Captain Eckener's apparent withdrawal. Schutte supplied the delegates with luxuriously made booklets on "Schutte-Lanz airship construction, 1925," giving a fund of information generally regarded as a national secret and which is causing severe criticism among German industrials.

Dr. Nansen stressed the necessity of gaining comprehensive knowledge of polar regions as a means of aiding weather bureaus to make accurate weather predictions, especially in foretelling storms and dangers to ocean shipping. He compared the tropics to a stove, with the Poles as chimneys, saying the temperature of the stove depended upon the air circulation in the chimney. As a means of acquiring the necessary knowledge of the polar regions, he said, accurate charts of the land and sea areas must be made, which necessitates a type of craft allowing the exploring party to make frequent landings. Airplanes, said Dr. Nansen, have not reached the degree of perfection where they are serviceable for polar exploration, since the problem of making landings is still unsolved. The development of the dirigibles, he declared, on the other hand, is progressing rapidly toward control both in flight and landing and they possess the necessary flying radius and carrying capacity to enable a large party with proper instruments to make an exhaustive study.

The society estimated that $500,000 would be needed to carry out the polar expedition, but should the Zeppelin Works fail to supply an airship without cost, as Dr. Eckener promised in a recent speech, the society must seek a considerably greater sum.

The congress sessions will last for two more days, with speeches by noted scientific specialists on the polar regions. Professor Baner of Washington, who is unable to attend personally, as planned, sent a speech which will be read at tomorrow's meeting.

Outlines Route for Flight.

BERLIN, Nov. 10 (AP).—Plans for a new polar expedition by airship on strictly scientific lines were set forth by Dr. Fridtjof Nansen. The route contemplates flights, with numerous stops, from Nome, Alaska, by way of the North Pole, to Murmansk, Russia, or in the opposite direction. The airship will be manned by a crew of fifty, the men to work in three shifts.

Dr. Nansen declared the flights of Byrd and Amundsen over the North Pole were great pioneer deeds, but from the viewpoint of Arctic exploration merely preliminary to detailed scientific investigations, necessitating numerous landings, each lasting for hours.

It is not known, for instance, said Dr. Nansen, whether Captain Amundsen flew over shallow or deep waters.

To render the investigation worth while, Captain Bruns proposed augmenting the present sixteen observation points in the Arctic regions by nine on polar land and four on the floating ice around the North Pole. Observers on these points would enjoy the tremendous psychological advantage of having radios connecting them with civilization.

The dirigible could be fitted out for a hundred days, and an auxiliary airship might be brought to the Arctic regions to assist the main ship in carrying supplies and picking up observers in case of need.

ALLIES MAY DROP WATCH ON GERMANY

Permanent League Board Likely to Take Place of Military Commission.

THREE NATIONS CONFERRING

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Active conversations will be conducted between now and the meeting of the Council of the League of Nations on Dec. 6 by Paris, London and Berlin regarding the possibility of substituting a permanent League of Nations Military Control Commission for the present Interallied Control Commission, it was learned today.

M. Briand, Minister of Foreign Affairs, yesterday received visits separately of the Marquis of Crewe, the British Ambassador to Paris, and General Walch, President of the Interallied Military Control Commission, and discussed with them the diplomatic and technical features of the problem. Other conversations will be held through the usual diplomatic channels in the three capitals and efforts will be directed toward granting Germany's wish to settle the military control question between now and the Council meeting.

The French and British are understood to be in agreement that substitution of a League for the interallied body depends entirely on Germany. It is pointed out that the latest report of the Interallied Commission to the Conference of Ambassadors indicates a number of points on which Germany has not yet given full satisfaction. A stern note sent to Berlin three weeks ago aroused protest in the Berlin press, which asserted that Germany had fulfilled all her obligations on this score. Six points, however, remain open so far as London and Paris are concerned the most important of which are the secret military societies and the Koenigsberg fortifications.

The Allies are willing to be as lenient as they can and will present the minimum claims possible. France, especially, wishes to help the German Government by action which will fortify it in pursuance of the Thoiry policy, especially since hopes for early evacuation of the Rhineland failed because Foreign Minister Stresemann was unable to offer M. Briand sufficient compensation with which to reconcile French opinion to premature withdrawal.

The resignation of General von Seeckt as head of the Reichswehr was an act helpful to the Chamberlain-Briand policy of international reconciliation and it may be forecast that sufficient agreement will be reached this month to permit the League Council to meet for the first time in its reconstructed form under highly favorable circumstances.

INCENSED LAWYERS LEAVE FEME TRIAL

COURT THREATENS THEM

Warns It Will Use Force to Prevent Questions About Black Reichswehr.

LANDSBERG, Prussia, Nov. 10.—The arbitrary refusal of the presiding Judge, whose desire to prevent the Reich's high civil and military authorities from being dragged into the case becomes daily more apparent, to permit the introduction of any testimony about the origin and organization of the Feme murder camarilla into the trials of Black Reichswehr soldiers accused of killing or assaulting their comrades led today to the retirement of two lawyers from the case. Drs. Löwenthal and Falkenfeld, who represent Sergeant Gädicke, one of the Feme's victims, appearing here as co-complainant with the Public Prosecutor, simultaneously laid down their briefs following the Court's threat forcibly to silence Dr. Löwenthal.

The attitude of the chief Judge throughout has been to suppress all evidence relating to the general activities of the Black Reichswehr murder machine and its connection with the regular Germany Army and its responsible heads.

Dr. Falkenfeld affirmed today that he and Dr. Löwenthal felt it their duty to the German people to throw all possible light on the "dark justice meted out by the Feme." Consequently both continued to put questions dealing with the Black Reichswehr's murderous enterprises in general rather than with the specific charges against Lieutenant Schulz, Sergeant Klapproth and Lieutenant Hayn, on trial for conspiring illegally to punish Sergeant Gädicke for alleged treason.

The presiding Judge finally snapped: "If you don't obey the Court's order I will use force against you."

"That can only mean that it would bring the police into play," Löwenthal exclaimed.

His colleagus then made a formal statement that they were obliged to retire from the case because the Judge, without regard for the statutes, barred the questions that they considered necessary in their client's interest.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—Owing to what it regards as dangerous suppression of important facts at the Landsberg Feme trial, the committee of the Prussian Diet charged with inquiring into the Black Reichswehr crimes will hold a public sitting tomorrow evening and probably will decide to make public all minutes of its secret sittings concerning the Feme misdeeds which are at the basis of the Landsberg prosecution.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL CONTINUES TO SINK

Authorities Admit Huge London Structure Is Menaced by Strange Subsidence.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Apprehension has been aroused anew by an official admission that St. Paul's Cathedral is "still moving," that the strange subsidence in the vast edifice which is the pride of London is continuing unchecked.

Commenting on this The Architects' Journal remarks that this admission by the cathedral authorities is a departure from their former optimism.

The journal expresses fear for the safety of St. Paul's, in view of the tremendous weights which its architect, Sir Christopher Wren, piled up to great heights in its construction, especially because the supporting piers are feebly constructed. Still more sinister, declares the same journal, is the fact that the lateral supports of the piers are themselves out of perpendicular, the surrounding arches are distorted and the exterior walls are bent to such an extent that even the casual passer-by may detect the deflection in its ground story window sills.

"Even if the natural decay of the building is alone to blame," continues The Architects' Journal, "the continuous evidences of movement are highly disquieting, for unless they are arrested they can only lead to one result—disaster."

VIENNA, Nov. 10.—The Hadersdorf castle of former Archduke Leopold Salvator, which, with its 185-acre park, is one of the largest estates in Austria, went under the hammer today for $166,000, though the estimated value is double that. The forced sale was due to unpaid taxes.

The former Archduke is going to New York soon for the auction sale of his collection of antiquities and personal souvenirs of the Hapsburgs.

The only bidder for the castle was the purchaser, Dr. Julius Ullmann, a notary, who is believed to have been acting as the agent of the Socialist municipality of Vienna, which is reported to be planning to convert the estate into a proletarian sanitarium.

FRENCH TREASURY IMPROVES RAPIDLY

Purchase of Foreign Currency for Reserve Is Made With Normal Revenue.

READY FOR STABILIZATION

But Premier Poincare Objects to Fixing Franc's Status Till Debts Are Met.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—The important question as to where the Government obtained the money with which it bought considerable reserves of foreign currency to meet all State obligations for this and next year was answered in financial circles here by the statement that all funds devoted to this end were taken from the normal sources of revenue.

So far as gold and silver purchases by the Bank of France are concerned, the same explanation was given. To a lesser degree loans floated in Switzerland and Holland were included in the foreign currency reserves, but most of the funds were obtained from tax payments by citizens or from subscriptions to national defense bonds by Frenchmen and foreigners.

Premier Poincaré's silence on this score allowed the rumor to develop that he was printing banknotes with which to buy foreign currency. Competent observers say that this method, although legally possible, was not resorted to. The influx of exported French and foreign capital for business or speculative reasons caused the franc to rise and put large sums of foreign currency at the disposal of the financial market. French banks holding deposits converted much of them into short-term Government securities of one month, three months or one year types. With the francs thus obtained the Treasury was able to purchase daily large amounts of foreign currency, which on one hand helped counteract the rapid rise of the franc and on the other hand helped constitute foreign currency reserves. These in turn can be used to prevent an unwarranted fall of the franc and pay maturing foreign obligations. Later on, these funds may be used to guarantee stabilization when the time is considered ripe to attempt this.

Naturally the time may come when foreign or French depositors may seek to withdraw their funds for business or speculative reasons. If such withdrawals were precipitated in a manner to cause a run, serious consequences might result. Therefore the Government already has laid its plans for defense but it is not thought for a moment that a run will occur. Moderate withdrawals at the major clearing periods are expected, but the Treasury will be able to sell its foreign currency at a profit and the normal tax income will keep the Treasury ahead of the game. The situation, therefore, is considered very sound, and even now the Government is in a position to stabilize the franc. This step, however, will not be considered, it was learned, until the foreign debt problem is settled, for Premier Poincaré is opposed to undertaking the operation while any "unknown" elements remain. Until ratification of the settlement terms, the foreign debts are considered uncertain elements by the Premier, and will remain so until Parliament reaches a decision early in January.

COUNTESS KAROLYI WILL NOT CROSS BORDER

She and the Count May Settle in Canada, but Would Prefer a Home Here.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Nov. 10 (AP).—Countess Karolyi, wife of Count Michael Karolyi, who is barred from the United States, will not visit or even attempt to enter the United States. She made this clear today at her hotel here when she told reporters she had wired her attorneys in New York to drop her suit, now pending in the United States courts, "in regard to my treatment by the Department of State."

"We have had trouble enough, and I am looking for peace. I once thought that I might find a home site in the United States. I much admire that country, but Secretary of State Kellogg, its official mouthpiece, has said that he does not want me or mine. That closes the matter, for we shall never go where we are not wanted," said the Countess.

A visa to enter the United States was denied Countess Karolyi by the American Department of State in October, 1925, when she sought to complete a lecture tour there.

Countess Karolyi was off to Ottawa today to interview Government authorities in connection with farms in Western Canada. There is a possibility that the Karolyis will settle in one of Canada's prairie provinces.

James F. Curtis of Curtis, Fosdick & Belknap, 61 Broadway, counsel for Countess Karolyi, said yesterday that he had received a message from the Countess requesting that the mandamus proceedings pending against Secretary of State Kellogg be dropped. "Steps have accordingly been taken to this end," said Mr. Curtis.

The petition for a writ of mandamus to require Secretary of State Kellogg to instruct the United States Consul General at Paris to visa the passport of the Countess Karolyi so that she might come here was filed in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on Jan. 2. The purpose of the petition was to have the court compel Secretary Kellogg to reverse his refusal to permit the Consul General to visa the passport.

DR. GESSLER DEFENDS VON SEECKT OUSTING

He Tells the Reichstag Facts About Reichswehr Commander and Kaiser's Son.

LOEBE DEMANDS LOYALTY

Declares That the Government Will Not Rest Until the Army Is Entirely Republican.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—The German army and its civilian head, Defense Minister Gessler, leaped into the forefront of the Parliamentary arena today, temporarily eclipsing the Socialists' demand for the permanent banishment of the ex-Kaiser and the supplementary budget.

There was less interest in the public debate, however, than in "the alarums and excursions" behind the scenes, where all sorts of rumors about a Government reconstruction were afloat.

With the Nationalists once more voting on the Socialists' side in a minor issue before a Reichstag committee, and in another committee a spokesman for the Catholic Centre, Chancellor Marx's own party, rejecting certain additional budgetary items, the political situation is badly confused.

The Chancellor undoubtedly is seeking to reorganize the Cabinet along lines that will insure him a surer majority than can be mustered by the existing coalition, which controls only a minority of the Reichstag membership. A report current tonight that he has already arranged with the Socialists to revive the big coalition—the Socialists plus the present three Governmental parties—cannot be definitely verified.

Parties Are All Confused.

Stresemann's Peoples Party certainly shows no diminution in its dislike for the arrangement in question. The Populists would scarcely be placated by the substitution of Dr. Severing, Socialist ex-Prussain Minister, for von Gessler as the Defense Minister, which is the subject of another rumor.

The Nationalists' sudden policy of voting with their arch-enemies, the Socialists, is avowedly tactical and purely obstructive, but it seriously embarrasses the Government by holding up urgent legislation.

Von Gessler took the rostrum this afternoon to defend his ousting General von Seeckt as Commander of the Reichswehr and disclosed that he had no thought of resigning his portfolio. On the contrary, he insisted that he had been right in letting von Seeckt go when that able soldier deliberately permitted the eldest son of the ex-Crown Prince and the recognized pretender to the imperial throne to be enrolled in the army of the republic.

The Minister lauded his own services in keeping the Reichswehr loyal to the present régime and handed the Reichstag a bouquet by intimating that von Seeckt's successor, General Heye, would shortly appear before it, which the ex-Generalissimo never did.

Although the Communists greeted him with the cry "How is the Black Reichswehr?" Defense Minister Gessler refrained from any reference to the scandalous murder cases for which illegally recruited German officers and soldiers are on trial at Landsberg, this despite the severe criticism of the unsavory disclosures made there uttered by Republican deputies.

Demands Reichswehr Loyal to Republic

Dr. Paul Loebe, President of the Reichstag, terminated the debate by formulating his plan for placing the recruiting of the Reichswehr in the hands of a central Government bureau, thereby depriving the commanders of army units from doing their own recruiting. Many officers, he declared, nowadays choose their recruits only from among candidates submitted by anti-republican militaristic organizations. He added:

"Would the monarchists have deemed it bearable if the army of the monarchy had been doubtful in its allegiance to the monarchistic state? The republican army must be republican, and we won't rest until there is no doubt of its devotion to the republic."

The Socialists' proposal to pass a law preventing ex-Kaiser Wilhelm from ever returning to German soil and providing for adequate punishment should any of the Hohenzollerns endanger the republic was discussed only briefly by the three Government parties, though the Government itself has not taken a stand on the bill.

The People's Party expressed disapproval of the Socialists' demands on the ground that the former German princes must be accorded the same treatment as other citizens.

The two other Government parties, the Democrats and Catholic Centrists, advocated submitting the matter to a judicial committee.

The present law preventing the ex-Kaiser's return to Germany expires in July.

BRITISH VIEW ON CHINA OUTLINED BY BALFOUR

He Tells the Lords an "Infinity of Warring Generals" Causes the Chaos There.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Earl of Balfour gave a review of the Chinese situation from the British standpoint in the House of Lords tonight. After telling the now familiar story of how disunion and chaos made it impossible to frame a policy toward China, or to present it to any Chinese authority when framed, he stated that all that can now be done is to deplore the losses, disclaim responsibility, and declare an attitude of undeviating conciliation.

Lord Balfour ascribed part of the trouble to delay in ratifying the Washington Treaty of 1922, and in carrying out its decisions, but he said the main cause of China's impotence is the presence of an infinity of warring generals who have intercepted China's revenues and frustrated foreign attempts at conciliation. The Customs Conference, for instance, can neither work nor act in the present atmosphere, though there are many reforms which those concerned are anxious to see carried ont.

Lord Balfour said that the local agreement has been signed for the return to Chinese control of the Mixed Conrt of Shanghai, and that the commission of inquiry into exterritoriality had framed a report, of which nothing is known, except that it was unanimous.

Nothing can be done, however, said Lord Balfour, until China has set her own house in order.

CHAMBERLAIN DENIES SOVIET CLAIM HEADWAY

He Tells Commons Pledge to End Red Propaganda Must Precede Negotiations.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, denied in the House of Commons today that any progress had been made toward a settlement of British financial claims against Russia, either State or private.

Questioned as to whether he was aware that the Russian Foreign Office had on numerous occasions indicated that it would welcome a conference to settle all outstanding questions between Russia and Great Britain, Sir Austen replied:

"I have had a general statement from representatives of the Soviet in this country to the effect that they would welcome negotiations for putting our relations on a better footing. I have indicated the conditions precedent to successful negotiations."

Asked what these conditions were, Sir Austen replied that, first and foremost, it was necessary that he should be able to give the House of Commons a guarantee that the one political condition which was embodied in the trade agreement would henceforth be kept.

This referred to the demand that Russia desist from subversive propaganda against the British Government.

Sues Desiree Ellinger for $3,112.

Désirée Ellinger, an English actress, was sued yesterday for $3,112 in the Supreme Court by Vernon Newcomb, who claims that amount for expenses and services rendered in connection with Miss Ellinger's application to the Government to extend her stay here as a visiting artist. Miss Ellinger came here in March, 1925, under contract with Arthur Hammerstein to appear in the musical comedy "Rose Marie." She is now one of the principals in the musical comedy "Wild Rose."

WOOD ORDER JOLTS FILIPINO LEADERS

Quezon and Roxas Are Told After Legislature Ends That Control Board Is No More.

MAY SPONSOR A NEW LAW

MANILA, Nov. 10 (AP).—Filipino leaders were attempting tonight to find a method of counteracting Governor General Leonard Wood's order of today abolishing the Philippine Board of Control, but its unexpected announcement found them unprepared.

If General wood follows the policy indicated by the opinion of United States Attorney General Sargent and Judge Advocate General Davis, he may appoint all director sand officers of the various Government-owned corporations, including the Philippine National Bank.

The Governor General's order, issued in accordance with the opinions declaring that the board, created by the Philippine Legislature, was constituted illegally, will have far-reaching effects, Filipino leaders said, but they would not venture an opinion as to the final outcome. It was suggested by some that the order might be tested in the courts, but they said they did not contemplate such action at present.

General Wood did not indicate that he wonld make any radical changes at present, but unless his order is contested in the courts, it is admitted that he has the power to make changes in personnel that frequently were opposed by Manuel Quezon, President of the Philippine Senate, and Manuel Roxas, Speaker of the House. Quezon and Roxas, the other members of the Board of Control, often overrode decisons of the Governor General, its minority member.

Home legislators suggested that the Legislature might pass a new law creating another Board of Control. Attorney General Sargent's opinion indicates that the Legislature may create another board by statute which would recognize that the duties of the board were executive and subject to the provisions of the organic act of the Philippines relating to executive functions.

No statement could be obtained tonight from Quezon or Roxas. Both are leaders in the campaign for Philippine independence. The Governor General's order was handed to them just after the Legislature had adjourned sine die, and therefore they were unable to announce it officially to that body.

The Legislature, just before adjournment sine die, adopted a joint resolution designating Mr. Quezon, Mr. Roxas and Claro M. Recto, Democratic leader, a committee to proceed to the United States and oppose all reactionary legislation regarding the Philippines. The committee also is to ask for a definite solution of the Philippine problem. It is understood the committee will depart for the mainland next March.

Wider Private Development Seen.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—Increased opportunity for private development of Philippine industry is expected to result from the order of Governor General Wood, dissolving the Philippine Board of Control. Under legislation passed many years ago, the island Legislature proposed development of coal, petroleum, iron and cement industries through companies in which the majority stock was to be owned by the Philippine Government. The voting of this stock rested in the hands of the Board of Control.

General Wood questioned the validity of the Board of Control plan last April, and the Judge Advocate General of the Army held that executive powers granted to the Governor General by Congress in 1916 had been invaded. In an opinion dated Sept. 22 and signed by William J. Donovan, as Acting Attorney General, this view was upheld. In addition, Mr. Donovan held that appointment of members of the Legislature as members of the Board of Control was in itself illegal, since members of the Legislature may not hold other public offices. He added:

"The Legislature may possibly create another Board of Control by statute which recognizes that the duties of such a board are executive, subject to the provisions of the organic act relating to executive functions."

While the Board of Control was created originally to deal with natural resources, the island Legislature subsequently placed the Manila Railway and the Philippine National Bank under the board.

FRANCE WILL DEPORT GARIBALDI FOR PLOT

Italian War Hero Also Will Be Expelled From the Legion of Honor.

CATALAN PRISONERS TO GO

But Question of What Country to Send Them To Perplexes Paris Authorities.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—With the diplomatic aspects of the case already closed, the French police tonight wrote finis on the dossier of the Garibaldi affair.

A council of Ministers to be held tomorrow morning will listen to a long report by Albert Sarrault, Minister of the Interior—a report upon which the finishing touches were only placed at a late hour tonight by M. Chiappe, head of the Secret Service, and his staff of assistants, who have been working on the matter. The Ministers, it is believed, will recommend deportation not only for Colonel Garibaldi, but also for all participants in the Catalan plot—Colonel Macia and a hundred or more Spaniards and Italians involved.

M. Chiappe conferred with M. Briand and M. Sarrault today over the question of suitable punishment and the individual record of each man has been sent to the Attorney General. Garibaldi and Macia and his accomplices probably will be dealt with under Article 84 of the Penal Code, which reads:

"Any one who, by hostile actions not approved by the Government, exposes the State to a declaration of war will be punished by banishment."

Spanish Plotters' Bombs Found.

In the case of the Spanish plot severe jail sentences could be meted out under laws prohibiting the carrying or concealment of arms of war. A total of 400 bombs and grenades have been found in secret hiding places of Colonel Macia and his plotters, but because they are either Spanish or Italian the Government desires to rid the country of them as quickly as possible under the above-mentioned provision.

Some difficulty may arise as to what border to send them over, no neighboring nation being overly anxious to receive such dangerous conspirators, and the latter are desperately anxious to avoid the Spanish or Italian frontier.

Perhaps the hardest blow to Colonel Garibaldi is announcement that the Grand Chancellery of the Legion of Honor will soon receive an official demand that the name of the descendant of the famous Italian liberator be stricken from the rolls of the decoration.

Throughout the whole investigation the red ribbon of the Legion, which he so proudly wears in his buttonhole, has been for Garibaldi a source of great consolation. Several times he has referred to it in support of his assertions that he was a "gentleman at heart" and really intended no wrong to his anti-Fascist friends. To lose his ribbon will be for Garibaldi the last and conclusive sign that France no longer regards him as a man of honor.

Spain Warned of Plot.

PARIS, Nov. 10 (AP).—Ricciotti Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian patriot, and Colonel Francisco Macia, former Spanish Deputy, tomorrow will confront each other as a result of investigations by the French police into the recently discovered Catalan conspiracy.

The French police today said they had documentary evidence connecting Garibaldi with the plot to wrest Catalonia from Spain, but Colonel Macia has denied this. Macia, it is charged, was the leader of the Catalan conspirators, in whose ranks some Italians were found.

The Spanish Government appears to have been well guaranteed against the possible success of the Catalan separationist movement, which was broken by the French police. According to Secret Service men, the latest evidence shows that an Italian emissary, whose name is being withheld, warned the Spanish Government that a revolutionary push was coming from France just before the Catalan "expeditionary force" began moving toward the Spanish frontier.

The Spanish Government, thus aware of what was going on, was ready to meet the emergency, but the French police also were ready and gathered in the conspirators before they could cross the frontier. The Italian emissary has been missing since he notified Spain of the plot and the French police have failed to find any trace of his movements, although they say they have documentary proof of his mission.

Palace for Maharajah Is Built in England And Shipped in Parts Across Seas to Indore

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The fairy-like palace of an Indian Prince, all but the framework of which has been made in England and shipped across the seas, is nearing completion in India after being five years under construction. The Prince for whom it was ordered, however, will never live in it. He is the former Maharajah Holkar of Indore, who surrendered his throne rather than face an inquiry into the murder of the man who befriended his former dancing girl, Mumtaz Begum, and her attempted abduction.

The palace will instead become the home of his young son, Yeshwantrao Holkar. Its interior decoration alone, carried out from London by a firm of decorators, cost more than $1,000,000. Its throneroom, anteroom and other large apartments are reproductions of famous rooms in the Petit Trianon at Versailles. The Maharajah's bathroom, which cost more than $10,000 to equip and furnish, is built entirely of marble. The bedroom furniture includes a silver bedstead.

The decorative scheme of the palace was planned in accordance with the former Maharajah's instructions after he visited most of the historic buildings of Europe.

ITALIAN OPPOSITION CUT TO 12 DEPUTIES

Unseating of Antis Makes the Chamber Virtually All Fascist.

ROME, Nov. 10 (AP).—By unseating the Opposition and Communist deputies in its vote of yesterday, the Italian Chamber of Deputies has virtually become a Fascist assembly.

Of the 536 members elected on April 6, 1924, fifteen have died or resigned, one of them has been deprived of citizenship and 124 have been unseated, leaving 396, of whom 384 are Fascists.

The remaining twelve, mostly supporters of former Premier Giolitti, constitute an independent non-Fascist group, voting on the merits of measures, but not rigidly opposing the régime.

Those members who were unseated yesterday are deprived of their parliamentary immunity, salaries, special railway rates and other privileges. Similar deprivation is contemplated in the cases of anti-Fascist former deputies.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10.—The latest note sent by the American to the Mexican Government in the controversy over Mexico's alien land and oil laws has been delivered to the Foreign Office here. Although H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, American Chargé d'Affaires, has declined to comment in any way on the note, it is learned that it is one of the strongest protests yet sent by Washington.

A Cabinet meeting, it is rumored, will consider the communication immediately.

Mexican officials refuse to discuss the note. The general opinion is that it may bring about changes in the relations between the two countries.

Note Short of Ultimatum.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The American State Department has sent to the Mexican Government the sharpest note yet delivered in protest against the alien land and oil laws of that country, according to information received here tonight from a thoroughly reliable source.

This communication was of such a character that when its contents became known it might arouse serious apprehension concerning the future relations between the two Governments, it was said. While falling short of an ultimatum, the representations made to the Mexican Republic are understood to be of an unmistakable tone.

There is little doubt among those familiar with the trend of affairs that the step now taken by this Government presages even further and more drastic communications if necessary. Just what they may lead to is not yet clear, but they are expected to bring the whole subject matter of the differences between the United States and Mexico to a head within the next few months.

Incidents [illegible] conferences [illegible] most concerned with [illegible] matters straight [illegible] Government is moving [illegible] conclusion in view, it is [illegible]

Ambassador [illegible] last week and confer[illegible] President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg. Charles B. Warren, [illegible] former Ambassador to Mexico, [illegible] regarded as one of the best informed men on Mexican affairs, also conferred with the President and the Secretary.

Just how extensive are the representations contained in the [illegible] said now to his already [illegible] Mexico City, is not, definitely known, but they are said to assert with [illegible] positiveness the views of this Government not only as to proper rights respecting land and oil, but [illegible] other property rights of aliens.

The view was expressed tonight that even though this Government might be taking a course which might lead to bitter exchanges and threaten the peace of the two countries, the greatest risk was that of having its purpose interpreted as interference in the conflict between the Catholic Church and the Mexican Government.

It was even said that if the United States were to undertake to enforce its representations now or in the near future it would be in danger of causing a great religious division at home.

2 POLICEMEN HELD ON GIRL'S CHARGES

SERGEANT SIGNS AFFIDAVIT

Bail Is Fixed at $1,500 Each in Second Case of Its Kind in the Last Two Days.

Patrolmen Francis Blatzheim and Edward L. Powers of the West 123d Street Station were held in $1,500 bail each yesterday morning by Magistrate Francis X. McQuade in Washington Heights Court, charged with attacking Miss Betty Blanchard, 24 years old, of 2,040 Fifth Avenue.

The two policemen were arrested earlier in the day at the station after Miss Blanchard told Sergeant James Scanlon that they had forced her to remain in a hallway at 40 West 125th Street for two hours.

This is the second case of its kind in as many days. On Tuesday Patrolmen James G. Dolan and John O'Halloran of the Old Slip Station were arraigned before Magistrate Jean Norris in Tombs Court, charged with attacking two 13-year-old girls. Dolan and O'Halloran were held in bail for a hearing next Tuesday.

Miss Blanchard did not appear at yesterday's hearing, the patrolmen being held on affidavits signed by Sergeant Scanlon. At her home she said that about 2 A. M., when she was visiting the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Thurston Johnson in the house in which she lives, the two patrolmen entered the apartment, saying they were chasing a burglar who was thought to have gone up on the roof. She said that they questioned her, and that when she told them she lived in another apartment in the same house they ordered her to go with them. Then, she said, they took her to the hallway in West 125th Street.

Meanwhile, the Johnsons, believing that she had been arrested, went to the police station to inquire about her and were told that she had not been taken there. On their way home, Mrs. Johnson said, they met one of the patrolmen, who, they said, told them to "mind their own business" when they inquired about the girl.

Sergeant Scanlon was making the rounds in a police automobile when at 125th Street and Fifth Avenue he met the other patrolman leading Miss Blanchard. She was nearly hysterical and the Sergeant took her to the station, where she told her story. The arrest of the patrolmen followed.

Blatzheim is 23 years old, and lives at 534 West Fifty-first Street. Powers is 27 years old, and lives at 2,752 Eighth Avenue. Miss Blanchard said that she was engaged to marry William Jesche, who lives at the Fifth Avenue address.

PLANS MEMORIAL TO DEBS.

Socialist Party Decides to Call for Public Subscriptions.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10 (AP).—A movement to erect a memorial to Eugene V. Debs, Socialist leader, which may take the form of a national headquarters and educational institution, has been formally launched by the Socialist Party.

The National Executive Committee of the party announced today that this motion had been adopted:

"That the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party opens a public subscription for the erection of a suitable monument to the memory of Eugene V. Debs, the nature and form of the monument and its location to be determined by the committee at a later date."

Many letters from persons in the United States and foreign countries have imparted to the party leaders their desire to aid in providing a memorial.

ALUMINUM COMPANY DENIES POWER CONTROL

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 10 (AP).—The Aluminum Company of America acquired the property of the Southern Aluminum Company at Baden, N. C., during the World War to speed up production of war materials. A. V. Davis, President of the Aluminum Company, testified today at the Federal Trade Commission hearing into charges of monopolistic practices against the company.

The deal for the purchase from French owners of the Baden property, which has figured in previous testimony, Davis said, was made at the request of the French Government. By taking over that plant the aluminum head added, his concern was able to increase production of aluminum for the Allies and later for the United States when this country entered the war.

Following Davis's testimony, which also dealt with water power and bauxite deposits owned by the company, the inquiry was adjourned until Friday, when it will be reconvened in Detroit.

Davis termed "ridiculous" any statement that the Aluminum Company has a monopoly on water power in the United States. Power holdings of the concern in this country he placed at a fraction of 1 per cent. of the amount available and said those in Canada were "almost negligible."

W. W. Smith, counsel for the company, developed from Davis that two other companies, the Pennsylvania Salt and Mannfacturing Company and the Merimac Chemical Company of Boston, manufacture alumana, the second process in the production of aluminum, and could make aluminum if they desired.

Davis said his company could bring bauxite from its South American mines up the Mississippi River to its East St. Louis plant as cheaply as it would mine and transport the ore from Arkansas.

CALLS McLAUGHLIN A BULLY

"Who Knows Nothing," Hirshfield Adds, Angered in Court Proceeding.

Describing Police Commissioner McLaughlin as "a big bully who knows nothing," Magistrate David Hirshfield in Coney Island Court postponed yesterday the case of Patrick McManus, charged with bookmaking, until next Wednesday because the arresting officer failed to appear against the defendant.

"Bullying by the Police Department must stop," the Magistrate declared angrily.

"I intend to write to the Police Commissioner regarding the laxity of policemen in appearing against persons they arrest. Such arrests amount to nothing else but bullying." Soon after McManus's case was postponed, the case of Daniel Spero, charged with vagrancy, was called. Policeman Leon Parks, who made the arrest, was not in court. After waiting some time, the Magistrate dismissed the case because of the policeman's non-appearance.

He was reluctant to dismiss the case, for he told Spero's counsel that "newspaper men who wanted to get a crack at Davy Hirshfield might distort the story, making it appear that Magistrate Hirshfield had dismissed the case because the policeman had been ten minutes late."

McManus was arrested by Policeman Kelly of Inspector Sackett's staff. Magistrate Hirshfield was told that he was pressing another complaint in the Federal Court.

Bindo Store Owner, Steals $96.

After forcing the owner into a rear room and binding him, an armed robber stole $96 from the cash register of Hyman Nevins's haberdashery store at 1,462 Third Avenue shortly after noon yesterday. On his way out the robber took six shirts. Clerks who came in after luncheon untied Mr. Nevins, who then notified the police.

DEATHS IN TORNADO ARE INCREASED TO 16

14 Children and 2 Adults Die as Result of Storm Which Hit La Plata School.

POOR FAMILY LOSES TWO

LA PLATA, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—This little town emerged slowly today from the numbness of grief which stunned it yesterday, when without warning a freakish wind, rain and hail storm demolished its schoolhouse, killing or fatally injuring fourteen children and injuring at least twenty-three others.

The death list, including a negro man and woman, mounted tonight to sixteen when Theresa Estelle Bean, 9 years old, died in Washington. Scarcely a family among the 500 residents of the town was left untouched in the toll of casualties. No coherent story of the disaster had yet emerged from the dazed accounts of survivors.

Most of the severely injured remained in Washington hospitals. Red Cross relief workers have come to administer to the injured here and to the bereaved and impoverished families in need of aid.

At Waldorf, near here, the windstorm destroyed two barns and St. Peter's Catholic Church and carried a cement mixer and some empty automobiles many feet through the air.

At Cedarville a train on the Washington, Brandywine & Point Lookout Railway was stopped by a fallen tree. Owen P. Grimes, a brakeman, heard screams from his home, fifty yards away. He ran to the house to find Mrs. Grimes under an overturned stove which had crushed her hips. Her dress was in flames. Two of the three children also were injured.

Mrs. C. L. Tucker was blown from her yard and dropped to the ground by the storm. She was injured severely.

At Baden, two miles from Cedarville, R. F. Ward went to the back door of a store to watch the storm. The wind swept him away with the door. He was dropped uninjured, but the wind took his trousers.

The poverty of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Bean of La Plata prevented the family from purchasing shoes for Alice, 6 years old, and this kept her from the schoolhouse, in which the disaster centred. The same poverty raises the question as to where the family will obtain money to bury Edward, 10, who was blown from the schoolroom to his death, and Theresa Estelle, 9, who died today.

The father is unable to work because of a broken leg, and only two of the seven children are old enough to work.

T. F. Farrell Memorial Scholarship.

A scholarship in memory of Thomas Francis Farrell, a Vice President of the Pocohontas Fuel Company, who was killed in a Pennsylvania Railroad wreck near Pittsburgh on June 17, 1926, has been established at the College of St. Elizabeth, Convent Station, N. BRICKLAYERS' LOSS OF SPEED DEFENDED

New Skyscrapers Make Them More Careful, Union Head Tells Industrial Commission.

DIFFERS WITH NORMAN

Others Deny Unions Have Arbitrarily Barred Applicants—Miss Straus for 48-Hour Work Law.

Defense of the bricklayer, whose alleged inefficiency had been termed an aftermath of increased wages, was offered yesterday by John Gill, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' Union, at a hearing before the State Industrial Survey Commission at the Bar Association Building, 42 West Forty-fourth Street.

Christian G. Norman, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Building Trades Employers of New York, testifying at a meeting of the commission in August, declared the bricklayer laid 1,600 to 1,700 bricks a day when he received $6.40 or $8, whereas at present, when he gets $14 a day, he lays only 900. This information, he said, had been offered by an employer.

"The bricklayer today is as efficient as he ever was," said Mr. Gill in defense. "But with buildings rising thirty stories the danger is increased and makes him more careful; with buildings modeled on more intricate plans, cut into sections and demanding additional decorative work, his speed is naturally kept down."

Mr. Gill in a statement offered for the record said:

"Of course the cost of laying bricks has gone up in price, as have all other items of construction, and as a matter of fact Mr. Norman's position, which is paying him $25,000, is quite a comparison with the salary his predecessor received. The latter received $25,000 less than Mr. Norman. The bricklayer is subjected to all sorts of risks, defying and suffering under the rigors of climate, such as extreme cold, extreme heat, snow, frost and wind and from interruption of employment caused by lack of material or work. After all, the bricklayer gets $14 a day only when he works a full day, and there are very few weeks in the year when he works the full week."

Charges frequently made to the commission have been that certain union groups had closed their membership to applicants and declined to allow men from other cities to obtain employment here. Denials were offered yesterday by Daniel P. Collins, business agent of the Metal Lathers' Union, and Richard R. O'Hara, President of Local 3, Electrical Workers.

Additional evidence furnished by a statistical survey in favor of the proposed law establishing a forty-eight-hour working week for women was presented by Dr. Sylvia Kopald. Her figures indicated a steady trend of manufacturers toward the establishment of a forty-eight-hour week.

Miss Dorothy Straus, Legislative Chairman of the League of Women Voters, favored a forty-eight-hour week law. She termed as absurd the assertion that the wages of women would be decreased. Hearings will be resumed at 10 o'clock this morning.

DR. VAN DYKE WORKS ON 74TH BIRTHDAY

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—Dr. Henry van Dyke, who celebrated his seventy-fourth birthday today at his home here, criticized the present-day habit of belittling the character of American heroes. Dr van Dyke is well known as a poet, essayist and lecturer. He is Murray Professor of English Literature at Princeton University.

Dr. van Dyke was found working today on an address to be delivered at the 150th anniversary of the founding of the Phi Betta Kappa Society at William and Mary College in Virginia. The men who founded the society played an important part in the Revolution, and he said he was out of sympathy with the present viewpoint toward Americans of that period.

"I have no sympathy with the modern fashion of minimizing or blackening the fame of great Americans who belong to the past, for they were human, of course, and they sometimes used strong language, indulged in convivial habits and were captivated by fair ladies. But that did not prevent their being heroes, or from doing great work in the liberation and upbuilding of their country.

"To thrust their faults and foibles into the foreground and to forget their fine achievements is to play the part of an envious fool who imagines that he can enhance his own reputation for cleverness by dragging great men in the dust. A touch of hero worship is a better quality than any amount of cheap and smart cynicism."

Dr. van Dyke then got onto the subject of fishing, which is his favorite summer recreation.

"You know," he said, with a twinkle in his eye, "a cod is a funny fish. When you pull him out of the water he has the same expression on his face that a student has when he is unexpectedly called on to recite in the classroom."

Dr. van Dyke said he missed his teaching, which he gave up three years ago. In October he published a volume of twelve short stories which he said he enjoyed writing more than anything he has ever done because of the freedom they gave him. He will lecture this year on poetry.

SCAFFA TO BE RETRIED.

Banton Says Action Will Be Started Soon After Jan. 1.

District Attorney Joab H. Banton said yesterday that Noel C. Scaffa, private detective for the Federal Insurance Company, would be tried again before Judge Nott in General Sessions. No time had been fixed, he said, but it would probably be shortly after the first of the year.

Scaffa was released in $10,000 bail on Tuesday night after a jury had disagreed as to whether he had compounded a felony when he paid $65,000 to a mysterious "Sam Layton" and received in return the $683,000 worth of jewels stolen from the Hotel Plaza suite of Mrs. James Paul Donahue.

FOUR REPUBLICANS MAY HEED WET POLL

TO AID 25 WET DEMOCRATS

Bacon Says He Will Follow Vote of His District—14 of Party From State Believed Dry.

Of the eighteen Republican survivors from the Congressional campaign in this State, there is reason to believe that only four will be aligned with the wets in any move to modify the Volstead law, in accordance with the terms of the prohibition referendum which received such an overwhelming affirmative majority on election day.

Robert L. Bacon, who was re-elected in the First Congressional District; F. H. LaGuardia, who squeezed through in the Twentieth; Walter W. Magee in the Thirty-fifth (Onondaga), and Clarence MacGregor in the Forty-first (Erie) are the four Republicans depended upon to join hands with the twenty-five Democrats elected from this State.

Mr. Bacon was a caller at Republican State headquarters yesterday. He had a conference with State Chairman George K. Morris. He said afterward that he had made his fight on a modification platform and had run ahead of his ticket.

"As nearly as I can figure out, I won by 36,000, a big plurality in a year like this," Mr. Bacon said. "I even carried the Queens end of the Congressional district, sixty-eight election districts, most of which are Democratic."

"What will you do in Congress with regard to modification?" Mr. Bacon was asked.

"I shall vote in accordance with the vote on the referendum in my Congressional district," he replied. "I have not seen the figures, but I have no dnuht that a majority was cast on the affirmative side, taking into account the negative votes and those who failed to vote at all. Under the circumstances I have no choice."

Frederick M. Davenport of the Thirty-third Congressional District, which takes in Oneida County and Herkimer, the home of Franklin W. Cristman, dry contender for the Senatorship, was another caller at headquarters. He won by 11,000, a little above the normal plurality, after a campaign in which he discussed little except the wet and dry issue. Mr. Davenport took the dry side of the argument, and attacked the Prohibition referendum at every opportunity as an imposition upon the public.

SEEKS $4,000,000 FOR COMMUNITY BUILDING

Welfare Council Proposes to House All Social Service Agencies Together.

A movement to build a $4,000,000 Community Welfare Building to house 1,500 different social service organizations in New York City, and to enable those agencies to conduct their activities with more economy and with a higher degree of cooperation and coordination, was launched yesterday at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Welfare Council of New York City at the Midday Club.

Resolutions were adopted describing as the greatest need of the New York City Welfare situation, a central building to house the different social agencies. The committee directed its Chairman and executive director to proceed at once with a program for interesting individuals and organizations in providing the necessary funds and launching the enterprise.

It is proposed to acquire a site for $1,000,000 and erect a $3,000,000 building. In the building there would be a total of 300,000 square feet of floor space to be rented to social agencies at $1.50 a square foot, as against present rentals which vary from $1.80 to $3.

Among those at the meeting were Felix Warburg, Vice President of the Welfare Council; Commissioner Bird S. Coler of the City Welfare Department; Health Commissioner Louis I. Harris; Solomon Lowenstein, director of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropical Societies; Henry C. Wright, director of the Hospital and Institutional Bureau of Consultation; Homer Folks of the New York State Charities Aid Association, and Allen T. Burns of the American Association for Community Organization.

Thief Invents Theft-Proof Mail Bag.

KINGSTON, Ontario, Nov. 10 (AP).—Serving a life sentence for bank robbery, a convict in Portsmouth Penitentiary has invented a mail-bag lock which he thinks is theft proof. The inventor is Norman ("Red") Ryan, a notorious Toronto bandit, and a patent will be taken out in his name in the Canadian Patent Office. In addition to being theft proof, the lock will do away with all ropes, straps or steel bars, lightening the mail bag considerably.

the Catholic faith by having the Holy See annul his first marriage might have arisen out of his conflict with the Oxford diocese of the Church of England.

The much-debated question whether Church or State shall control the liberties of individuals became a live issue when in 1922 the Bishop of Oxford wrote to the Duke of Marlborough requesting him not to attend the Oxford Diocesan Conference. The Bishop took the ground that he could not admit that the Duke had the status of a communicant, because while the Duke had been divorced and remarried, the law of the Church, as set forth in the common prayer book, made it very clear that it does not recognize divorce.

The Divorce Law Reform Union, however, took the ground that the Church had no right to override the laws of the country outside of its own jurisdiction. The union declared that Marlborough was legally married, whereas the law of the Church declared that he had contracted an illegitimate union.

The Duke, through his solicitors, denied the Bishop's statement and authority and asserted that he had the sanction of his parish priests in Oxfordshire and London, with the full knowledge of "the proper ecclesiastical authorities."

SEARCHING this bustling town for a fine reproducing piano is a wasteful task. For when all the pieces are played, when all the casings are compared, your choice will always lie between three important instruments—the only three that can bring great music to you for life.

But of these the Welte-Mignon alone unites the perfected reproducing action with the piano perfected to play for it. If you have heard European critics discuss the Welte-Mignon, no doubt they have praised this distinction. It is vital; only Welte-Mignon owners enjoy its advantages.

Go first to hear the other two. Then, with the memory of their performance fresh in your ears, come to our studios for an hour's recital. And when the Welte-Mignon has sung to you in its mellow voice, probably you, too, will want it for your own.

GOVERNOR IN MOVE FOR WATER ACCORD

NEW COMMISSION JAN. 1

Governor Smith left late yesterday afternoon for a fortnight's vacation at the Sea View Golf Club, Absecon, N. J., feeling convinced that the State Water Power Commission, at present an all-Republican body, would heed his request that no action be taken on the proposal to lease for private development a valuable power site on the St. Lawrence River for which two big water power corporations are bidding.

The opinion was expressed in quarters close to the Governor that the fight over water power, which has marked every session of the Legislature since the Governor took office in 1923, would not be renewed at next year's session. It was said, that a modus vivendi would be arranged between the Governor and the Republicans, who will control the Legislature, looking to cooperation in solving the State's water power problem, largely along lines suggested by the Governor.

Governor Smith is firmly committed to water power development under State auspices. The Water Power Commission is committed to the policy laid down in the present water power law, which follows the lines of the Federal Power act and contemplates private development and operation under rigid State supervision.

Change After Jan. 1.

After Jan. 1, with the reorganization of the administrative State departments going into effect, the Governor will have veto power over all concessions granted hydroelectric development on streams where the power is owned by the State.

Governor Smith, believing that action in relation to the valuable site on the St. Lawrence River was imminent, sent a letter to the commission, urging that action be deferred.

After Jan. 1 the present commission will be superseded by one composed of three members—the Attorney General, the Conservation Commissioner and the State Superintendent of Public Works. The present Public Works head, who, it is understood, will be continued by Governor Smith, is Colonel Frederick Stuart Greene, who shares the Governor's view on power development. Under the reorganization plan the signature of the Governor will be required before any lease of a power site can become effective, thus giving the Chief Executive veto power over such concessions.

Preparing New Measure.

Governor Smith, it was learned yesterday, is at work on a measure that will be submitted to the new Legislature. It will in general follow the lines of the bill presented this year which failed of passage. It will provide for the creation of a Power Authority, a body corporate and politic with power to issue its own securities to defray the cost of power projects of its own undertaking, but in the first instance would be vested merely with powers of investigation and preparation of a comprehensive plan which would have to be reported back to the Governor and presumably to the Legislature. It is in all its main provisions the identical plan the Republicans have fought so bitterly ever since Governor Smith took office.

Total Now $104,480 Toward Goal of $265,000 for Expenses of Organization in City.

Contributions amounting to $21,729.25 to the 1927 current expense budget of the Young Women's Christian Association were announced yesterday at the organization's campaign luncheon held at the Central Branch, 610 Lexington Avenue. The total to date toward the $265,000 goal is $104,480.55. Among the gifts announced yesterday was $10,000 from Mr. and Mrs. Stephen C. Clark for the West Side Branch of the Y. W. C. A. Other contributions were $2,500 from Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, $1,000 from Mrs. Lewis H. Lapham, $1,000 from Mr. and Mrs. William Fellowes Morgan, $1,250 from Mrs. William Church Osborn and $500 from Mrs. Henry P. Davison.

The Studio Club reported $1,160 toward the $65,000 needed for the Studio Club building fund, and Miss Katharine Lambert reported that the national board of the Y. W. C. A. had obtained $56,231 toward the New York quota of the national budget, which is being raised simultaneously with the New York Y. W. C. A. budget campaign.

THREE TRAPPED IN TONNEAU

Driver Saves Himself and Two Others From Drowning.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 10 (AP).—Trapped in a closed tonneau of a truck, William Blaisdell, 28, of R[illegible], saved two passengers and himself from death by drowning in Salisbury Pond after the truck dove head on into ten feet of water late last night.

Mistaking a short street for the route he was supposed to follow and blinded by the heavy rain, Blaisdell drove at full speed over the embankment at the blind end of the street. He was not able to stop his truck when it plunged into the chilly waters of the pond until the driver's compartment was completely submerged.

Blaisdell broke the windshield of the truck, pulled himself to the roof and swam around to the side door which he forced open. He then dived into the enclosed tonneau and brought Mrs. Frances Bernier 22, and Harvey Bernier, 29, of Roxbury, to safety. Blaisdell suffered lacerations of the forehead and left hand and the other passenger suffered from the shock.

Rights Body to Discuss Prohibition.

Assemblyman Phelps Phelps, who has just been re-elected from the Tenth District, will preside at a meeting of the Association for American Rights at the Bar Association, 42 West Forty-fourth Street, next Monday night. Prohibition will be the principal topic of discussion and Senator Edwards of New Jersey the principal speaker.

TELL WHY TEACHER WAS NOT PROMOTED

School Superintendents Say Abraham Lefkowitz Had Radical Tendencies.

ADMIT HE HAS ABILITY

But Deny In Report on Case That He Has No Responsibility Outside of Classroom.

A detailed report explaining why the Board of Superintendents refused to promote Abraham Lefkowitz was submitted yesterday by that board to the Board of Education.

Dr. Lefkowitz is one of the three teachers in the city school system whom the Board of Superintendents has refused to promote on grounds of alleged radicalism. It was in behalf of these teachers that the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred on Intellectual Freedom for Teachers was organized and recently held a public protest meeting.

Associate Superintendent Edward Mandel, who drew up the report concedes that Mr. Lefkowitz "is master of the technique of teaching—he knows how to present his subject and arouse and hold the interest of his pupils. No doubt he has a thorough knowledge of his subject matter. But that is not enough. Technique and knowledge are no substitutes for the spiritual enrichment and inoculation of American ideals, which are the primary aims in teaching history and civics."

Enumerates Utterances.

Mr. Mandel then enumerates "some of the most objectionable of the intemperate utterances attributed to Mr. Lefkowitz." He charged that in an address at Cooper Union on Dec. 4, 1919, under the auspices of Friends of the Freedom of India, Mr. Lefkowitz used the words "dago" and "sheeney" to arouse "class hatreds and class consciousness," and that he referred sneeringly to the United States as the "so-called Greatest Republic in the World."

Again Superintendent Mandel charges that Mr. Lefkowitz made the statement in a classroom that after visiting the Capitol at Albany on one occasion he felt that he needed to be "deloused."

"Though denying that he entertained radical sentiments," Superintendent Mandel continued, "Mr. Lefkowitz as 'the live-wire questioner of The New York Labor News,' edited a column in that paper entitled 'Some Questions for Editors to Answer.' The questions show a radical turn of mind." For the same publication, Superintendent Mandel continues, Mr. Lefkowitz wrote an article entitled "Heard on the Bowery, a dialogue between 'Gyp the Blood,' representing the Democratic Party, and 'Tony the Brass-Knuckled Philosopher,' representing the Republican Party. It is written in language undignified and vulgar. It is a plea for Bolshevism. It ends with a cheer at the blessings of American Liberty."

"The evidence shows that Mr. Lefkowitz, on numerous occasions, has appeared on the public platform with men of extreme radical views. He claims the right so to do. He contends that so long as he does his work in the classroom and does nothing objectionable in the school, it is no concern of the educational authorities what he does outside the school.

"Mr. Lefkowitz is mistaken. The courts and the State Commissioner of Education have ruled to the contrary. 'A teacher may not have one set of opinions for the classroom and another for the public platform. As a school teacher, he has not the same rights as other citizens to print, publish or declare his thoughts and opinions. He is no longer at liberty to 'freely write, speak or publish.' This is not an interference with his rights as a citizen. His rights are as 'free and untrammeled as they ever were.' He may at any time 'emancipate himself from the shackles of the department and exercise his full rights as an American citizen' by resigning his position.

"In determining whether or not a teacher shall be promoted, the Board of Superintendents is obligated to take into account the history of the teacher, his public opinions, the persons with whom he associates, and his attitude toward Governmental questions. To insist that a public school teacher shall not commit the offenses charged against Mr. Lefkowitz is no interference with 'intellectual freedom.' CLOAK STRIKE END IN SIGHT

Signing of a Peace Agreement Is Expected Today.

A conference of the various parties involved in the cloakmakers' strike will probably be held today in the office of Impartial Chairman Raymond V. Ingersoll, 130 West Thirty-first Street, to sign an agreement ending the strike.

Progress in writing the terms of the agreement was made yesterday, with indications last night that the final meeting would be held today. Morris Hillquit for the union and Samuel Klein for the manufacturers were busy yesterday in reducing to terms the tentative verbal understandings reached in recent negotiations.

HARDY CASE POSTPONED.

Court Sets Hearing in Embezzlement Action for Tomorrow.

Adjournment until Friday of the hearing of Leonard Hardy, real estate broker of 163 East Sixty-third Street, on an embezzlement charge was granted by Magistrate Edward Weil in Harlem Court yesterday morning, when counsel for the complainant, Mrs. Marie Mabel of 57 West Sixty-third Street, said she had gone to visit her mother, who is ill in St. Louis.

Mrs. Mabel charged that two masked men entered her apartment on Oct. 29, bound and gagged her and searched for two checks which, she said, were to be used as evidence against Hardy. After a fruitless search, she said, the two left her lying bound upon a bed until six hours later, when she was released by attorneys who were seeking her appearance in court against Hardy.

Former Assistant District Attorney Samuel Markewich, appearing for the defendant, termed Mrs. Mabel "an adventuress" and objected to the adjournment of the case, saying he doubted that she had "any intention of appearing in court."

$50,000 FOR INJURED GIRL.

Winner of Suit Suffered Total Loss of Memory in Auto Accident.

A jury in Justice James A. Dunne's part of the Brooklyn Supreme Court awarded $50,000 yesterday to Helen Mooney, a former telephone operator, for injuries caused by an auto owned by B. Goetz & Brothers, Third Avenue and Sixth Street, Brooklyn. The suit was brought in her name. Her physician testified that her injuries had caused a total loss of memory.

Miss Mooney is 23 years old and lives at 8,738 Fifteenth Avenue, Brooklyn. During the first day of the trial she was taken into court on a hospital stretcher, but she did not again appear, her physician having advised that the strain endangered her life.

SAYS CHICAGO CANAL UPSET GEOGRAPHY

MARQUETTE'S MAP IS CITED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—Testimony that the thirty-mile Chicago Drainage Canal had so dislocated natural tendencies as to influence the economic development of the entire Middle West was offered today by complainant witnesses in the Supreme Court lake diversion proceedings before Charles E. Hughes, as Special Master.

Constructed a quarter of a century ago, to provide adequate sewage disposal facilities for the city, the canal, it was asserted, had disturbed the natural drainage formations of thousands of years, reversed the courses of two rivers and diverted the drainage of the entire Great Lakes system from the St. Lawrence to the Mississippi River.

In concluding a two-day examination of Dr. James W. Goldthwait, Professor of Geology in Dartmouth College, the complainant counsel put into the record testimony that prior to construction of the canal connecting the Chicago and Illinois Rivers the two great major river systems of the continent, namely, the St. Lawrence and the Mississippi, were separate units, flowing in different directions.

The canal, which cut through a continental divide traversing the western edge of Chicago, joined the two systems, he said, reversed the natural drainage of the entire Great Lakes system from east to west and added several hundred thousand square miles to the drainage burden of the Mississippi system.

In cross-examination counsel for the Sanitary District and seven co-defendant States asked Dr. Goldthwait to read excerpts from his own publications, in which, in 1911, he lauded the canal project as a work of far-reaching economic significance to the entire Middle West.

In one article he alluded to future trade possibilities, especially for Chicago, in the ultimate diversion of Great Lakes commerce through the canal system to the Mississippi and the Gulf.

Dr. Goldthwait supported his geological thesis today with a historical narrative based upon hundreds of maps by early explorers in the Chicago territory, beginning with Father Marquette's map of 1673, acknowledged as the first map of the region.

Father Marquette's map became an important element in the case when defense counsel pointed out that it indicated a continuous flow from the Des Plaines River, across the Chicago Divide, into the Chicago River and thence into Lake Michigan.

All later maps indicate a portage of several miles in Chicago, and the centre of the complainants' case is that the Drainage Canal cut through the major continental divide indicated in the portage.

House Where Brunners Were Found Shot Is Entered at Night and Papers Taken

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Scotland Yard was confronted with a first-class mystery today when it was discovered that a room in the house at Roehampton just outside London where Roscoe Brunner and his wife were found shot dead last Thursday had been ransacked last night by burglars obviously bent on getting nothing but some document or documents.

Valuable silverware and other articles, which ordinary burglars would consider a rich haul, were left undisturbed or tossed aside as if worthless by the intruders.

The house where the double tragedy occurred last week and which mysterious intruders burgled last night belongs to Princess Lichtenstein, daughter of the dead couple, who is absent from England. The burglars paid special attention to a desk belonging to the Princess, from which every bit of paper was taken, including checkbooks and letters, and apparently minutely examined. Muddy footprints all over the room led the detectives to believe that two men were concerned in the mysterious nocturnal visit.

It is impossible to say yet whether the burglars got what they were after, for the detectives do not know what papers were in the room. Scotland Yard today is asking assistance of friends of the Brunner couple, hoping to get some clue.

The burglary probably occurred between 7 and 10 o'clock last night when the hutler and his wife, who are now living alone in the tragedy house, were visiting friends.

Roscoe Brunner, it will be remembered, was formerly Chairman of the important firm of Brunner, Mond & Co., in which he was associated with Sir Alfred Mond, who is concerned in numerous chemical and other concerns and was prominent in the recent big chemical combination in which Brunner, Mond & Co. are one of the principal factors.

The Coroner's jury which investigated the case returned a verdict that Mrs. Brunner was murdered by her husband and that he committed suicide while of unsound mind.

Since Mrs. Brunner was vitally interested in the Spahlinger treatment for consumption of which she had been a pioneer in England it is suggested tonight that the burglars wished to secure some secret documents dealing with the subject.

It is also recalled that, when the bodies of the Brunners were discovered, a drawer in Princess Lichenstein's bureau—which the burglars thoroughly ransacked last night—was open above Mrs. Brunner's head. The doctor in his evidence at the inquest stated that he did not know how the drawer could have been opened in the circumstances.

MEDICAL MEETING OPENS AT BRIARCLIFF MANOR

First District Branch of the State Society Elects Dr. E. R. Cuniffe of the Bronx as President.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIARCLIFF MANOR, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The twentieth annual meeting of the First District Branch of the Medical Society of the State of New York was held at Briarcliff Lodge today with approximately 100 members present from the eight counties comprising the First District.

At the afternoon session the members were addressed by Dr. Nathan B. Van Etten of the Bronx, Dr. Arnold Jackson of Madison, Wis.; Dr. Daniel S. Dougherty of New York City, Secretary of the State Society, and Dr. George M. Fisher of Utica, President.

Dr. Van Etten spoke of the work done in the anti-diphtheria campaign being carried on to stamp out the disease in New York State by 1930. The campaign opened this week in Newburgh. The physician said children were being inoculated there and in Syracuse, Buffalo and Schenectady.

Officers elected at the morning session were: President, Dr. Edward R. Cuniffe, Bronx; First Vice President, Dr. George Stanwix, Yonkers; Second Vice President, Dr. Charles D. Kline, Nyack; Secretary, Dr. Ralph O. Clock, Pearl River; Treasurer, Dr. John F. Howell, Newburgh.

AMERICAN FILM UP IN COMMONS

'The Unknown Soldier' Cannot Be Banned at Today's Shows, Home Office Tells Member.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The question of the propriety of exhibiting in England the American film, "The Unknown Soldier," came up again this afternoon in the House of Commons, when Sir W. Davison asked the Home Secretary whether his attention had been drawn to the fact that arrangements had been made for its exhibition in London and the Provinces tomorrow—Armistice Day—and whether he proposed to prevent its exhibition, "having regard to the pain which it would cause among the mourners who had lost relatives in the war and who would participate in the Armistice Day services."

Replying for the Home Department, Captain Hacking, Under Secretary of the Home Office, said that the department had carefully considered the matter, but had decided that the film contained nothing justifying Government intervention against its being exhibited.

He added that the film already had been shown in England, including London, and he thought while some persons might consider it in bad taste, it had been passed by the British Board of Film Censors, headed by T. P. O'Connor. The latter then spoke in defense of the film.

Distributers of the film, "The Unknown Soldier" took an eleventh hour step tonight in response to the protests made against the proposed exhibition on Armistice Day. Telegrams were sent to forty-three theatres which had billed the picture, offering to release them from their financial obligations if they cared to withdraw the film.

SHERIFF AT AIKEN ASSAILS ACCUSERS

Robinson Says Two Political Foes Are Back of Charges That He Aided Lynchers.

ASKS HELP IN INQUIRY

Declares He Is Doing His Best In Search for Mob Who Slew Three Negroes.

Special to The New York Times.

AIKEN, S. C., Nov. 10.—Sheriff Nollie Robinson, again denying today that he was a member of the mob who lynched Damon, Clarence and Bertha Lowman, negroes, on Oct. 8, denounced the allegations of his implication in the crime as the work of his political enemies.

Austin H. Johnson and James L. Quinby, both of Horse Creek Valley, who acted as Notaries Public for the sworn statements of Mrs. Lucy Mooney and Charles E. Lee, charging that Sheriff Robinson was in the lynching mob, are his open and avowed foes the Sheriff said. Johnson is a defeated candidate for the Office of Sheriff. Quinby is known as an eccentric, said the Sheriff, who goes about with three revolvers strapped about his person in fear of imaginary enemies.

Sheriff Robinson went on to say that a man named White, an investigator of the Organization for the Advancement of the Colored Race, at Washington, D. C., drifted into the hands of Johnson and Quinby, who seeing an opportunity to injure him politically, obtained the two affidavits.

The Sheriff assailed the moral character of Mrs. Mooney, who was a prisoner at the jail at the time of the lynching. Speaking of Lee, Sheriff Robinson said he was a Federal prisoner sentenced from Charleston for moonshining and was inveigled by White to make his affidavit.

A long list of names, including Lanier Branson, President of the Graniteville Manufacturing Company; George H. Leitner, Vice President of the company, and other prominent citizens was presented to Governor McLeod as being members and sympathizers in the lynching party.

White's statement that one of the Lowmans was dragged behind an automobile over the road to the lynching grounds was clearly false, stated the Sheriff, as such a thing could not have been done without leaving a trail and no sign of the dragging of a body or other object was made on the dirt road from the jail to the scene of the lynching.

Sheriff Robinson is a deacon of the Baptist Church and is known throughout the section as a clean-living man.

"I am doing everything in my might to find out the members of the mob and ask the assistance of the people," he stated today. It is expected here that Governor McLeod will issue a statement exonerating the Sheriff and other officers of blame in the matter in a few days.

A warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Mooney was sworn out on Monday and she was taken to the State Prison at Columbia for questioning in Governor McLeod's inquiry into the lynching.

Five other prisoners, four of them negroes, were taken from the Aiken jail today and transferred to the Columbia prison for questioning as to whether they can identify any members of the lynching mob.

FLYING FIRE ENGINE SAVES BURNING PLANE

Admiral Moffett Reveals Aviation Novelty and Tells of Its Successful Feat.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 10.—The latest wrinkle in aviation is the flying fire engine. This novelty was revealed this afternoon when Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, upon his arrival at the Hampton Roads Naval Air Station, said that a fire airplane was used recently to extinguish a blaze that threatened destruction of the No. 5 seaplane, which Major Bernardi, Italian ace, will fly in this year's Schneider Cup race.

On a practice spin the Bernardi plane's engine backfired, the resultant flames threatening destruction of the seaplane as the aviator taxied to shore. The American safety plane, equipped with fire-fighting apparatus, rushed alongside the Italian plane and passed an extinguisher to its foreign pilot. The fire was smothered and the racing plane saved.

The fire plane also carries a first-aid kit and other safety apparatus. It takes the air for emergency use during experimentation or when another plane is afire.

MILLS COMPLETES RHINELANDER PLEA

Failure to Call Wife to Stand Made an Issue in Request for New Trial.

DEFENSE PRESENTS SIDE

Swinburne Insists Rhinelander Knew Wife Was a Negro—Asks $12,500 Counsel Fees.

Former Justice Isaac N. Mills completed his appeal for a new trial and to set aside the verdict in the annulment suit unsuccessfully brought by Leonard Kip Rhinelander against his negro wife, Alice Jones Rhinelander, before the Appellate Division of the Second Department yesterday. He reviewed in great detail the charge of Justice Morschauser to the jury and what he contends were the prejudicial actions and words of counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander. Decision in the case was reserved.

The failure to call Mrs. Rhinelander as a witness was also cited by Judge Mills as a weakness in their case. To this Samuel Swinburne, her attorney, replied that it "was not at all an absolute presumption that her testimony would have been unfavorable to her contentions," and also pointed out that she had denied the charge in toto. Most of the argument was as to whether or not Rhinelander could have known that she was a negro.

"We were somewhat surprised that plaintiff's attorneys did not contend at the outset that their client was blind, or at least color blind, instead of 'brain-tied,'" Judge Swinburne submitted in his brief. "This is not the case of a stranger such as a hotel clerk or one in the Bureau of Marriage Licenses being afforded a passing glance at a woman accompanied by a white man. On the contrary, Rhinelander knew this defendant, her immediate family and relatives for months. At the Hotel Marie Antoinette he had an opportunity to see her color.

Judge Mills, on the other hand, referred to Mrs. Rhinelander's letters in which she told of being called the "Spanish Kid," and said that Rhinelander, being credulous, was easily convinced that she was not colored, but of Spanish descent from the West Indies.

Arguing for the further allowance of $12,500 counsel fees, Judge Swinburne called attention to the length of the trial, the fact that the amended complaint made necessary an entirely new study of the law, and that the additional fee was fully justified.

Wants 4 Days' Work in Week Rather Than Ford's 5-Day Plan

In an open letter to President William Green of the American Federation of Labor yesterday Dr. Walter N. Polakov, consulting engineer of 475 Fifth Avenue, discussed the Henry Ford five-day-a-week-plan. Dr. Polakov declared the experiment of a shorter work week had been conducted by him between 1912 and 1914 in the Penn Central Light and Power Company in Pennsylvania.

Because of the loss of production on Fridays and Saturday Mr. Polakov concluded that the ideal arrangement would be to have a week of four days and then a holiday instead of the work week of six days followed by a day of rest.

This plan would reduce the number of work days from 313 to 292 but despite cessation of work on Fridays and Saturdays there would be no real loss in yearly production, in the opinion of Mr. Polakov.

REPUBLICANS CONFER OVER MAINE ELECTION

Senator Curtis Points Out That Republican Must Win to Insure Senate Control.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Plans were made today at a conference here for electing a Republican Senator in Maine to succeed the late Senator Bert M. Fernald. A special election to fill the vacancy is to take place on Nov. 29.

Those who attended the conference were Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, Republican floor leader of the Senate; Senator Frederick Hale of Maine; Daniel F. Field, Chairman of the Republican State Committee of that State, and Joseph W. Simpson, Maine's Republican National Committeeman.

The Maine election is important in that the Republicans must win it in order to give them votes in the next Senate equal to those of the combined opposition of Democrats and the sole Farmer-Laborite, Shipstead, of Minnesota. The general expectation is that the Republican candidate will be elected, but a statement put out by Senator Curtis after the conference indicated that the Republican managers in Maine were a trifle nervous.

"The election is of national interest because it may decide the control of the Senate in the new Congress," he said. "Legislation of national importance in this Congress also will depend upon the result. There never has been a time in recent years when it has meant so much to the country as a whole that Maine should send another Republican Senator to Washington."

Henry Stevens and Hall Were Friendly "In a Cold Way," Maid Testifies

the Grand Jury which refused to indict Mrs. Hall in November, 1922. One of the statements cited by the special prosecutor was that Mrs. Hall had been "shaking" when Barbara encountered her on Saturday morning, prior to the discovery of the murder. The former maid explained that the stenographer had not finished her sentence four years ago, and that what she had said was "Mrs. Hall was shaking a pillow."

Then Senator Simpson tried a new tack. He asked the witness whether she had been a member of St. Mary's Guild. This was an organization of the younger members of the rector's parish of the Episcopal Church of St. John the Evangelist. The guild met in the church annex, and the witness was asked to tell about a visit she made to the meeting rooms one night.

Mrs. Mills on Rector's Knee.

"When I went down," she said, "I did not see any one, so I went in and I called twice while I was in the Sunday School room. No one answered me, and I knew that Dr. Hall had left the house before I did. So I walked on and was going to walk to his study and ask him had he seen any of the girls, and I had walked through the Sunday School room, called twice and no one answered me, and I was walking on and as I reached the guild room there Eleanor Mills jumped off Dr. Hall's knee."

The witness was asked if Henry Stevens had ever visited his brother-in-law's home. She said that he had called fairly often, but that the last visit she remembered before the murder was in June, 1922. She said that Dr. Hall and Henry Stevens were "friendly in a cold sort of way."

She did not have much success in explaining just what constituted this special type of relation, and Senator Simpson got "No" for an answer when he said, "Dr. Hall didn't insult him—that's it?"

Sedan Seen in Lane.

Another witness whose story was followed closely was Charles Alpaugh, a railroad employe of Somerville. At the time of the crime Alpaugh was a bus driver, and at midnight of Sept. 14 he was driving a bus along Easton Avenue at De Russey's Lane. He was returning with a number of firemen who had attended a picnic in Red Bank.

Alpaugh said that as he approached the lane he saw two cars parked in Easton Avenue. One was a Cadillac coupe and the other was a Dodge sedan. The Hall family car at the time was a Dodge sedan. Alpaugh also told of being overtaken and passed by a Ford touring car which had been driven sharply in front of his bus. Apparently, the State wished to stress this third car, owing to the fact that Henry Stevens has said that the only machine he could drive was a Ford. He has offered an alibi for the murder night, saying that he was fishing on the beach near his home in Lavallette, N. J., sixty miles away.

Dr. Runkle Hegeman was the first witness to testify to the medical aspect of the case. He denied that the tongue, larnyx and windpipe of Mrs. Mills had been cut out. Dr. Otto Schultze, who testified for the State on Tuesday, had sworn that his examination had shown that the singing organs had been removed.

Dr. Smith, in addition to demonstrating the razor theory, said that in January, 1922, Mrs. Mills had been his patient in the Middlesex County Hospital. He said that Dr. Hall had made arrangements for her treatment. Dr. Hall called every day or so at the hospital to see Mrs. Mills, he testified.

"Did you ever see Mrs. Hall there in company with Dr. Hall?" he was asked.

The witness said "No," but on cross-examination said that Mrs. Hall had visited Mrs. Mills alone.

It was during the examination of Dr. Edward I. Cronk, Health Officer of New Brunswick, that the bench warrant threat developed for Mr. Hubbard, the undertaker who officiated at the funerals of Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills.

Dr. Cronk said he had called at the undertaking establishment of Mr. Hubbard on Sunday, the day after the bodies were found. While he was there, Mr. Hubbard had received a telephone call from former State Senator W. Edwin Florance, who was Mrs. Hall's attorney then. Dr. Cronk said that the undertaker had not transmitted the conversation with Mr. Florance, but that he had been asked to identify Mrs. Mills.

Buried With Bullets in Head.

The physician said that, acting on his own initiative, he had made an examination to determine whether Mrs. Mills had been in a certain condition. He determined that she was not. He was pressed vigorously as to why he had made this examination and said he had done so because he had found "hidden evidence in the head of Mrs. Mills." Dr. Cronk said that he had found no exit wounds for the three bullets that had entered the woman's head and concluded that the bullets were still in her head.

The physician said that he had reported this fact to the late Joseph E. Stricker, then Prosecutor of the Pleas for Middlesex County, but that Mrs. Mills's funeral had been held without any examination. Subsequently, when the body was exhumed for autopsy, the bullets were recovered.

Dr. Cronk testifies that Mr. Hubbard had told him that an autopsy had been performed on the bodies in Somerville on Saturday. Dr. Cronk said that he knew that no autopsy had been performed, but that he did not dispute the statement of Mr. Hubbard.

Then Try to Find Hubbard.

This statement seemed to interest Senator Simpson profoundly, and when Dr. Cronk left the stand an effort was made to find Mr. Hubbard, a prospective witness, in the Court. Lieutenant Walter S. Cieculch was dispatched to New Brunswick to find him.

The Jersey City detective said that he had gone to 79 Welton Street, where he was informed that Mr. Hubbard was ill in his home next door. Cieculch said that Mrs. Hubbard ushered him into the parlor. When Mrs. Hubbard asked him to be seated the detective walked over to the settee, where the undertaker was lying beneath an automobile robe. Cieculch said he lifted the robe and found the undertaker fully dressed. The detective said that Hubbard was very angry.

Cieculch reported to Senator Simpson, who obtained the bench warrant, and advised his investigator that unless Mr. Hubbard appeared in court tomorrow—no session being scheduled for today, owing to the observance of Armistice Day—to serve the warrant.

Mr. Hubbard, lying on a couch in the parlor of his home, sick with a cold, asserted last night that Lieutenant Cieculch had threatened to take him forcibly to testify in Somerville.

"I had been going over every day with Drs. Cronk and Smith," Mr. Hubbard said. "For several days I had felt this coming on, and this morning, although I was feeling ill, I got up to go. I dressed and was all ready, although I felt like staying in bed. When it came time to go I simply felt too ill. Dr. Smith, who has been attending me, told me that he would report my illness to Inspector Underwood and that it would be all right.

Couldn't Walk, He Insists.

"The next thing I knew this Cieculch came in. I was lying here as I am now. I was so sick that I had to go on all fours to answer the telephone. I was unable to walk. He pulled the blanket from me, saw that I was dressed, and then threatened to get a warrant and take me away forcibly."

Mr. Hubbard said that he repeated his refusal to move and suggested that Cieculch "go to the devil" for his warrant. The undertaker said he would refuse to go if the Jersey City detective returned. Dr. Smith called after returning from court and after prescribing for his patient declared that he was in no condition to leave the house.

As he recalled the events of four years ago and speaking in connection with the testimony today of Dr. Cronk Mr. Hubbard said this:

"In Middlesex County we always have autopsies when we have deaths under suspicious circumstances. Therefore when Dr. Long, Somerset County physician, had the bodies removed to Somerville the Saturday that they were found I assumed, of course, that an autopsy was in progress and I think I told Dr. Cronk that the bodies were taken to Somerville for that purpose. That is my recollection."

Mr. Hubbard said that in the capacity of an undertaker, not a coroner, and at the request of the Hall family he went to Somerville for the rector's body and returned with it Saturday evening. On Sunday, he said, at the request of James Mills and his daughter, he went to Somerville and brought Mrs. Mills's body back to prepare for burial.

Trial Put Over a Day.

The adjournment of the trial over today was at the suggestion of Senator Simpson, who said he had received protests against the trial proceeding on Armistice Day from American Legion posts. The defense left the matter in the hands of Supreme Court Justice Charles W. Parker and Common Pleas Judge Frank L. Cleary. The Court considered the request until the session was resumed after the luncheon recess.

"We want to say," he said, "after considering the question of holding a session tomorrow, and in view of apparently a very considerable public sentiment, the Court has concluded not to sit. We understand that some inconvenience will be caused, necessarily. We are not unmindful of the fact that the jury is kept segregated for a day, nor are we unmindful of the fact that the defendants have another day to spend, waiting for the processes of the court to go on.

"Notwithstanding that, however, the day is a legal holiday and there appears to be, as we said, a very considerable sentiment. We understand that the jury makes no protest, and we wish to express our appreciation of the patriotic stand taken by the jury in that regard."

Wants Jury to View Scene.

When the session opened in the morning, Senator Simpson suggested that the jurors be taken over the scene of the crime. He asked that "showers," as guides are denominated in legal language, accompany them to point out the places so far mentioned in the testimony.

"The complexity of describing the different lanes and places," he said to the Court, "would perhaps—subject, of course, to the approval of the Court—make it advisable to have this jury see where this crime was committed."

"Do you think the jury could go there without being accompanied by a crowd of many people?" asked Justice Parker.

"Yes, if it was not known when they were to be taken," replied the Senator. "They could be taken, it seems to me, some day after the adjournment of court, and nobody knowing except the Court and the showers. Of course, the Court and counsel are not allowed to go, but the jury and the showers could go."

"The matter will be taken under consideration," said the Court. "Does the defense wish to say anything on it now?"

Senator Case said: "Yes. If it is not known from post to post, it will be the first thing in the case that was not so known; and the situation there is absolutely different from what it was four years ago. The face of the country is entirely changed; and before the Court comes to any conclusion in the matter we wish to be heard on it."

TOTTEN CROSS-EXAMINED.

George D. Totten, who was Somerset County Detective in 1922, was recalled for cross-examination. Totten, a big, slow-spoken man, was one of the first of the Somerset police officers to reach the crabapple tree where the bodies of the rector and Mrs. Mills were found.

Senator Case had the witness correct a clerical mistake in earlier testimony in which Totten was recorded as saying that it was on Sept. 14, 1922, that he went to Franklin Township in Somerset County. Totten said Sept. 16, 1922, was the correct date. The cross-examination proceeded as follows:

Q.—Further along in your testimony you referred to the card which was near the foot of Dr. Hall as having blood spots. Did you mean that? A.—No, sir; if I said blood spots I did not mean it.

Q.—What did you mean? A.—I meant to say they were fly specks.

Q.—I observe also that you speak of his eyeglasses as being spotted. Spotted with what? A.—Fly specks, I took them to be.

Q.—The cards and letters and the like that you observed there when you got at the scene on the 16th of September were scattered about, as I understand you to say, between the waist and the feet? A.—That is the way I remember it, yes.

Q.—Without any particular order, but simply scattered there? A.—That is all, just simply flopped on the ground and scattered as they would.

Q.—Now, I understand you to say that with you at that time were several Somerset County officials, the Sheriff, the County Physician and an assistant of yours? A.—Yes.

Q.—By name Bogart Conklin, and William H. Long, and Joseph Navatta? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you take them with you when you went? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were there any others who went with you? A.—None except the driver of the car.

Q.—What was Navatta's function? A.—He was taken along because we did not know what the nature of this case may have been. We had had considerable trouble from an Italian settlement further up De Russey's Lane.

Q.—But after he got there what use did you make of him? A.—No special use except I directed him to make a survey of the surrounding territory, thinking we might find something that would be of value in the way of clues. He assisted me in that regard.

The Court—Who is this?

The Witness—Mr. Joseph Navatta, the Italian interpreter.

How Clues Were Gathered.

Q.—I suppose that any one of you there that day who found anything picked it up and sort of gathered it together, didn't you? If you found something you put that into Conklin's hands and if Navatta found something he got it in Conklin's hands? A.—That was the purpose.

Q.—You were more concerned, I take it, with gathering up what you could find, and collecting it, than in watching Conklin to see absolutely what he did with it after he got it, is that not so? A.—Well, we were very much concerned in ascertaining what information was possible there as to clues to the murders, and so forth.

Q.—You and Conklin, of course, did not travel side by side like Siamese twins all the time you were there, did you? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You were leaving him to do his business and you were doing yours? A.—Yes, sir.

Totten said he did not remember testifying at the preliminary hearing that he was not positive whether Sheriff Conklin brought the articles, cards and card case away from there or whether they were turned over to Mr. Long, who was present. The questioning continued:

Q.—Being further asked, page 928, the question: "Did you see them in Sheriff Conklin's hands?" Did you answer, "I won't actually say I saw them in his hands, but Mr. Conklin picked them up from the ground; I saw him start to pick them up." Is that right? A.—Yes.

Q.—You remember, however, that some time later, on Saturday, the 16th of September, 1922, these exhibits were placed in your possession? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And how long did they remain in your possession? A.—Until the following Monday or Tuesday, the 18th or 19th of September, when they were taken to New Brunswick.

Q.—Of course, you were not certain who had these articles in the beginning, in their custody; you cannot be sure, can you, Mr. Totten, as to what treatment they received or what prints of fingers may have been placed upon them by others, or what not? You cannot be sure of that, can you? A.—No.

Senator Simpson—I object to that as not proper cross-examination because he has said nothing about fingerprints. He knows nothing about fingerprints. He has not been examined by the State on fingerprints.

The Court—The question goes as to the general manner of the interference with these things while they were in his possession, his lack of knowledge on that. That would include fingerprints and handling by different people, and the possibility of fingerprints on some of those. That seems to be quite proper.

Took Exhibits to New Brunswick.

The former detective said that the reason the exhibits were taken to New Brunswick was because the original investigators had opened headquarters there, although the inquiry, owing to the fact that the site of the crime was just over the Somerset County line, properly should have proceeded in Somerville, the seat of Somerset County. The questions and answers went on:

Q.—Where were the New Brunswick headquarters? A.—In the office of Prosecutor Stricker.

Q.—And when you say "we," are you referring to the joint counties of Somerset and Middlesex? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know who brought them back to Somerville? A.—I am not quite clear, but I have a faint recollection that Mr. Mason and myself brought some of the exhibits back to Somerville prior to the convening of the 1922 Grand Jury, Nov. 20.

Q.—Brought them back for presentation to the Grand Jury? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Have you any recollection of when Mr. Mott, the former prosecutor of Essex County, was placed as Special Assistant Attorney General in charge of the case? A.—Some time in November—on the 28th or 24th of November.

Q.—Wasn't that October? Wasn't it prior to Nov. 7, and aren't those dates you refer to the dates in October? A.—I beg pardon, it is, yes—October.

Q.—When you arrived at the Phillips Lane on the 16th of September, who were there, Mr. Totten? A.—Phillip Lane or the Phillips farm, where the bodies lay?

Q.—We have gotten into the bad habit of calling Phillips Lane what is not Phillips Lane. I am referring to the scene of the crabapple tree near that cross lane you saw from De Russey's Lane. A.—There were a number of people there. The only man I recognized was Mr. Deiner of New Brunswick and a police officer.

Q.—But there were others? A.—There were others, yes.

He Recognized the Card.

Q.—Now, with regard to this card, S-17, I understood you to say that your only means of recognizing this card, thinking this card is the one that you picked up on the scene where the bodies were found, is that it has fly specks? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know where the card case is today, the one that was at the body the day you were there? A.—No, sir.

Q.—This card S-17 that we have referred to, when to your recollection did you last see that card prior to this past Summer, the last day of the preliminary hearing when you say your attention was called to this card in this little room here, when prior to this last mentioned date did you last see that card? A.—The day I delivered the exhibits to New Brunswick, in 1922.

Q.—Who were there at that time? A.—Mr. Fitzpatrick, Mr. David. There were others connected with the office there. I don't just recall who they were.

Q.—Was it examined then for fingerprints? A.—All articles delivered were examined and that card included.

The question about fingerprints was repeated and Senator Simpson objected again that Totten "knows nothing about fingerprints."

Senator Case insisted on his question and the Court said: "If you have nothing to say, the question is overruled." The examination then went on:

Q.—You say there was an examination made then for fingerprints? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know what a fingerprint is? A.—I do when I see one, yes.

Q.—Did you see any fingerprints on that card that night? A.—Nothing visible to the naked eye.

Q.—Nothing visible at that time or any other time prior to the time, this Aug. 19, when you were in this little room here? A.—At no other time.

Pocket in Mrs. Mills's Scarf.

The witness was asked to describe the scarf which had been found wrapped around the head of Mrs. Mills. He said that it was a brown scarf, of knee length, and that it had a pocket in it. Senator Case's question about the pocket was for the purpose of suggesting, later in the case that the love letters found at the scene were carried out there by Mrs. Mills in that pocket. James Mills, her husband, testified last Friday that he had seen several letters in the pocket of his wife's scarf. The State contends that the love letters, all written by Mrs. Mills, were brought to the locale of the murder by Mrs. Hall.

The questioning continues:

Q.—Was there anything in that pocket when you observed the scarf? A.—I believe there was a handkerchief and a powder puff.

Q.—That handkerchief is the one that is in evidence as S-57? (Showing witness Exhibit S-57). A.—I am not quite positive of it.

Q.—There was something that looked like a lady's handkerchief in the pocket of the scarf? A.—Yes.

Q.—But whether this is the one you are not quite certain? A.—I am not quite positive of it.

Q.—Now S-59 is the exhibit of Mr. Hall's eye glasses, which now appear in very broken condition, even the glass apparently being broken. I want to ask you whether so far as you were able to observe when you found the body and when the eye glasses were removed these eye glasses were in proper condition. A.—They were.

Q.—And in proper place on his nose and eyes? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know how they were broken like this? A.—I do not, sir.

The Court—I would like to see those glasses. (Glasses handed to the Court).

The Court—All right.

Q.—I understood you to say that there was another handkerchief there somewhere or taken from the scene, a man's handkerchief. Was there a handkerchief with the letter H on it, was there any handkerchief found there? A.—I have testified on direct that I do not recall any handkerchief there with the letter H on it, seeing one that had been taken from the scene.

Q.—Were there some things there by the bodies that have not been produced here? For instance, something has been said about a dental appointment card. Was there a dental appointment card there which has not been produced? A.—I have a recollection of such a card or slip of paper.

Q.—As having been found there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you see that among the things produced? A.—I have not as yet, no, sir.

Case and Simpson Clash

Here Senator Simpson interjected: "And you won't, either." Senator Case objected to the interruption and the prosecutor replied that he objected to the "insinuation that we are trying to suppress some of these exhibits."

The Court overruled the objection and the cross-examination was resumed thus:

Q.—You were asked some questions here the other day about some pieces of clothing that were said to belong to William Stevens. Where did they come from, do you know? A.—I believe they were taken from Mr. Stevens's home for examination.

Q.—They were not found at the scene of the crime, were they? A.—No, sir.

Q.—I am calling your attention to what Mrs. Hall said to you, your testimony regarding the statement made by her to you and Mr. Beekman subsequent to the murder. A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—I am asking you whether what Mrs. Hall said to you with respect to going to the church was not in essence that she wanted to go to the church and see if Mr. Hall was there, and she went there and found the church was dark. Is that not in essence what she said? A.—That she went to the church for the purpose of ascertaining whether Dr. Hall had fallen asleep in the church or not. Now, I don't recall that she said that she actually went into the church or whether she got there and found the church was dark and did not enter. I am not clear in my mind about that. But she started for the church for that purpose, as I recall it. I don't recall my testimony given in the direct, but——

Q.—But what you are now saying is the fact? A.—As I recall it, yes.

The Wound in Victim's Neck.

Q.—You have testified about the wound in Mrs. Mills's neck. Have you been a county detective engaged in the investigation of crime for a number of years? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You have had experience with murders and wounds, observing them and the cause of them. A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Could that wound in Mrs. Mills's neck, as you observed it there that day, have been produced by other than a very sharp knife or sharp instrument of some kind? A.—I did not see enough of it on that day to pass an opinion. I only saw a small portion of it.

Q.—Did you afterwards see more of it? A.—At the autopsy in New Brunswick and in the undertaker's establishment in Somerville after the wound had been cleaned.

Q.—With the knowledge thus gained, would you say, could that wound have been produced by other than a very sharp instrument? A.—No, sir. The opinion I formed at that time was that the wound had been produced by a very sharp instrument. That is my opinion.

Q.—Now, referring to the bullets that have been spoken of here and which were mentioned in your direct testimony, and the cartridge shells, do you know whether or not they have been outside of the State of New Jersey? A.—I have no personal knowledge to that effect.

The last time he had seen the bullets before their production at this trial was prior to the Grand Jury investigation of 1922, Totten said. They were then in various receptacles, with the exhibit that went before the 1922 Grand Jury. They were in charge, he testified, of Mr. Beekman. The questioning went on:

He Got Them in 1922.

Q.—And when before that did you see them? A.—They were turned over to my possession in 1922, some time prior to the investigation. If you will allow me to refresh my memory here—

Q.—These are your notes, I suppose? A.—Yes, sir. On Oct. 4 they came into my possession.

Q.—From whom? A.—From a gentleman in Prosecutor Stricker's office in Perth Amboy. I think the gentleman's name is Mr. Waite.

Q.—Who is Mr. Waite? A.—He is supposed to be an expert in firearms, and so forth.

Q.—Where did he come from? A.—Well, I understood he came from—he was located in New York.

Q.—It was from him you got them? A.—Yes; I delivered the articles, including the eyeglasses, and so forth, to the office at New Brunswick.

Q.—Do you recall, Mr. Totten, the condition of the ground on the 16th day of September, 1922, at the Phillips farm? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was it? A.—Very dry and hard.

Q.—In the course of your investigation of this case, do you know whether Mr. William Stevens, the defendant here, was examined by the prosecuting authorities? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Where? A.—In New Brunswick.

Q.—How many times? A.—I think one or two occasions; I know it was on one occasion especially.

Q.—Was he there alone? A.—Yes.

Q.—No counsel with him or friend? A.—No counsel with him, no.

Q.—Came there willingly? A.—Yes.

Senator Simpson—I object to that as calling for a conclusion on the part of this witness.

The Court—Is the question pressed?

Mr. McCarter—That is all.

Simpson Takes the Witness.

Redirect examination by Senator Simpson.

Q.—When you went to the scene of this crime were you and the Sheriff ever separated or out of each other's sight at the time he was picking up the exhibits? A.—Well, we were not separated, nor out of each other's sight except, perhaps, I might have been in some of the bushes just for a second or two, that is all.

Q.—Did he pick up all the exhibits, or did you pick up some of them? A.—I think he picked them all up.

Q.—You recall that you testified about this before the Grand Jury in 1922, didn't you? A.—No, sir.

Totten was unable to remember his Grand Jury appearance, although Senator Simpson pressed him strenuously to jog his recollection. Senator Case accused his adversary of trying to get evidence before the jury "in an unlawful way." The re-direct went on:

Q.—These exhibits that you turned over in company with Mr. Beekman to the Warden of the jail—did you turn over all you had? A.—All we had, yes.

Q.—You did not hold anything out? A.—Absolutely not.

Q.—You do not know how it comes that in these exhibits there are no affidavits or statements of any witnesses except the affidavits of some one witness who seems to attack the evidence of the other witnesses for the State—do you?

Senator Case objected to the question. Senator Simpson, in arguing that it be allowed, revealed that the witness who made the affidavit was "a woman named Russell."

"I did not say," the prosecutor continued, "that the contents of the affidavit were antagonistic to the State. I said the witness was antagonistic. She might have made an affidavit in favor of the State. I am not discussing that."

Scratches on Mrs. Mills's Arm.

Q.—Mr. Totten, did Mrs. Mills's body have any scratches on her arm? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where were those scratches? A.—Around the arm here (indicating) and across the back of the hand.

Q.—This powder puff, do you know whether that was turned over to the Warden of the jail or not? A.—It was not. That was all moth eaten, the same as the scarf.

Q.—The scarf was not turned over? A.—No.

Q.—When was the last time you saw that leather case, Mr. Totten? A.—You mean the cardcase?

Q.—Yes. A.—That was delivered to New Brunswick.

Q.—The dental appointment card? A.—That also went to New Brunswick.

Q.—Whether you got it back you don't know? A.—No.

Q.—This man, Waite, you say you got bullets from him, did you see the bullets turned over to Waite? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you know that the man Waite was a man employed by The New York World at the time of the homicide to endeavor to ascertain anything about the homicide, or did you know anything about Waite? A.—I understood that he was.

Q.—And who gave you these bullets? A.—He returned them to me.

Q.—Where were you when he returned them to you? A.—In Prosecutor Stricker's office at Perth Amboy.

Q.—Here is a card your Honor has sealed in this envelope. I want to take it out of the envelope, with the permission of the Court.

The Court—Certainly.

Q.—I show you S-73 and S-90, do those look like the cards you turned over to the prosecutor's office in New Brunswick along with another card of the same kind? A.—They do, yes.

Q.—At the time you turned this card over, which you testify to, S-17, there had been no development or attempted development of fingerprints on it, had there? A.—Had not, no, sir.

Senator Case—The prosecutor objected strenuously—

Q.—I withdraw it. At the time you turned this card over to the office of Mr. Stricker in New Brunswick did it have any of these black marks on it? A.—It did not. It was perfectly plain, the same as these other cards, with the exception of fly specks.

Other Cards Were in Case.

The witness then testified that the only calling card he saw outside the rector's cardcase was the one near Dr. Hall's foot, which the State says bears Willie Stevens's fingerprints. He was positive that the others were all in the leather case. This point, offset in a minor way, the steady fire of the defense that the cards, in fact all the exhibits, were not protected by the 1922 investigator then or since.

Totten was asked by Senator Simpson whether he had testified previously that Mrs. Hall had said that when Dr. Hall had not come home, she had awakened her brother, Willie, and they went to the church to see if it had been possible Dr. Hall had fallen asleep in the church; that they did not find him there and they went to the Mills house; that they found that the house was dark; so they returned immediately to their home and entered by the back gate. To that, Totten replied he did not remember that she actually said she had entered the church. The questioning proceeded:

Q.—You are not clear as to what that conversation was? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Well, at the time of that conversation up to what day and hour had she got at the time you asked the question?

Senator Case—I object to this. This is not redirect.

After an argument between counsel this line of questioning was abandoned. Totten said that the destruction of the scarf and powder puff, by moths, had taken place in 1923. Senator Simpson then asked:

Schwartz Took Exhibits.

Q.—There was a shirt, too. Do you know what became of that, Dr. Hall's shirt? A.—I cannot remember. I have some faint recollection, however, that Mr. Schwartz on the first day of November took something back to Newark with him for the purpose of examination for fingerprints.

Q.—Where did he take them from? Do you know? A.—From the prosecutor's office at New Brunswick; that is the recollection I have of that circumstance.

Q.—Do you know what he took? A.—Whether it was the shirt or not I don't recall, but I am under the impression that it was the shirt.

Q.—Who was present when Mr. Schwartz took the shirt, of which you are sure, and perhaps other articles back?

Senator Case—I object to the remark.

The Court—Why?

Senator Case—"And perhaps other articles," which is the testimony of the examiner.

Q.—Is your memory clear when you remember that Mr. Schwartz took the shirt for examination, as to whether he took anything else with him? A.—Now, then, I did not see him take the shirt away. Actually, he made the remark he would like to take the shirt, thought he had best take it to his laboratory for examination. I did not actually see him take the shirt away.

Q.—Who was there when he made that remark. A.—All the investigators were there. The shirt has disappeared and I cannot trace it.

Q.—The cuff buttons. What became of them? A.—I don't know what became of those cuff buttons, except what I have been told.

Q.—You were not in the office when any inquiry was made by a lawyer for them? A.—In Prosecutor Beekman's office, yes.

Q.—You were connected with Prosecutor Beekman's office when some lawyer in New Brunswick asked for the cuff buttons? A.—There is some correspondence in regard to that. I replied to a letter making request for the cuff buttons.

Q.—Do you know who the lawyer was? A.—No, sir; but I think the request came from Prosecutor Joseph E. Stricker's office.

He Quotes Willie Stevens.

Totten then told how he had brought Willie Stevens to the Middlesex prosecutor's office in the course of the 1922 investigation. He described the ride from the Hall home down to the court house in New Brunswick. The transcript proceeded:

Q.—What did he say, if anything? A.—He had not much to say on the way down there; he was very quiet.

Q.—Well, do you remember anything he said? A.—Yes. On the way out, from the Court House, he said to me, "Do you think they suspect me?" I said, "Why do you think that?" The answer was not given. He was trying to dodge a battery of camera men and had his hat over his face.

Q.—You were being annoyed by photographers? A.—Yes, we were. The reply was uet elven.

Q.—You did not get any reply when you asked: "Why do you say that?" A.—No, sir.

Q.—And what about the clothing? Do you know of your own knowledge why his clothing was taken down for examination rather than anybody else's? A.—No, not absolutely.

Q.—Do you know who took the clothing then? A.—Some of the officers, the investigators, I don't know exactly who did take them down.

Q.—Do you remember any other murder case that you worked on in Somerset County—you have been the Prosecutor's detective, how long did you say? A.—Thirty-four years.

Q.—Do you remember any other murder case where you took it to another prosecutor in another part of the State? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Do you know of any other murder case where you took these people to the county where the defendants or possible defendants lived? A.—No, sir.

Senator Simpson—That is all.

Defense Questions Totten.

Re-cross-examination by Senator Case:

Q.—And why was this done in this case, Mr. Totten? A.—Well, because of the close proximity to Middlesex County, in which the alleged crime was committed, and the witnesses that were necessary to be interrogated were all in Middlesex County. Prosecutor Stricker offered us the use of his office and offered the use of his investigators, and that offer was accepted by Mr. Beekman, and we immediately made our headquarters in Prosecutor Stricker's office in New Brunswick.

Q.—Now you have answered some questions of Senator Simpson's regarding one of the occasions when William Stevens was taken for examination before the prosecuting authorities at New Brunswick, and he made no objection to going, did he? A.—Absolutely not.

Q.—Answered all the questions freely, did he not? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Answered them satisfactorily? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And you were going out with him when this remark was made? A.—I was leading Willie through the crowd myself.

Q.—Do you remember you were alongside of him? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And he knew you were, didn't he? A.—I think so.

Q.—He knew that a good many people had been apprehended by you, didn't he? A.—Perhaps he did; I don't know what his thoughts were.

Q.—And all he said to you was: "Do you think they suspect me?" A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And you did not answer him, except by asking another question? A.—No.

Q.—And before he had a chance to answer that question, the bombardment of cameras began? A.—It did.

Says He Was Discouraged.

Q.—And he tried to shield himself with his hat? A.—He did. He had his hat over his face, his arm was yanked down and he was very much discouraged.

Q.—And he did not press the question? A.—No.

Q.—He was also down here at Somerville for examination, wasn't he, Mr. Totten? A.—Yes.

Q.—Mr. Totten, how many times while this inquiry was on did you see William Stevens to talk with him about the case? A.—Only two or three occasions, I think.

Q.—Where were the places? A.—In New Brunswick and Somerville.

Q.—Was he alone? A.—Yes, except for the interviewers that were here.

Q.—How many interviewers? A.—Mr. Beekman, Mr. Toolan, Mr. David, Captain Lamb of the State Police, and myself; that is all I recall.

Q.—How long did that examination continue? A.—Several hours.

Q.—How long had the examination been at the close of which this remark was made by William of which you make mention? A.—That remark was made after he had made the statement in the Prosecutor's office in New Brunswick.

In reply to Senator Case the witness said that he had not heard the questions put to Stevens while he was being "put through the grill." He was then excused.

DR. HEGEMAN TESTIFIES.

Dr. Runkle Hegeman, who performed an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Mills and one on Dr. Hall, four years ago, was called. The examination was as follows:

Q.—Who performed the autopsy on Mrs. Mills? A.—I did.

Q.—Will you state what you found? A.—I found that Mrs. Mills had been shot three times in the head, each bullet having penetrated the brain, one having passed through the brain and out of the other side, and the other two still lying in the skull cavity, the other two bullets. The throat had been cut apparently from left to right, a very long, deep cut, severing all of the skin of the neck except four inches in the mid-line in the back. The muscles were cut down to the spinal column. Both large arteries and veins carrying blood to and from the head were severed. The windpipe was severed and the gullet or esophagus was severed.

Q.—Did you find the tongue had been cut out and the larynx—

The Court: Don't lead. (To the witness): Did you find anything about the tongue and larynx? A.—I did not open the mouth and saw no evidence that it had been disturbed.

Q.—What do you say now as to whether the tongue was missing when you made the autopsy. The upper part of the windpipe and the larynx were missing when you made the autopsy? A.—May I explain a little bit about the condition of the neck?

Q.—You had been a physician how long when you made the autopsy? A.—Since 1910.

Q.—Did you find this condition which I said, when you made the autopsy? A.—I didn't discover any such condition.

Q.—Well, what were you making the autopsy for? A.—To try to determine how this woman had been killed.

Q.—And as you describe it to the jury, the head was practically cut off, wasn't it? A.—All but the spinal column and a little bit in the back.

Q.—You tell this jury now that you cannot tell them whether or not the tongue was cut out, the larynx and windpipe, a portion thereof, gone when you made the autopsy? A.—I saw no evidence that such was the case.

Q.—Then you saw her tongue there, did you? A.—No.

—The body had been buried before you made the autopsy, hadn't it? A.—Yes.

Q.—And was disinterred for the purpose of the autopsy? A.—Yes.

Doesn't Know Who Got Bullets.

Q.—What did you do with the bullets that you took out? A.—I turned them over to one of those present and they, I think, were put in an envelope or a box.

Q.—Who did you turn them over to, do you know? A.—No.

Q.—You realized that the bullets were important? A.—Yes.

Q.—Can't you tell us who you gave those bullets to that you took out of this head? A.—No, sir.

The witness said that when he left the body it was in charge of the undertaker, Hubbard, and that the autopsy had been at Hubbard's morgue. The autopsy had been made, Dr. Hegeman said, at the request of Mr. Totten.

The examination went on:

Q.—Now, I will ask you, without going into details—as I understand you, you cannot say whether or not at the time of the autopsy was made the tongue was cut out and the larynx and top of the windpipe; you don't know that, is that it? A.—Yes.

Q.—You did not make any observation that would advise you of that? A.—I observed nothing that would indicate it.

Q.—Did you observe anything it would not indicate it? A.—Yes.

Q.—In other words can you say that you made such an examination that you can now say under oath that at the time you made the autopsy the tongue was in and the upper part of the windpipe and the larynx—will you say they were all there when you made the autopsy? A.—No, I won't, but I can say what I think.

Q.—I don't want you to say it. You saw the thing. Your opinion is no good as to whether I have an index finger on my left hand.

Cross examination by Senator Case:

Q.—What is your opinion, doctor?

Senator Simpson—I object to that.

The Court—Answer the question.

A.—There was no evidence around the mouth of violence except the wound on the upper lip.

Q.—What is your opinion as to whether it was removed at that time or not? A.—My opinion is that it probably was not.

Q.—This wound in the mouth that you have mentioned, the wound on the lip or near the lip, what was your opinion at the time as to the cause of that wound? A.—When I saw it first I thought undoubtedly it was a bullet wound, it looked just like the others, but when I probed it it did not penetrate to the bone. It was possibly just through the lip.

Q.—Might it have been made by a bullet grazing? A.—No. It could have been made by a spent bullet, in my opinion.

DR. CRONK ON STAND.

The name of ex-State Senator W. Edwin Florance, who was Mrs. Hall's attorney four years ago, came into the trial for the first time through the testimony of Dr. Edward I. Cronk, who was the next witness. He is the Health Officer of New Brunswick. Dr. Cronk is a small man, with a brown face, whose hair, parted in the middle, was carefully combed over his temples. His examination follows:

Q.—When did you first see the body of Eleanor Mills? A.—The day following its return from Somerville.

Q.—On a Sunday? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—That would be the 17th? A.—If that is the date; it was a Sunday.

Q.—And you opened up the wound that had been previously made by the County Physician in the abdomen, did you? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Why did you do that? A.—I did it in order to determine whether any organs were missing, and also to determine whether she was in a certain condition.

Q.—Who requested you to do that? A.—I was requested by Mr. Hubbard, the undertaker, to make the examination and identification of the body.

Q.—That is not my question. Who requested you to open the wound and ascertain whether or not any organs were missing or whether she was in this state? A.—No one.

Q.—Then why did you do it? You had not been retained by this county? A.—No.

Q.—The question is, why did you go to the undertaker's shop, having no connection with Somerset County, in which the murder was committed, and open up the wound in the abdomen of this woman? Was it at the request of her husband? A.—It was not.

Q.—You did it, though, didn't you? A.—I did.

Q.—Who sent you to the shop? A.—I was not sent to the shop.

Q.—Well, how did you go there? You do not go to every undertaker's shop and open up the abdomen of every woman who is found murdered, do you? A.—No, sir. I will tell you exactly how I went there if you will let me tell my story from the beginning.

Q.—I don't want your story. I want to know if you went there of your own accord? A.—No, I did not.

Insists No One Sent Him.

Q.—Then who sent you there? A.—No one sent me there.

Q.—Well, if you did not go there of your own accord did any one speak to you about going there? A.—No, sir.

Q.—And you did not go there of your own accord? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Then how did you get there? A.—I will tell you. I was in Mr. Hubbard's office on a matter of business pertaining to my office, and while in Mr. Hubbard's office—that is, the undertaker I am speaking of—on Sunday morning Mr. Hubbard asked me to identify the bodies of Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills by request of ex-Senator Florance for the purpose of identification. That is how it happened.

Q.—Did Hubbard tell you that Senator Florance, who was the attorney, as I understand it, for Mrs. Hall, wanted you to open up the abdomen in the body of Mrs. Mills and find out certain things. A.—No.

Q.—All you were asked to do was to identify? A.—Yes.

Q.—It was not necessary to identify with a knife, was it? A.—No.

The prosecutor kept hard after the witness, asking him why he had examined the body, though neither the husband nor children of the slain woman had asked him to do so. Senator Case interrupted to say that this was cross-examination and asked whether the witness was "put on to be badgered." The witness said he had not used a knife but had "simply removed the suture." The Court then asked, "Why did you open the body?"

The reply was:

A.—Because there was concealed evidence in the head and I thought it was my purpose to know whether there was concealed evidence in the abdomen.

Senator Simpson resumed questioning:

Q.—You were not working on the body officially then. I am talking about Sunday. You had not been hired to make any autopsy then. According to you, you were a casual visitor in the office of an undertaker, talking a matter of business? A.—I am talking about this particular Sunday.

Q.—Yes, I am not talking about any autopsy. A.—I still insist that I am speaking about this particular Sunday, and it was on this Sunday that in my course of identification I found that there was concealed evidence in the head of Mrs. Mills.

Q.—What was that concealed evidence? A.—Now I can tell you more explicitly. In my process of identification I found that there were three bullet wounds in the head of Mrs. Mills. I found there were bullet points of entrance and no corresponding points of exit. I therefore knew that there were bullets within the skull of that particular head, and I felt on the left side of the head what was apparently a bullet between the scalp and the skull. I then inquired if there had been an autopsy held on the body of Mrs. Mills and was told that there had been.

Q.—Had been an autopsy on Sunday? A.—No, I inquired if there had been a previous—if there had been any autopsy held on the body of Mrs. Mills.

Q.—And you were told what? A.—And was told that there had been in Somerville.

Q.—Who told you that? A.—The undertaker, Mr. Hubbard.

Q.—You are positive about that? A.—I am very positive about it.

Q.—What time of the day did Hubbard tell you that there had been an autopsy made in Somerville? A.—In the morning, about 11 o'clock.

Simpson Rebukes Case.

Senator Case—You have not allowed the witness yet to tell why he did it.

Senator Simpson—I don't know why that gives you so much agony. You can find that out on cross-examination when it comes your time to cross-examine. Please don't interrupt me.

Q.—You have said as a result of a request made by Mr. Hubbard, who in turn told you that Senator Florance wanted it, is that right? A.—Senator Florance phoned while I was in Mr. Hubbard's office.

Q.—What did he phone, or did Hubbard get the message? A.—Hubbard got the message, Mr. Hubbard answered the phone.

Q.—When you went into that undertaking shop you didn't have any idea of doing anything in the way of examination, did you? A.—I had no knowledge of it whatever.

Q.—You did not know a body was in there? A.—I did not.

Q.—While you were in there Senator Florance phoned and as a result of something Mr. Hubbard said after he phoned you did what you did? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—How long did that take, that examination? A.—Not over half an hour.

Q.—What was the result of it? Did you find any of her organs were missing? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Now, I will ask you, without going into details—as I understand you, you cannot say whether or not at the time the autopsy was made the tongue was cut out and the larynx and the top of the windpipe; you don't know that, is that it? A.—Yes.

He Tells of the Autopsy.

Asked about the concealed evidence in the head and the bullet wounds and whether he had opened them up or looked at the wounds in the throat, the witness replied, "No." He testified he had been called in to assist in the autopsy after the bodies were exhumed and the official autopsy was held in Middlesex County. He was asked, he said, to be present with Drs. Smith and Hegeman, who performed the autopsy, and in the presence of Dr. Long. The examination then went on.

Q.—Will you tell us what you did in the way of performing it? A.—I had no active part in it; I took down the transcript of the notes as they were dictated by Dr. Hegeman of Somerville.

Q.—You did not open her mouth and look to see if the tongue was cut out? A.—I did not; no, sir.

Q.—Do you remember whether he dictated to you anything about the tongue being cut out? A.—I do not.

Q.—You are positive about that? A.—Very positive.

Q.—You made no examination that would enable you to tell these gentlemen whether, when the autopsy was over, the tongue was in or out of the mouth; you made no such examination? A.—No, sir.

Q.—When you made your report as to your Sunday examination whom did you make it to—Hubbard? A.—No, Prosecutor Stricker of Middlesex County.

Q.—The Sunday examination Hubbard asked you to make, didn't he? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell Hubbard what you found? A.—No, sir, Mr. Hubbard wasn't present when I left.

Q.—Did you leave word what you found? A.—Mr. Darling, his assistant, was present at the time.

Q.—Were you ever a physician of any of these defendants? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You never attended them professionally? A.—Not at any time.

Q.—You knew them? A.—Yes.

Q.—You did not hear the message Senator Florance gave to Hubbard over the phone? A.—No, sir; I did not hear that. I only heard Hubbard's request.

Q.—Will you tell us now why you went through the wound in the abdomen?

Senator Case—At last!

Senator Simpson—Better late than never, Senator.

A.—I opened the wounds in the abdomen to determine whether or not there was any concealed evidence.

Q.—Concealed evidence of what? A.—Whether any organs were missing or not. Inasmuch as no autopsy had been held, the skull had not been removed, and I knew the bullets therein contained—that that information belonged to the authorities.

Q.—You testified a moment ago an autopsy had been held. A.—I did testify that I was told an autopsy had been held. That was hearsay.

Q.—That was after. When you were told an autopsy had been held did you believe it? A.—No, sir; I knew there had been no autopsy held.

Q.—Did you ask Hubbard why he told you there had been one when you knew there had been none? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You speak of concealed evidence. What do you mean by that? A.—Perhaps I have not made that plain. Inasmuch as there were bullets contained in the head that I knew should be in the hands of the authorities it was concealed evidence because there were points of entrance and no points of exit of the bullets; therefore the bullets must have been proved to be in the skull.

He Told the Prosecutor.

The Court asked the witness whether, by concealed evidence in the head, he meant the bullets. The reply was "Yes." Questioned by Senator Simpson, Dr. Cronk said he knew these bullets ought to be in the hands of the prosecutor and admitted he did nothing to prevent the burial of the body with those bullets in the head.

"I reported as I have stated to the prosecutor," the witness asserted. The examination then went on:

Q.—Then you did do something, if you reported. Did you report that before the body was buried? A.—Mrs. Mills's body, as I remember it, was buried on Monday following this Sunday; the hour I could not say; but the report was given to Prosecutor Stricker in his office in the courthouse, New Brunswick, Monday morning.

Q.—Before the funeral? A.—I don't know.

Q.—What time did you tell Prosecutor Stricker there were bullets in the head of a woman who was buried without an autopsy?

Senator Case—I object to this.

A.—My memory is not clear, but it was about 9:30, between 9 and 10 in the morning, before my office hours.

Q.—And you do not know what time the funeral took place? A.—No.

Q.—You say you looked in the abdomen because you knew there was concealed evidence in the head. What had concealed evidence in the head to do with your looking in the abdomen? A.—Only this: that there was concealed evidence in the head, and I inferred there might possibly be further evidence that the authorities should have pertaining to the abdomen.

Q.—That is as to the removal of organs? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then your examination was to determine about a certain condition, too, according to you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you do that at Hubbard's request? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You have already said he asked you to do it. Did you mean that?

Senator Case—I do not think so.

Q.—What did Hubbard tell you to do? A.—Hubbard asked me to go into the morgue to identify the bodies of the Rev. Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills.

Q.—Then you looked into the wound without anybody telling you, is that it? A.—That abdominal wound, yes.

Q.—Because there was concealed evidence in the head? A.—Yes. I thought there might be additional evidence that the authorities should have.

Q.—Did you know who made the wound in the abdomen. A.—No, sir, not of my own knowledge.

Senator Simpson—That's all.

Cross-examination by Senator Case:

Q.—Was there pregnancy? A.—No, sir.

Q.—What official position do you hold, if any, in New Brunswick? A.—Health Officer of the City of New Brunswick and Registrar of Vital Statistics.

On redirect examination by Senator Simpson the physician said he had read in a New Brunswick newspaper an account of the murders in which both persons were identified before he went to the Hubbard establishment. There were many oral conflicts between Senator Case and Senator Simpson, and in one of them the defense attorney said that the special prosecutor had "tabloid on the brain—a tabloid complex," the statement arising from the projection of The Daily Mirror, a tabloid newspaper, into the trial.

Dr. Hegeman was recalled for further examination and contributed details of the autopsy performed on the body of Dr. Hall in the Kings County Morgue, Brooklyn, on Oct. 4, 1922. He also reported that abrasions were found on the clergyman's hands and arms.

DR. SMITH'S TESTIMONY.

The next witness was Dr. A. Smith, another of the doctors who took part in the autopsies. He said that he had attended Mrs. Mills in January, 1922, when she was in the Middlesex County Hospital, New Brunswick. He had been made attending physician by Dr. Hall. The examination was:

Q.—What arrangement did you have with Dr. Hall about giving her medical attention? A.—She came to my office and I told her she would have to have——

Q.—I don't want your conversation with her. I want to know what arrangement Dr. Hall made for you to attend to her. A.—That he would pay me $10 a month for twenty months—$200.

Q.—Then after you did the work, who paid you? Him? A.—Partially; $30.

Q.—Well, what was the arrangement between you and him as to payment? Did he say anything about a church fund, or about collecting money, or her husband, or anything of the kind? A.—He said he had a church fund from which he could pay such bills.

Q.—How much was the bill? A.—Two hundred dollars.

Q.—Were you the family physician of Dr. Hall? A.—Dr. Hall? No.

Q.—Were you the family physician of the Hall family? A.—No.

Q.—Did you see Mrs. Mills at the hospital? A.—Yes.

Q.—And did you ever see Dr. Hall there while she was at the hospital? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And how often did you see him there? A.—Oh, quite frequently; every day or so.

Q.—Did he stay long? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you observe anything in his attitude toward her of an affectionate nature or non-affectionate nature? A.—No, I did not.

Q.—But you say he called every day? A.—Well, practically; I do not know whether every day.

Q.—Did you see her husband call every day. A.—No.

Q.—Do you remember how many times you saw her husband, if you saw him at all at the hospital?

Says Mills Was Accused.

Senator Case—I object to that.

Senator Simpson—It seems to me he went into it on cross-examination—they wanted to show to the jury that this man Mills had killed this woman; they talked about his knife and all that. I want to show how often, if at all, Mr. Mills was at the hospital.

The Court—The question is whether you are not anticipating a little.

Senator Simpson—That may be.

Q.—Did you ever see Mrs. Hall, in company with Dr. Hall, at the hospital while Mrs. Mills was there? A.—Not in company with Dr. Hall.

Q.—You were present at the autopsy, Doctor? A.—Yes.

Q.—Both autopsies? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you examine to see whether the tongue had been cut out and the larynx removed, and the windpipe? A.—We opened the wound and found the larynx retracted upward.

Q.—Did you see the larynx there? A.—I did.

Q.—Was it all there? A.—I don't know.

Q.—You did not examine to see if it was all there? A.—No.

Q.—Did you examine to see if the tongue was there? A.—No.

Q.—What in your opinion was this wound in the neck made with, a sharp or a blunt instrument? A.—A very sharp instrument.

Q.—Could it have been made with a sharp razor? A.—Yes.

Dr. Smith Cross-Examined.

Senator Case cross-examined the witness. Dr. Smith said the wound in the neck was a "very serious one" and very deep. The cross-examination went on:

Q.—Are there muscles that are thick though flexible that have to be penetrated in order to make a cut like that? A.—Yes.

Q.—Would it not require a firm grip on the weapon in order to enable the perpetrator to make a cut like that? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, a razor—you are speaking of the old type razor—has a very flexible joint, hasn't it, between the handle and the blade? A.—Yes.

Q.—Is it at all likely that the perpetrator could get such a grip on the handle of the razor like that as to make a wound like the one you saw? A.—I think so.

Q.—You think he could have gotten it? A.—Yes.

Q.—How would he get the grip like that? A.—Over the portion of the razor that goes up to the handle (illustrating).

Q.—Could you tell whether it was one cut or two? A.—I think it was two places.

Q.—Could you tell from which side these cuts were made? A.—One of them was made from left to right.

Q.—Yes; and the other? A.—I don't know whether the other was that same way or not.

Q.—When you examined that wound in the neck you did observe, I understood you to say, that the larynx above the cut was still there. A.—It was retracted, above.

Q.—Retracted but still there? A.—Yes. I will say this: To my memory the larynx was there—the larynx was there—but as to swearing it was there, I could not do that, but it is my memory that it was there.

Q.—You were asked about the present of Mrs. Hall at the hospital while Mrs. Mills was there. You said you did not see her there with Dr. Hall. You saw her there at other times, didn't you, doctor, with Mrs. Mills, visiting the hospital? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, what was the operation performed then upon Mrs. Mills? A.—A removal of the kidney.

On redirect examination, Senator Simpson asked the witness whether the wound could have been made with a razor which the prosecutor exhibited. The doctor said he thought it could have. Senator Case objected to that question on the ground that there was no razor in evidence. The Court remarked that the question had already been answered and allowed it to stand. As he asked that the razor be marked for identification, the prosecutor said: "Don't touch it with your fingers." He then resumed examining the witness as follows:

Q.—You showed Senator Case with two yellow lead pencils how the thing could be held. Can you demonstrate, enlarging the illustration you gave him, with this razor, how that could be held to make the wound? A.—I should think that way (illustrating).

Q.—Will you show how the wound could be made—the cut—don't do it on yourself? A.—Like that (illustrating).

DR. SCHULTZE RECALLED.

Dr. Otto Schultze, medical assistant to District Attorney Banton of Manhattan, who had testified on Tuesday that his autopsy, performed on Oct. 26, had shown the larynx, tongue and windpipe to have been cut out, was recalled. He differed from Dr. Smith's contention that the larynx and trachea were identical. Senator Simpson had planned to call another of the autopsy physicians, Dr. John Lahey of Bound Brook, but informed the Court that the doctor was ill.

ALPAUGH ON THE STAND.

Charles J. Alpaugh, the next on the stand, proved to be an earnest, convincing witness, but one who was decidedly nervous. He said that on the murder night he was driving a bus in Easton Avenue, near De Russey's Lane. He was bound to Somerville with firemen who had been attending a picnic at Red Bank. He testified:

Q.—What did you see? A.—I seen two cars standing there.

Q.—What kind of cars? A.—One was a Cadillac coupe and the other one was a Dodge.

Q.—A Dodge sedan, a Dodge coupe, a Dodge touring car—what was it? A.—A Dodge sedan.

Q.—Were the lights on or off? A.—Off.

Q.—Were the curtains up or down? A.—I could not tell you that.

Q.—In which direction were the automobiles with reference to Bound Brook? Were they nearer to Bound Brook or nearer to De Russey's Lane? A.—Nearer to De Russey's Lane.

Q.—Which way was the Dodge sedan pointing? A.—It was pointing toward New Brunswick.

Q.—How near was it to De Russey's Lane? A.—As far as I know it was about 20 feet back of the lane toward Bound Brook.

Q.—Was there any bank there, bank of earth? A.—There was at the time.

Q.—Did you see any people come down the bank? A.—I did.

Q.—How many? A.—Either two or three persons.

Q.—How far away were you from them? A.—Probably a couple of hundred feet.

Q.—Did you see them do anything in reference to the Dodge sedan? A.—I did not see anything else, but they were standing on the bank when I first seen them.

Q.—Then what happened? A.—Then they slid down on to the car as far as I know.

Q.—Slid down on to the car? A.—Down to the car.

Q.—Where the car was, where the Dodge sedan was? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You did not see whether they got into the Dodge sedan, did you? A.—I did not.

He Lost Sight of Them.

Q.—How near was the nearest you were to them? A.—I did not see them after that; when I came down over this little hill my lights showed upon this car, and my lights showed up on the car they speak of and down them out of sight of my lights.

Q.—How near the Dodge sedan did they slide down? A.—I imagine they came up right against it, as far as I could see.

Q.—From that position? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Had you noticed anybody before you saw them in any kind of car running anywhere near the garage? A.—I did.

Q.—How far was that from the place where you saw the Dodge sedan? A.—Probably a quarter of a mile.

Q.—What kind of a car were they in? A.—It was a touring car.

Q.—How did they act that attracted your attention? A.—Well, first when I was caused any attention to them; I was driving with the curtains on the side, and every time I would look ahead my attention was drawn to those drivers say I am here, and my curtains was down, and those headlights was very hot, and they were driving just as that I could see the headlights. I was driving at a very moderate rate of speed and I seen their headlights; they followed me two blocks that way, just at the edge of that where the trolley comes out, as you call it, Easton Avenue; these two fellows was in this car, pulled direct in front of me, swung out and swung around and that is the last I seen of them.

Got Good Look at Them.

Alpaugh testified that as far as he knew, they turned around and went back to New Brunswick. He said he got a good look at them, but that he could not describe them now. He fixed the time as between 5 minutes to 12 and 5 after. The examination proceeded:

Q.—And these two cars, the Cadillac coupe and Dodge sedan, were both on the same side of the road and both pointing the same way? A.—No.

Q.—Will you describe them? A.—The Cadillac was facing toward Bound Brook on the right and the Dodge facing toward Brunswick.

The Court—Then, they were on different sides of the road? A.—They were.

Cross-examination by Senator Case:

Q.—Nothing there as you passed by that made any great impression on you, was there? A.—Nothing else outside of those people on the bank.

Q.—Was there anything unusual about seeing people on the bank? A.—Didn't seem to be, no, at the time.

Q.—No, no: just two or three people there. You don't know whether two or three, and the first time when you saw them they were standing on the bank. In order to get to that Dodge car from where they were, they had to slide down the bank, didn't they? A.—They did.

Q.—And the only unusual thing that you observed about that was that it was beside you for a little distance? A.—Yes.

Q.—There were a couple of men in it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was there anything unusual about their actions. A.—It seemed to he, to cut in front of a big bus that way, with a load of people. These people just cut me right off.

By Senator Simpson:

Q.—You cannot describe these two men at all? A.—I could probably, if I seen them, yes.

CIECUICH NEXT WITNESS.

Lieutenant Walter Ciecuich of the Jersey City investigators was then called. He testified to measurements he had made in the investigation.

BARBARA TOUGH ON STAND.

Barbara Tough, a fresh-cheeked Scot who was a maid in the Hall home at the time of the murders, was called. She said she had been working for the Hall family a little more than seven years when the crime was committed. While the former maid was not a member of Dr. Hall's church, she belonged to St. Mary's Guild, which she described as an organization for the younger women of the parish. Her examination proceeded:

Q.—Did you ever see Mrs. Mills and the Rev. Mr. Hall in the study, or any portion of the church at night? A.—I saw them once in the guild room.

Q.—How long before she was murdered? A.—About four years.

Q.—What time of the day was it? A.—About half-past seven in the evening.

Q.—Where did you see them? A.—Well, we were not going to meet at the guild that night. We were at the church. We were going to one of the girls' houses, and it was arranged that we would meet at the church at half-past seven. When I went down I did not see any one, so I went in and I called twice while I was in the Sunday school room, and no one answered me. And I knew Dr. Hall had left the house before I did. So I walked on and was going to walk to his study and ask him had he seen any of the girls, and I had walked through the Sunday school room, called twice, and no one answered me, and I was walking on, and as I reached the guild room door there Eleanor Mills jumped off Dr. Hall's knee.

Q.—What happened after she jumped off his knee? A.—Eleanor began to laugh hysterically, and then she says, "Oh, it is only Barbara." Dr. Hall did not speak, but he looked very angry like at me.

Q.—Then what did you do? A.—Then we went out—you see, we were going to Highland Park—so Eleanor that night and I walked down together, and we went down to meet the other girls.

Q.—That was about four years, you say, before she was murdered? A.—Oh, yes.

Q.—Well, what do you know, if anything, about the associations of Dr. Hall and Eleanor? A.—Well, by that time gossip was beginning—

Senator Case—I object to that. What do you know?

Insists Gossip Is Relevant.

Senator Simpson—I think gossip is perfectly relevant and proper to relate. If the repute was so notorious that Mrs. Hall could not help but know it, then of course it is a relevant circumstance. In fact the knowledge of this witness of the illicit relations would not be so important as her knowledge that everybody knew that there was something going on between Eleanor and the doctor. I think there is plenty of authority for that; the repute of the illicit relations, so that the jury can say: Did or did not Mrs. Hall know about it, because we say the motive for this murder was jealousy and hate. Therefore, it becomes important in lay before the jury evidence of the notoriousness, the boldness, the openness, of the illicit relations between Eleanor and the doctor.

Senator Case—We respectfully submit that gossip is not evidential against these defendants, particularly against Mrs. Hall, as that is against whom the Senator's remarks seem to be directed, with regard to the commission of this crime. The whole world might have known of the alleged relationship, or the whole world might have gossiped about the relationship that did not exist, because gossip frequently is such, and yet it is entirely within human experience and human fallibility that Mrs. Hall knew nothing about it, as she did in fact know nothing about it.

Senator Simpson—I object to that statement. I object to your stating as a fact, without any proof whatever, that Mrs. Hall didn't know about it.

Senator Case—Well, that is what we contend to be the fact.

Court Upholds the Question.

An extended colloquy between counsel ensued, Senator Case insisting that if "Dame Rumor shouted it from the housetops it is not evidence against these defendants." "It has happened in the lives and observation of all of us," he said, "that the one most concerned, the one to be affected most, most injured by a situation about which gossip is rife, is the one last to learn of it."

The Court finally ruled that the question might be answered. The answer and ensuing examination were:

A.—Well, I knew that Eleanor Mills was very fond of Dr. Hall, both as a minister and as a friend.

Q.—What did you observe about their conduct and actions? A.—Well, I knew that Eleanor—I could easily see that by the girl—that Eleanor was one of his favorites. That was easily to be seen.

Q.—What was the general talk in the church about this affair between the doctor and this woman? A.—Well, the last two or three years every one was gossiping about it, how friendly they were.

Q.—Friendly, or what? Was there anything wrong about their being friendly? What was the gossip about their being friendly, just between a minister and his parishioner.

Q.—When you refer to gossip in the general church do you in any way eliminate the talk in St. Mary's Guild? A.—Oh, the church members, guild and choir, all gossiped about it.

Q.—Coming down to the time of the murder—I withdraw that. What was your relationship with Mrs. Hall—were you on familiar terms with her and the other servants, or did she keep you in your place? A.—I was always on the best of terms with her.

Q.—Would she take you into her confidence and talk about things to you? A.—Not much.

Tells of Night of the Crime.

Miss Tough said that at the time of the crime the minister's mother, a woman of about 70 years, was alive, but that she had lived alone in a New Brunswick boarding house, called the Bayard. After placing the location of the telephone, including the extension upstairs, in the Hall home the witness said that on the night of the crime she had been out until 10 o'clock. The examination went forward:

Q.—What time did you get to the house? A.—It was sharp 10, I know, when I reached the Hall home.

Q.—Did you see anybody in the house? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you see Mrs. Hall in the house? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you see Willie Stevens in the house? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Where were the lights lit? A.—There was a bright light in the library and one in the lower hall and one in the second hall and one in the kitchen.

Q.—Who would ordinarily put the lights out? A.—The last one in, whoever was upstairs last.

Q.—You didn't put them out that night? A.—I only put out the kitchen light.

Q.—When you got in you didn't see Mrs. Hall? A.—No, sir.

Q.—When you went up what floor did you go to? A.—To the third floor.

Q.—Did you see Willie Stevens at any time from the time you got in at sharp 10 until you woke up the next morning? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you hear Mrs. Hall around 2 o'clock moving around the hall? A.—I did.

Q.—Where did you hear her? A.—I was wide awake and I heard her walk from her own room to the bathroom and from the bathroom back again and it was only a few minutes then I heard the big clock downstairs strike two.

Q.—You did not see her walk. A.—No, sir.

Q.—You could not tell what direction the steps went to? A.—I have a pretty good idea.

Q.—To go to the bathroom, how would she have to go, toward the head of the stairs or away from the head of the stairs? A.—Toward the head of the stairs.

Q.—Was the bathroom on the opposite side of the hallway from her room? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—How near the door did Willie sleep? A.—On the opposite side of the hall altogether.

Q.—Did you hear her when she was up pounding on Willie's door waking him up? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Were you awake after that? A.—I was awake at 4 o'clock.

Q.—You were not awake from 2 to 4? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you come through the back door or through the front way? A.—I came in through the side door, the north door.

Q.—Did you look to see if the back door was closed and fastened before you went to bed? A.—I did not.

Saw Mrs. Hall in Morning.

Miss Tough said she did not see Mrs. Hall when she got up, but she did see her at about 9:15 A. M. in Willie Stevens's room when Mrs. Hall came upstairs. Mrs. Hall left the house during the day, the witness said. She was asked about Frances Voorhees, a seven-year-old girl who had come there the day before Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Hall told her, she said, that Frances would stay for a week. The examination continued:

Q.—Well, did you see Mrs. Hall at all during Friday? A.—Oh, yes.

Q.—Did she say anything about expecting the doctor back? A.—No. When she came upstairs about 9:15, she said, "Oh, Barbara, Dr. Hall has not been home all night," and I said, "So the girls tell me." And then I said to her, had she notified the police, and she said no, she had called up the Middlesex Hospital and asked whether there had been any accidents or casualties, but she had not given her name. Then I asked her, "Is it possible he could have been held downtown for ransom?" But she thought that was a most ridiculous thing to think about.

Q.—About a ransom? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you ask her anything about whether heh had notified her mother, whether she had notified her mother, because his mother was ill? A.—No.

Q.—Did she say she had notified his mother? A.—No.

Q.—Thinking he had been to his mother's house all night because of the age of his mother? A.—No, sir.

Q.—What other conversation did you have with her about the whereabouts of Dr. Hall that day? A.—Why, I didn't say I was not talking to Mrs. Hall again until this evening, about 7:30, when she said—she came upstairs and she said, "Oh, Barbara, where is Mr. Hall?" And I said, "I wish I could tell you," and she walked right on to her room.

Said Doctor Was Out of Town.

Q.—Did you hear any telephone by Mrs. Hall the Friday night to the choir people? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was it? A.—About half past 7 Mrs. Hall telephoned Mrs. Storer, the organist, and she said: "Oh, Agnes, Mr. Hall won't be down to choir practice this night as he is out of town."

Q.—What time was that? A.—About half past 7.

Q.—She said he would not be there tonight? A.—Yes.

Q.—"He is out of town?" A.—Yes.

Q.—What happened the next morning? A.—A little before 9 I was dusting the study. Mrs. Hall came in and she said, "Well, this is another day," and I asked her had she heard anything during the night, and she said, "No," and I said, "No, I didn't hear no taxi or no commotion at the front door." Then she left the study. She went to her own room, and in a few minutes she returned with a pair of white silk sox, and she said, "Barbara, will you wash those for him?"

Q.—Did she say, "Wash them for Dr. Hall?" A.—She didn't say Dr. Hall or no name.

Q.—She said, "for him"? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did she tell you where he was when she asked you to wash his white silk socks? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did she tell you whether they were for burial purposes or not? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you see her after she gave you the white silk socks? A.—Not until the afternoon.

Asked to tell what happened then, Miss Tough replied:

"About 4 o'clock Mrs. Hall came into the sewing room and asked me to give her a box. I asked her how large a box, and she said a box to hold some clothes for him. Then she asked me if that white socks were dry, and I said, 'Yes, they are right here.' I gave her the box and the white silk socks, and she walked out of the sewing room."

The questioning went on thus:

Asked About Henry Stevens.

Q.—Did you ever see Henry Stevens at the house? A.—Yes.

Q.—How often did he come to the house? A.—Well, just on flying visits, occasionally, not often to stay.

Q.—When was the last time you saw him at the house before the murder? A.—Perhaps in June.

Q.—When Henry Stevens came to the house would he always search out Dr. Hall or would he go right up to Mrs. Hall? A.—He did not make any particular motion to search out Dr. Hall.

Q.—He would go right to Mrs. Hall? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see that occur when Dr. Hall was in the house? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you notice what the relations were between Henry Stevens and Dr. Hall as to whether they were friendly, like the husband of Henry Stevens's wife would be, or what their conduct and actions were when Henry Stevens was in the house? A.—They were friendly in a cold sort of friendly way, seeing they were brothers-in-law.

Q.—They did not insult each other? A.—Oh, no.

Q.—But they were not emotional? A.—No.

Q.—What do you mean by "in a cold sort of way"? A.—They were just on friendly terms, not considering they were brothers-in-law.

Q.—Just spoke to each other? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Willis Stevens have any firearms? A.—You said you took care of his room. A.—He did.

Q.—What did he have? A.—A small rifle which always stood in his closet, and I know he had a revolver in his desk. He sometimes showed me the revolver.

Q.—Did he have a razor, did you see a razor around? Did he shave himself? A.—No, sir: he was shaving downtown.

Q.—Did you see a razor around the room? A.—No, never in Mr. Willie's room.

Q.—In the bathroom? A.—There was one in the bathroom, but it belonged to Dr. Hall.

Q.—What kind of razor was it? A.—One of the old-fashioned kind, not a safety razor.

Q.—When you say old-fashioned kind, you mean that kind (indicating razor)? A.—Yes, I think it was a tiny bit smaller than that.

Senator Simpson wanted to know how much smaller and had the witness indicate with her finger on the razor just how much smaller Dr. Hall's razor was.

Willie Stevens's Firearms.

The witness was then turned over to Senator Case for cross-examination. He took occasion to get from the witness a statement that Mrs. Hall had never referred to her husband as Dr. Hall, but as Mr. Hall. Then he reverted to Willie Stevens's revolver. Barbara giving her answers with a smile of bewilderment. She said Willie Stevens had shown the revolver he had to her. Counsel asked whether it was not a revolver rather than an automatic, but she replied she did not know firearms. The rifle, she declared, was "a much smaller rifle than what the men go gunning with." Asked whether it was a boy's rifle, she said, "Yes."

Senator Case then prodded the witness with question after question on a Summer camp for boys conducted by Dr. Hall on the New Jersey coast. Whether he was trying to emphasize the good works of the rector or forestall insinuations by the prosecution did not become apparent. He then went on to show that Miss Tough's washing the rector's socks was not extraordinary.

"I always washed the white socks and stockings upstairs," she said.

She told of coming into the Hall house at 10 o'clock on the night of the murder and of concluding from the fact that only a small light was burning that "the others had gone to bed." Senator Case asked her if it were not true that there was nothing unusual in the house that evening. She replied that was the case, and added that there was nothing unusual in not seeing Mrs. Hall about at that hour.

Lawyer in House Next Day.

Senator Simpson then subjected the witness to further examination. She said she had not seen Senator Florance in the house on the day after the murder but that Louise Geist had told her he was there. Senator Simpson questioned her on the presence of Timothy N. Pfeiffer, one of defense counsel, who was present to hear the discussion, and Felix di Martini, detective brought into the case by Mr. Pfeiffer. The dialogue continued as follows:

Q.—When did Mr. Pfeiffer first appear at the house? A.—On the following Friday after the bodies were found.

Q.—When did Di Martini come? A.—About three weeks after the murder.

Q.—Did Mrs. Hall introduce you to Di Martini? A.—She did.

Q.—What did she say to you about Di Martini? A.—It was one Friday evening and she called me up stairs to the study and said, would I talk to this gentleman. She said, "Don't be afraid, he won't hurt you."

Q.—Then he did take you into a room? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he examine you about what you knew of the occurrences of Thursday and Friday night? A.—He did.

Q.—How many times did he examine you? A.—That first Friday for quite a long time, and then off and on occasionally when he was in the house afterward.

Q.—How long was he in the house? A.—I think until nearly Christmas.

Senator Simpson then took advantage of the opening left by Senator Case to inquire into Dr. Hall's Boy and Girl Scout activities, and brought out that Mrs. Mills had accompanied him on a Girl Scout camping trip.

The prosecutor reverted to Di Martini, and elicited from Barbara Tough the assertion that De Martini had not been introduced to Mrs. Hall by name but merely as "this gentleman." She added that she had heard others address him as Mr. De Martini and thus came to know his name.

De Martini's Activities.

He then swerved to the 1922 Grand Jury investigation. The witness said that De Martini had not had any "particular" conversation with her before she was called as a witness and denied that the detective had been introduced to her as "Mr. Parker." She recalled another detective in the house by the name of Fisher. She said she had not received messages for De Martini from any operatives over the telephone, and added that it was not customary for the servants to answer the phone when any members of the family were in. She also said she had not heard Mrs. Hall receiving any such messages.

Q.—Did you take a drink of water up to Mrs. Hall Friday night before she went to bed? A.—I did.

Q.—What was her appearance to you? A.—She had her dress off and she was going to bed—getting ready.

Q.—I mean as to whether she was calm or otherwise, not what she said to you.

Senator Case—I object to the question.

Q.—Was anything about her condition, not what she said, but as to whether she was crying or not, can you describe her condition? A.—No, she was not crying.

Q.—What was her appearance? A.—She was pretty quiet; she spoke about Mr. Hall's—

Q.—I don't want what she said. A.—She was getting ready to go to bed, and there was nothing that I particularly noticed about her actions.

Q.—She was just calm on the Friday night? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the first time you saw Mrs. Hall Saturday morning? A.—Before 8 o'clock.

Q.—Where did you see her? A.—In the study.

Q.—Was she alone. A.—Yes.

Q.—What was her manner then? A.—Calm. Just her only self.

Says She Changed Her Story.

Again the questions reverted to the 1922 Grand Jury session, and now Senator Simpson tried to show that Miss Tough had changed her testimony in the last four years. He had to do this over the strenuous objection of Senator Case. Declaring that he wanted to "sterilize" Miss Tough's trial testimony that Mrs. Hall was calm and self-possessed during the period immediately following the murder, he read the following from the 1922 Grand Jury minutes: "She came in and I said that she had any news through the night. She said no, none was of Mr. Hall at all. Of course she was quite excite and she went away and started to shaking. She was more excited. She hardly knew what she was doing. Then she went away and came back in five or six minutes after that." Did you so swear before the Grand Jury in 1922 in this court house?

Senator Case: I object.

A.—I did not say Mrs. Hall was shaking; I said she shook up a cushion.

Q.—Did you say this? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you say she was excited? A.—I don't remember—

The Court—One moment: there seems to be some sort of an objection here.

Q.—You said shook up a cushion? A.—Yes; she picked up a cushion.

Q.—Did you say in this Grand Jury in 1922, at a time when De Martini was in the house, when you were called as a witness, what I have read to you? A.—I don't remember.

Senator Simpson said he was through with the witness for the day but that the witness would come back Friday morning.

The Court adjourned to 10 A. M., Friday.

CITES GIBSON FAMILY ROW.

State to Attack Mother's Story With Her Own Earlier Statement.

Special to The New York Times.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 10.—Impeachment of the testimony of Mrs. Jane Gibson, so-called "pig woman," with testimony by her mother, Mrs. Salome Eisleitner Cerenner, 76 years old, will be combatted, it was learned today, with an affidavit by the mother which will be used to show that she should not be accepted as a credible witness.

Mrs. Cerenner, it has been said, will testify she was with her daughter on the night of the murder of the rector and the choir singer, and that Mrs. Gibson's story of witnessing the murder is false.

The affidavit, which will be used to attack the credibility of the mother as a witness, was made on Sept. 10 during her examination by Randolph Perkins, counsel for the Prudential Insurance Company of America, in a suit filed by her to collect $1,114 insurance on the life of her son, John Eisleitner, who, she said, was dead. She admitted she had no legal proof that John was dead, but was certain of it because the "spirit" of her son came to her often "in a silk dress" and demanded 50 cents to buy some ice."

In her testimony in the affidavit the aged woman also said that the "spirits" of a daughter, Margaret, and her first husband, Charlie Eisleitner, appeared before her and a living daughter, Minnie Roehl. She said she had never received proof that Margaret was dead, except in that her "spirit" appeared before her, and that she collected $100 life insurance from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company after the disappearance of Margaret two years ago.

The prosecution was expected to emphasize ill-feeling of the mother against Mrs. Gibson through a statement in the affidavit that Mrs. Gibson owed her $1,285 and that she had not repaid all the money. She also testified she was not on good terms with Mrs. Gibson because her daughter gave her a "bad reputation" in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Cerenner also testified in the affidavit that her daughter had adopted the name of Jane Gibson when she bought the Gibson farm near New Brunswick and that her real name was Mrs. Mary Easton.

Mrs. Gibson, who is expected by the prosecution to be able to testify soon, although she is seriously ill in the City Hospital in Jersey City, collapsed in the court house on the day the trial was started when she met her mother in a corridor.

DENIES GORSLINE VISIT.

Not at Agency on Oct. 1, 1922, Says Sherman Burns—Willing to Testify.

Sherman Burns, a son of William J. Burns and one of the heads of the Burns International Detective Agency, at 165 Broadway, commented yesterday on parts of the testimony of William Garvin, one-time Burns detective, who was on the witness stand at the Hall-Mills trial on Monday.

In his testimony Garvin declared Ralph Goraline had come to him at the Burns office on Oct. 1, 1922, and had revealed that he had seen Henry Stevens in De Russey's Lane on the night of the murder. Soon afterward, when his visitor had left, according to the ex-detective's testimony, he told of Goraline's visit to Sherman Burns and Raymond Burns, both sons of William J. and directors of the Burns agency. At that time the Burns office was in the Woolworth Building, 233 Broadway, where it remained until 1923.

"I understand that Garvin said he came and told me and my brother about Goraline's visit," said Mr. Burns. "I have no recollection of that. I was not at my office on Sunday, Oct. 1, 1922—and can show just where I was on that date." Mr. Burns added that he would testify willingly should he be called to the court room in Somerville.

A record of every visitor to the Burns office is kept on special sheets which are filed by the company, Mr. Burns said. He is checking up these lists, to see if they bear out Garvin's story.

Records of Sunday visitors in the Woolworth Building fail to show the name of Goraline or the name of any visitors to the Burns offices on Oct. 1, 1922. This was explained, however, by the fact that Burns agents entered and left the building under a special agreement with the building agents and were not required to sign their names or the names of their visitors on the Sunday register.

SOMERSET MUST BEAR HALL TRIAL EXPENSES

New Jersey Official Says State Will Give No Aid—Won't Cost Much, Says Simpson.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 10.—Expenses of the Hall-Mills murder case must be borne entirely by the taxpayers of Somerset County, it was declared here today by Assistant Attorney General Theodore Backes.

Mr. Backes said no aid was being given by the State and that it was up to the Board of Freeholders of Somerset to pay all bills. He did not know whether any arrangements had been made by that body to advance money to Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson to pay witnesses.

Senator Simpson in response to a question as to what the present trial would cost the County of Somerset, said it would not cost much. He said one of the three experts testifying at the trial would receive $250 a day and the others $100 a day each. Thus far two fingerprint experts and one medical expert have testified for the State.

Mr. Simpson declared he had advanced most of the funds expended in connection with the preparation of the trial. He explained he would not put in any bills until the trial was finished. Up to now, he said, he had advanced what funds the investigators had required.

SHOTS STARTLE DETECTIVES

Inspector Underwood and Aides, Suspecting Ambush, Find Hunters.

Special to The New York Times.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 10.—Five shots fired in rapid succession as Inspector John Underwood and his Jersey City detectives were driving to Somerville on the back road between Plainfield and Bound Brook yesterday startled the group and compelled the driver, Lieutenant Walter Ceclecuch, to stop the car so abruptly that it almost overturned.

Under the impression that they had been ambushed, the detectives gripped their revolvers and searched for their possible assailants.

Suddenly a white rabbit darted out of the bush and crossed the road. The detectives then realized that the hunting season had opened yesterday. Two hunters presently appeared and offered apologies. Those in the car besides Inspector Underwood and Lieutenant Ceclecuch were Captain Harry Walsh, Sergeant Richard Burke and Lieutenant John Torpey.

CITY BREVITIES.

The annual entertainment, ball and Thanksgiving festivities of the County Clare Men will be held on Saturday evening, Nov. 27, at the new Knights of Columbus building, Fifty-first Street and Eighth Avenue.

Men and women prominent in political circles in Brooklyn gave a testimonial dinner last night at the Hotel St. George to Harold Turk and George Ellperin, who have formed a law partnership. Ellperin recently resigned as field deputy in the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue in Brooklyn.

The annual dinner of district and office managers in this country of the Cunard Steamship Company was held last night at the Hotel Commodore. Anthony Cunard, a grandson of the founder, and F. W. Whatmough, manager of the southern district, were the speakers.

A luncheon celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the Sisterhood of Mount Nehoh Temple, 562 West 150th Street, was held yesterday at the Hotel Commodore. Dr. Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, Ohio, was the principal speaker.

Federal Judge Julian W. Mack will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given by Young Judea, at the Hotel Plaza, on Nov. 18. The occasion will also mark the nineteenth year of activity of Young Judea, and the beginning of an educational effort among the Jewish youth of the country.

FINGERPRINTS FREE AN INNOCENT MAN

RESEMBLES FUGITIVE CROOK

Released First Time on Writ—Expert Aids Him in Second Court Appearance.

Mistaken identity has clouded the life of William Feit for the last eight months, while he protested in vain that he was not the fugitive gem swindler, Isaac Shapiro, whose crimes were charged to him. Feit was arrested twice on the same charge because of his remarkable resemblance to the features of the "glass diamond" crook sought by the police. Freed from his first arrest on a habeas corpus writ, Feit was soon taken into custody again, this time on an indictment charging grand larceny. He was released in bail of $2,500 to await trial.

In the Kings County Court yesterday Feit got a second opportunity to prove his innocence. This time fingerprints established his identity beyond any doubt, and he is once more free.

Louis Freid, jeweler, of 567 West Twenty-third Street, Coney Island, made a loan of $4,000 on "diamonds" which he found upon later examination to be spurious. At the Criminal Identification Bureau at Police Headquarters Freid picked out the photograph of Shapiro, and declared he was one of the swindlers. Shapiro had then "jumped" bail of $5,000 relating to another offense.

Freid was on the lookont for the swindler as he went about town on his business errands, and on March 10 he thought he had found him when he saw Feit in the Sonth Ferry House at Battery Park. Feit lives at 398 Manor Road, West New Brighton, Staten Island, and was on his way home. He protested that he was a salesman, that he did not know one diamond from another and never had seen or heard of Freid and his loss. He was arrested.

The police took his fingerprints and a comparison with the prints of Shapiro convinced them that Feit was not Shapiro. With this police aid, Feit was freed. Bnt the jeweler was not satisfied. He renewed his complaint, and a Grand Jury indicted Feit. An agent for a surety company, which had furnished bail for the missing swindler, was for a time confused in this mix-up of identities and thought that Shapiro had been captured.

In June, Assistant District Attorney W. F. X. Geoghan, when requesting another Judge in the Kings County Court to designate a time for the trial of Feit, which was the only means of clearing the case, called attention of the court to the peculiar circumstances involving Feit, and the prosecutor said he didn't want to be a party to the prosecution of an innocent man.

Francis Haley, an expert in the Criminal Identification Bureau, was the only witness heard yesterday by the jury and Judge Franklin Taylor, and at the conclusion of this brief testimony the Court directed to jury to acquit Feit. Haley said Shapiro and Feit resembled each other to a remarkable degree, but that their fingerprints were entirely different.

FACES LIFE TERM OVER $40.

Robber Got Little Loot, but Is Convicted as a Fourth Offender.

David Meshel, 26 years old, of 139 Somers Street, Brooklyn, convicted in Bronx County Court yesterday morning by a jury before Judge Barrett of burglary in the third degree as a fourth offender, faces life imprisonment for the offense. The amount of loot involved was jewelry valued at $40.

Meshel has a record of seven arrests and three previous convictions. Under the Baumes laws he is therefore a nahitual criminal and must spend the rest of his life behind the bars. He will be sentenced on Nov. 12.

Meshel, with Joseph Meyers, also of 139 Somers Street, was convicted of robbing the apartment of Mrs. Harriet Hayes at 3,443 Knox Place, the Bronx, on Sept. 25. Meyers is serving a ten-year sentence.

ASSAILS HULL HOUSE.

Illinois American Legion Head Calls it a Hotbed of Communism.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Hull House and its founder, Jane Addams, were attacked before 600 members of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs today, when Captain Ferre Watkins, Commander of the Illinois Department of the American Legion, branded the Halsted Street Settlement as a hotbed of communism, and charged that the Communist "pinks" were trying to sell out America to international schemers for their own personal advantage.

"We don't fear the acknowledged radicals," said Captain Watkins. "The danger lies in organizations like the Women's International League for Peace, in the churches, the schools and the women's clubs.

"This person, Jane Addams, told in a public meeting how she hoped through influence at the White House to strip the uniforms from our Cadets at West Point, to deprive our colleges of military training and leave America undefended.

"We of the Legion, who hate war as no other organization does, demand that willingness to defend the flag shall no longer be regarded as an outgrowth of savagery and the moh instinct."

CHICAGO, Nov. 10 (AP).—Miss Jane Addams declared tonight that the whole statement of Captain Watkins was so "utterly false, unwarranted and absurd" that she would not even take the trouble to deny it. She did, however, deny that she had made the statement that she "hoped through influence at the White House to strip the uniforms from onr cadets at West Point, deprive our colleges of military training and leave America undefended."

Art Display at Union League Club.

An exhibition of paintings and sketches of Greenland, Alaska and the polar regions opened yesterday at the Union League Club. It will continue through Sunday. The thirty-five canvases shown are by William Bradford, Leonard M. Davis, Albert Operti, Carl Rungius and Frank Wilbert Stokes. Dr. George F. Kunz is Chairman of the committee in charge.

GIVES LIFE TERM, CALLS IT UNJUST

Judge Collins, Resentencing a Negro for Assault, Criticizes the Baumes Laws.

HAD GIVEN HIM FIVE YEARS

Man Sent Back From Sing Sing When His Record Showed Past Convictions.

In sentencing William Green, a negro laborer, to life imprisonment yesterday, Judge Cornelius F. Collins in General Sessions criticized the Baumes law because, he said, it forced him to act contrary to the dictates of his conscience. The prisoner had been sentenced on Oct. 15 for assault in the second degree and was sent to Sing Sing for five years. Warden Lawes sent him back because it was found that under the new law his previous record demanded that he be imprisoned for life.

Judge Collins said that those interested in the law thought that it should be tried out for a year before criticism was leveled against it. He was forced to speak out, he said, because he felt that under the circumstances five years in prison was ample punishment for the prisoner.

Green's record showed the following sentences: Sixty days in 1919 for third degree burglary; 60 days in 1920 for petty larceny; a suspended sentence in 1921 for vagrancy and a term in Elmira Reformatory for assault, and in 1924, two years for third degree burglary. Green was released in February and got work as a stevedore. On Aug. 16 he got into a dispute with Israel Jones, a companion, of 49 St. Nicholas Avenue. He alleged that the assault for which he was arrested was an act of self-defense. Jones and he fought in a speak-easy in Lenox Avenue.

"I am sorry for you," Judge Collins told Green. He said he had received a pitiable letter from the defendant that touched him and that he had called his case to the attention of the Big Brother movement and hoped that the Governor would cut down the prison term to five years, as originally fixed by the Court. A life sentence, he added, was out of all proportion to the punishment intended by law for the offense Green had committed.

"There is no doubt," he continued, "that the Baumes committee was actuated by the best of intentions, but it made a law that is arbitrary and inflexible. It leaves the courts no discretion and substitutes the authority of that hill for the arbiter of justice and its administration throughout the State.

"I am making this statement in the hope that the bar will appreciate this situation. I want to say further that what I am uttering in criticism of this mandatory legislation is, in my opinion, the consensus of opinion of the judges of the criminal courts throughout this State."

NURSE SUES PREACHER ON SLANDER CHARGE

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 10.—Trial of the $100,000 damage suit brought against the Rev. A. James Clark of this city by Miss Theresa Fetzer for slander started in Mercer Circuit Court here today. It will be resumed next Monday.

The defendant is President of the New Jersey Conference Association of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. The plaintiff, who is now a nurse in Washington, D. C., formerly lived in Akron, Ohio, where she was a Bible worker for the Reformed Seventh Day Adventist Church at the time Mr. Clark is accused of having publicly charged her with intimacy with another minister. She is asking $50,000 as compensation for injury to her reputation, and a similar amount as punitive damages.

The court fight is the outgrowth of a factional dispute in the Seventh Day Adventist Church, resulting in a split in 1921. At that time the Reformed Seventh Day Adventist Church was organized in protest against the leaders of the original sect. Miss Fetzer, along with Dr. J. H. Miller and many others, broke away from the parent body. Then on Jan. 26, 1924, the Rev. Mr. Clark went to Akron, being announced to speak upon the personnel of the newer branch.

The plaintiff is an attractive woman of about 30 years. Numerous members of the Seventh Day Adventist Church were in court as the Rev. Mr. Clark's witnesses. Miss Fetzer has drawn witnesses from many points in the East. The Rev. Mr. Clark came to this city about four years ago.

Rutgers Has 160th Anniversary.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 10.—Rutgers University's 160th anniversary today passed without special observance. The college was founded by the Dutch Reformed Church on Nov. 10, 1766, and was named Queen's College. A charter was granted by William Franklin, Governor of the Province of New Jersey. The name was changed to Rutgers College in 1925. President L. D. Coffman of the University of Minnestota spoke to the Faculty this afternoon.

"ONE-EYE" LYNCH MUST DIE.

Court of Pardons Refuses to Commute Slayer's Sentence.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 10.—By unanimous vote, the Court of Pardons today denied the appeal of James ("one eye") Lynch for commutation of his death sentence to life imprisonment. The decision was announced after argument had been heard behind closed doors.

Lynch was found guilty of killing Frank Brannon, an employe of a Hackensack express company, in a hold-up. He was sentenced to die in the week of April 26.

Heinz Buys Historic Arsenal.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 10.—The War Department at public auction today sold the historic Allegheny Arsenal to Howard Heinz for $319,000. The arsenal was established during the War of 1812 by Major William Barclay Foster, father of Stephen C. Foster, the composer. On Sept. 17, 1862, a terrific explosion in the buildings used for manufacturing munitions caused the death of seventy women and girls.

SAVE BATTERY PARK, IS AIM OF NEW DRIVE

STARTS CAMPAIGN NOV. 17

Celebration of City's 300th Year Will Be First Event—W. H. Childs Succeeds Roulstone.

The Battery Park Association decided formally at a meeting yesterday to initiate a movement for the beautification of Battery Park, to invite the aid of city authorities, and to undertake the rehabilitation of Battery Park "as an example of what can be done in the urgent business of rehabilitating Central Park." The association elected William Hamlin Childs President, to succeed William B. Roulstone. Judge Amos L. Beaty, Vice President. Charles H. Tompkins, Treasurer, and Stanley H. Howe, Secretary, preliminary to launching the Battery Park restoration movement.

Mr. Roulstone in commenting on the plan to beautify Battery Park, said:

"The association is designed to be of all assistance possible to Mayor Walker and the Department of Parks in suggesting and advising what can be done to beautify and save Battery Park in order that it shall be made the noble entrance or gateway to the noblest of cities. One cannot help thinking of the constant use to which this beautiful park and its surroundings have been put during all the years that not only distinguished personages have landed upon the Island of Manhattan to visit this country, but also the millions of people who have emigrated to these shores and have first set foot upon American territory right at the Battery.

"We do not hesitate to state that with proper help to the City Government we can accomplish the rehabilitation of Battery Park as an example of what can be done in the urgent business of rehabilitating Central Park, and the association has high hopes of being able to accomplish something at an early date.

"Its first public movement will be the inauguration at Battery Park of the celebration of New York's 300th Anniversary, which is going to be staged at Battery Park at noon on Wednesday next under the auspices of the Broadway Association."

MYSTERY DEATH IS SUICIDE.

Coroner Makes Decision in Case of Daniel Dempsey in Garden City.

Special to The New York Times.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Nov. 10.—At an inquest this afternoon into the death of Daniel Dempsey, in Garden City, last Saturday afternoon, Coroner Walter R. Jones announced that Dempsey probably came to his death by his own hand and that death was due to strangulation.

Dempsey was found by his fiancée, Miss Elsie Brown, of New Hyde Park, at the foot of the stairway in a house he was building for their future home. A search revealed a rope on the ground nearby. Several persons have been examined, but no statement has been made by the police as to how the body was cut down.

TO PROTECT CHARLEY WISE.

Children's Society to Keep Him Up-State Till Trial's Notoriety Fades.

Charley Wise, the 16-year-old ward of the Brooklyn Children's Aid Society, recently acquitted of the murder of Nina Vilona in Monticello, N. Y., will not be brought back to Brooklyn until the publicity over the case has abated, Arthur E. Wakeman, director of the society, said yesterday.

Mr. Wakeman declared the society owed the boy the protection that his parents would have given him and did not consider it good for the boy "to remain longer in the limelight." Mr. Wakeman said the boy may finish his high school course somewhere up-State and enter Syracuse University as a forestry student.

TO AID CANCER SOCIETY.

50 Business Men Pledge Help in Drive to Complete $1,000,000 Fund.

Following a luncheon given by Samuel W. Reyburn at Lord & Taylor's yesterday, fifty business men pledged their aid to raise the last half of the $1,000,000 endowment fund of the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

The present business men's committee consisting of Winthrop W. Aldrich, Thomas W. Debevoise, Walter Douglas, Mansfield Terry, Robert C. Hill, Samuel W. Reyburn and Dean Sage, has been largely instrumental in raising the $457,775 that has been given already.

Dr. Francis Carter Wood, Dr. George Emerson Brewer and Dr. Howard Canning Taylor, all urged the necessity of funds to carry on the work of the organization. Dr. Wood said that of the 20,000 active cancer cases about 75 per cent. could be saved if they received proper treatment in time. He stressed the importance of consultation with experienced physicians.

WIFE UNABLE TO STOP PHYSICIAN'S SUICIDE

Burned by Poison in Effort to Wrest Bottle From Husband, Dr. C. C. Norton.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 10.—After drinking the contents of a pint bottle of lysol while his wife fought to take it from him in the cellar of their home at 7:30 o'clock this morning, Dr. Carlton C. Norton, 50 years old, died in the White Plains Hospital two hours later. He was an osteopath and had offices at 342 Madison Avenue, New York.

Medical examiner Amos O. Squire, who is investigating Dr. Norton's death, was informed that the latter had a nervous breakdown about three years ago and at one time was under the care of Dr. C. I. Lambert of this City. Dr. Norton had been devoting long hours to his practice and had refused to take a vacation.

Mrs. Norton's face and hands were burned by the liquid in her struggle with her husband, and she required medical attention. She has two daughters, Mrs. Martha Turner and Miss Lillian Norton.

Dr. Norton was descended on his mother's side from Benjamin Franklin, and on his father's side from Samuel Adams, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. He was born in Erie, Pa., in 1876, a son of Lysander Norton, an attorney. He was a graduate of Cornell University, class of 1900, and the American School of Osteopathy in Kirksville, Mo.

MISS BOOTH STAYS AS ARMY HEAD HERE

BUT BREACH STILL EXISTS

Miss Booth Protests Naming of Foreigners to Posts Here—New Division Created in the South.

Commander Evangeline Booth is to remain indefinitely as the head of the Salvation Army in this country, notwithstanding the determination of her brother, General Bramwell Booth, announced more than a year ago, to remove her. But in the adjustment of their differences, it became known yesterday, General Booth is to exercise more direct control of the army's affairs in this country than he has heretofore.

This information was brought out in the course of an interview with Commander Booth at the Hotel Algonquin, incident to the announcement of the establishment of a new division, or territory, by which the organization in the country will be composed of four territories, Eastern, Southern, Central and Western, instead of three. It had been reported that the proposed reorganization was to be made by the Commander in defiance of her brother, who directs th world organization from London. This Miss Booth hastened to den., with the assertion:

"This is partly the doing of the national organization and partly the suggestion of the London office. My brother and I talked over the establishment of a Southern territory when he was over here and it will be carried out in entire harmony with London. While perhaps I have thought it might be as well to wait, because of financial and other reasons, he has cabled me that it should be done now, and we hope to get it started by Jan. 1."

Repeats Promise of Brother.

The Commander was then pressed as to whether she would stay indefinitely as the head of the organization in the United States. With some reluctance she said:

"I really think I am here indefinitely. I don't think there is any thought of moving me. You may say that my brother, the General, has told me I am here indefinitely."

That point disposed of, the Commander talked of the work in the South and the consequent changes in the personnel all over the country. She emphasized that men should not be brought in from other countries to take "the laurels that have been earned by the men here."

She then said quite casually of Lieut. Commissioner John McMillan, who is to take charge of the Chicago headquarters, that he was a Scotchman and had never been in this country.

When it was pointed out that this appointment did not coincide with her announced policy, Miss Booth said that McMillan had been chosen by her brother for the Chicago post. She was asked:

"Then your policy and the policy of your brother are at variance on that point?"

"They are," said Miss Booth.

Selection of General Booth.

It transpired, too, that the man who is to be in command in the new Southern territory, Lieut. Commissioner William A. McIntyre, was originally selected by General Bramwell Booth.

The army's new division, which will have headqnarters at Atlanta, Ga., will consist of all the Southern States westward to and including Texas, except El Paso. The boundary line will follow the Northern boundaries of Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kentucky, West Virginia and the northern and eastern boundaries of Maryland. Four States, Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Arkansas, are taken from the central territory, the rest from the old eastern territory.

Miss Booth said that in its intensified work in the South the army would carefully regard Southern sentiment and its work among the negroes would be in the nature of missionary work. It was Miss Booth's first long interview since she recovered from her illness, contracted last Spring. She has returned to her desk at the National Headqnarters, 122 West Fourteenth Street and is to be formally welcomed back next Tuesday at a public reception in Mecca Temple at which Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur is scheduled to preside.

BLAMES THE STUDENTS IN ERDMAN'S REMOVAL

Rev. Mr. Schofield of Hobart, N. Y., Defends Dr. Machen in Princeton Controversy.

Rev. Joseph A. Schofield Jr., pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Hobart, N. Y., in an open letter to the alumni of Princeton Theological Seminary, champions Professor J. Gresham Machen, a member of the seminary Faculty. He also defends Dr. Machen from the charge that he was responsible for the removal of Dr. Charles R. Erdman as student adviser.

Mr. Schofield said the blame for Dr. Machen's removal should fall on the students, and, so far as he could recall, he, Schofield, first made the suggestion that Dr. Erdman be removed.

The Erdman episode caused considerable discussion and at the Presbyterian General Assembly in Baltimore in May a committee was appointed to investigate its circumstances. The committee will make its investigation during Thanksgiving week.

In his letter Mr. Schofield asserts that Dr. Erdman and Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, President of the Princeton Seminary, circulated "misleading statements" concerning Dr. Machen.

A defense of Dr. Stevenson and Dr. Erdman has been made by the Rev. Weaver K. Eubank, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Jamesburg, N. J. He accused Mr. Schofield of "purposely stating half truths" which were "worse than premeditated falsehoods."

CAR BARN BANDITS LOSE.

Massachusetts Supreme Court Denies Appeal of 3 Condemned Murderers.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 10.—Three youths in their early twenties must die in the electric chair for the murder of an aged watchman in Waltham last October, the full Bench of the Supreme Court decreed in a decision handed down today, denying writs of appeal and a new trial.

John J. Devereaux, John J. McLaughlin and Edward J. Heinlein, known as "the car barn bandits," were sentenced to be executed in August. They were granted a reprieve until the present month because of the Supreme Court's crowded docket, and following a meeting of the Governor and his council last Friday the respite was extended from Nov. 18 to Jan. 3.

The motion setting up newly discovered evidence was, in effect, that Devereaux was insane and "absolutely irresponsible and not appreciative of the significance between right and wrong."

The Court says that "no evidence as to his mental condition was offered at the trial before the jury, and, from the report of the case when here at its earlier stage, it appears that the defendant testified as a witness in his own behalf at the trial."

The "car barn bandits" case was the first in this Commonwealth in which three men were sentenced to death for the killing of one. They were sentenced under the law that holds all participants in a felony equally responsible.

Factory Employment Slows Down.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 10 (AP).—The early vigor of the upward movement was not apparent in October reports of factory employment, State Industrial Commissioner Hamilton announced today. Employment still was increasing throughout the State, however, although the advance was scarcely 1 per cent. The change in pace was caused by an interruption of increasing employment in the metal industries. Since September the margin of gain over last year has been reduced from 6 to 2 per cent. in these lines. The most severe reductions were in the hearing apparatus shops where working schedules went down along with curtailed employment.

SAID JERSEY MAYOR TOOK $50,000 BRIBE

LANDED $2,000,000 CARGO

Edgewater Mayor Denies Charge, Saying He Never Met Kinder—Big Bootleggers Trapped.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Edward Ritz, a New Jersey Customs Inspector, testified before United States Commissioner James R. Glass this afternoon that Cecil M. Kinder, wholesale bootlegger and owner of the noted rum ship Eker, had told him that he (Kinder) had paid more than $50,000 to the Mayor of Edgewater, N. J., for protection privileges in his liquor smuggling. For this bribe Kinder was permitted to land 46,000 cases of whisky on the Jersey side of the Hudson River.

Kinder, reputed Chicago millionaire and alleged head of a $10,000,000 whisky smuggling ring bringing liquor from the Bahamas, was before the United States Commissioner in Government proceedings to remove him from Chicago to Edgewater, N. J., to stand trial for smuggling the 46,000 cases of liquor into the United States.

Coincident to opening of the proceedings was the arrival of Ritz and J. L. Solieri, Customs Inspectors from Union, N. J., who, posing as representatives of the Mayor of Edgewater, N. J., are said to have trapped Kinder into admitting he paid heavy amounts to practically the entire police force of Edgewater for silence in his bootlegging operations.

Liquor in Water Tanks.

Kinder, upon arriving home two weeks ago, was arrested by Patrick T. Roche of the Special Intelligence unit. He was accused of smuggling liquor from England and the Bahamas into this country. The liquor, flowing in a golden stream of champagne, rum, brandy, gin and whisky, was smuggled across the ocean sealed in water tanks, it is said.

According to Assistant United States District Attorney James G. Cotter, the Chief of Police of Edgewater succumbed to a heart attack when confronted with the evidence accusing him of participating in the emnggling deal.

At the time of arrest, Kinder is said to have nonchalantly remarked, "Well, you've put one over on me, but if I am stuck in this matter the whole Administration will be stuck with me."

Kinder was one of fifty indicted in New Jersey in the smuggling investigation. Clifford Kinder, a brother, was also indicted. Colorful stories of the sea were told by witnesses before the Commissioner continued the case until November 17 on request of John Elliott Byrne, attorney for Kinder.

Morris Borden, alias Thomas Murphy, told the Court of helping the crew of Kinder's boat, the Eker, transfer 30,000 cases of booze from a Canadian barge.

Agent Roche quoted the defendant for a story about one occasion when Kinder was about to leave the Bahamas with a cargo of 20,000 cases. Roche said Kinder had told him he had heard a native official of the Bahamas had absconded with $75,000 and the officials were eager to make up the shortage.

As the boat was about to clear, according to the story, an official of the island boarded the ship and demanded $50,000. Kinder was quoted as saying he ordered the engineer to put on full steam ahead and carried the official into New York to avoid the alleged shake-down.

Edgewater Mayor Denies It.

Cecil Kinder was one of nineteen men indicted by the Federal Grand Jury here last October charged with conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws following the seizure on April 29 of the steamship Eker, which was alleged to have landed a cargo of liquor valued at more than $2,000,000 at Edgewater, N. J.

Mayor Henry Wissel of Edgewater denied last night to The Associated Press that he knew Cecil Kinder. "I don't know the man," the Mayor said, "therefore I could not have accepted a bribe from him."

At the time of the seizure of the Eker by Customs Inspectors Pollack and Sweeney in a small customs boat in the Hudson River between Yonkers and Alpine, N. J., her oil and water tanks were alleged to have been filled with whisky malt valued at more than $500,000.

Later, with the arraignment of twelve members of the crew, it was disclosed, through one man's confession and a memorandum book found aboard the ship, that $20,000 "graft money" had been paid to get through to Yonkers a boatload of alcohol estimated to have a bootleg value of more than $1,000,000. The story of how the Eker steamed boldly into this port past the Statue of Liberty, and for eleven days lay at a pier in Edgewater unloading her liquor cargo of 38,000 cases, was told by George Pinder, a negro member of the constabulary of Nassau in the Bahamas. The alleged liquor ring of which the Kinders are said to be the heads is reputed to rival that of William V. Dwyer in magnitude.

PROTEST TAX INCREASE.

Richmond Residents Will Demand an Inquiry by the Mayor.

Five hundred taxpayers representing the towns of Annadals, New Dorp, Great Kills, Princes Bay, Huguenot and Tottenville, on Staten Island, met last night at Public School 8 in Great Kills to protest against the $68,000,000 increase in assessments fixed by the City Commission for the Borough of Richmond.

They will demand that the Mayor investigate the increase.

A. G. Marsher, President of the South Shore Protective Association, said he owned a house at Princes Bay which the city had condemned as uninhabitable, and yet it had been assessed 200 per cent. more than the figure set last year.

SPEECHES BARRED AT SCHOOL DINNER

Instead Printed Addresses Are Passed Out to Backers of Farm Endowment.

SINGERS DISPLACE TALKERS

Jardine, Erlanger, A. L. Gimbel and Others Urge Support in $5,000,000 Campaign.

Chopin, Saint-Saëns, Verdi and others figuratively took the place of after-dinner speakers at a dinner in the interest of the $5,000,000 endowment fund campaign for the National Farm School expansion project at the Ritz-Biltmore last night. The dinner was "speechless," the only public utterances being those of opera singers rendering the familiar tunes of the great composers.

There were four addresses, which, however, instead of being delivered by their authors, had been printed and placed before each guest. These were by Abraham Erlanger, Chairman of the school's expansion project; Adam L. Gimbel, Chairman of the Business Men's Council of the institution's drive; Herbert B. Allman, President of the farm college, and excerpts from the speech of Secretary of Agriculture William M. Jardine, which he delivered before the American Country Life Association in Washington last evening.

"There is cogent reason," said Mr. Gimbel, "why commerce and industry should give its best thought to the solution of the agricultural situation in this country, for while agriculture never needed business, and never will, in order to exist, business is dependent upon agriculture. And I notice that business prospers or languishes in accordance with the prosperity of agriculture, the basic industry. Accordingly, I believe that business should help agriculture as a means of helping itself.

"Under these circumstances it is natural for this business man of even broad vision and patriotic consciousness to interest himself in the National Farm School. Here is an entirely different proposition. Instead of devoting its scientific agricultural training to country boys, it takes boys and girls of high school age from the cities and makes successful agriculturalists of them."

Mr. Allman, who was unable to attend the function on account of illness, said: "It is our plan to make the school as institution which will be able to provide any boy or girl having the proper qualifications an opportunity to carve out for himself or herself an independent and prosperous career on the soil."

Mr. Erlanger said he hoped it would be possible to accommodate at the Doylestown school the hundreds of city boys and girls who desired to "go out on the land to become economic and political assets to the United States."

The entertainment was provided by Domenico Riccio, operatic baritone; Miss Margery Maxwell, soprano; Gaston Dornay, tenor; Mme. Marcia Van contralto, and Erno Balogh, Hungarian pianist.

ORDERS COUNT SALM TO APPEAR BY NOV. 22

Justice Levy Says Plaintiff in Separation Suit Could Have Got Visa in September.

The trial of the separation suit brought by Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten against the former Millicent Rogers was peremptorily ordered for Nov. 22 yesterday. Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy announced he had information from the American consul in Vienna which led him to believe the Count might have obtained his visa and arrived in the United States long before Oct. 25, the date originally set for the trial.

The hearing yesterday came after a series of delays caused by the plea of Herman Goodstein, the Count's attorney, that Salm was planning to enter the United States to become a citizen, but that Austria's quota limitations prevented his arrival until December or January.

Justice Levy declared he had learned the Count applied for a visa from the American consul in Vienna on Sept. 6. He was advised he could get one and was told to appear the next day. He said he could not report then. He did not get the document until Oct. 30, according to the Court. Mr. Goodstein again asked a postponement and the peremptory order followed.

ZOO HEAD'S DAUGHTER WED.

Miss Ditmars Bride of Yale Man—"Semi-Elopement," Father Says.

Miss Beatrice Emily Ditmars, daughter of Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Park in the Bronx, and Marshall Wilton Daniels, of Hancock, Md., a junior at Yale University, were married last Saturday in New Haven, and, following the ceremony, sent telegrams asking to be forgiven to the Ditmars home in Scarsdale.

"It was what I would call a 'semi-elopement,'" said Dr. Ditmars yesterday. "Mrs. Ditmars and I knew they wanted to marry all along, but we advised them to wait. I guess our advice was a little old fashioned."

Dr. Ditmars said the couple had met in Venice last Summer while on a Mediterranean cruise. Dr. Ditmars said he considered the bridegroom as "one of the family, even last Summer."

As marriage antomatically ends an undergraduate's stay at Yale, Dr. Ditmars thinks his daughter and son-in-law will make their home in Hancock, Md., where Mr. Daniels's father is a banker. Dr. Ditmars did not know who performed the ceremony nor where the couple had gone, but he declared that he and Mrs. Ditmars were "not worrying."

Chemistry Prize to Prof. J. J. Abel.

The Willard Gibbs medal, a major honor in American chemistry, will be awarded this year to Professor J. J. Abel of the Medical School of Johns Hopkins University. It was announced yesterday by the American Chemical Society. The medal is given annually by the Chicago section of the society to a chemist whose work in either pure or applied chemistry has received world-wide recognition. Professor Abel was chosen by a jury of twelve American chemists.

PASTORS INSTALLED BY PRESBYTERIANS

SUCCEED DR. JOHN KELMAN

The Rev. Dr. Henry Howard, formerly of Australia, who is in his sixty-seventh year, and the Rev. Dr. Minot C. Morgan, for the last nine years pastor of the Fort Street Presbyterian Church, Detroit, were installed as co-pastors of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, at Fifty-fifth Street, last evening. Five widely known Presbyterian clergymen participated.

A cablegram of good wishes from the Rev. Dr. John Kelman, the former pastor, sent to the news pastors from Edinburgh, Scotland, where he now lives, was read. Dr. Kelman is recuperating from a long illness. A letter from Dr. Kelman to the congregation also was read.

The installation sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. William O. O. Thompson, President Emeritus of Ohio State University at Columbus, who is the Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

The charge to the congregation was delivered by the Rev. Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, President of Princeton Theological Seminary and a former pastor of the Fifth Avenue Church. The charge to the co-pastors was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Harlan G. Mendenhall, Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of New York, who is a member of the congregation and has been Moderator of its session in the more than two years the church has been pastorless. The prayer of installation was offered by the Rev. Dr. George Alexander, 83 years old, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. The presiding officer was the Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield, Moderator of the Presbytery.

After a hymn Dr. Howard and Dr. Morgan, who had been sitting in a front pew, came to the pulpit. Dr. Howard offered a closing prayer and Dr. Morgan pronounced the benediction.

Co-pastorates in the Presbyterian denomination are almost unknown, and there is no other case on record where two pastors were installed at the same service.

Luncheon for Zdenek Fierlinger.

Zdenek Fierlinger, Minister from Czechoslovakia, was the guest of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce at luncheon yesterday at the Chamber's headquarters, Remsen and Court Streets, Brooklyn. Dr. Jaroslav Novak, Czechoslovak Consul General at New York, also attended. Many of the guests represented Czechoslovakian societies. William C. Redfield introduced the Minister and told the gathering of his war record, describing how he had been thrice decorated for heroism. Stuart Culin, ethnological curator of the Brooklyn Museum, where the party went later to open the Czechoslovak exhibit, also made an address.

DRIVE TO AID CHILDREN.

Study Association Will Seek $100,000 to Extend Its Work.

Mrs. Howard S. Gans, President of the Child Study Association, announced yesterday that a campaign to raise $100,000 to extend the work of the association would be inaugurated on Nov. 21. She said that the need for funds has been caused by the demands which had been made upon the association by parents, teachers and social workers in this country as well as many foreign countries.

Mrs. S. W. Straus will be the Chairman of the campaign and will be assisted by Mrs. Benedict Erstein, Mrs. Eliot Cross, Mrs. Lewis S. Thompson, Princess Francesco Rospigliosi, Mrs. Casimir de Rham, Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, Mrs. Archibald B. Roosevelt, Mrs. Leopold Rossbach, Mrs. Brady Harriman, Mrs. Herbert Lehman, Mrs. Arnold Gottlieb, Mrs. A. Bernhard, Mrs. Fred M. Stein and Mrs. Charles Carey Ramsey. Mrs. William Laimbeer is the campaign treasurer and Frank E. Karelsoen Jr. is Chairman of the Finance Committee.

WARBURG DONATES $75,000 TO FUND

Total of $264,479 Raised on Eve of $4,720,000 Drive for Jewish Philanthropy.

30,000 NOW ARE ENROLLED

Felix M. Warburg, with a donation of $75,000, was the largest contributor yesterday in the tenth anniversary $4,720,000 campaign of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies. Mr. Warburg is Chairman of the Federation Board. Other contributions included $25,000 by S. A. Straus, $10,000 by Samuel J. Bloomingdale, $4,000 by Reuben Arkush and $4,000 by Frederick Strauss.

Frederick Brown, General Chairman of the campaign, announced that an analysis of new amounts yesterday showed that 202 contributors gave a total of $264,479. This same group, before the present money-raising effort, contributed $130,847.50. This sum and other new amounts will be added officially to the grand fund at the rally at the Hotel Pennsylvania this afternoon.

Mr. Warburg declared in a statement yesterday that the "federation, being for all, should be supported by all." He said the federation was making rapid headway in its program of democratizing its support. There are 30,000 members enrolled today, he said, as against 13,000 when the federation was formed.

Representatives of the publishing field and allied interests met last night at the Hotel Ambassador as the dinner guests of Paul Block, counselor of the publishers' and allied groups. Working committees were organized to solicit subscriptions from the five groups represented. The groups are publishing and newspaper, advertising, printing and stationery, paper box manufacturers and the paper and twine trade.

George M. Seamen, a paper manufacturer of Chicago and a non-Jew, announced his personal subscription of $1,000 at the dinner. The speakers were Mr. Block, Solomon Lowenstein, Executive Director of the federation; Charles Weinstock and Sol M. Stroock, President of the federation.

The women's division, under the Chairmanship of Mrs. Sidney C. Borg, will hold its rally at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Pennsylvania. At 5 o'clock the men's division, under the leadership of Percy S. Straus, Chairman of the Business Men's Council, will make reports for 134 trade groups. The young men's division and the borough groups also will report. The list of new subscriptions includes:

DELAYS PETERS-WARD SUIT.

Appointment of Lynch to Bench Removes Plaintiffs' Counsel.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Humphrey J. Lynch of White Plains, who was designated as a Supreme Court Justice by Governor Smith to fill the vacancy in the Ninth Judicial District, owing to the death of Justice William P. Platt, said today that the trial of the action of the parents of the late Clarence Peters, whom he represents as attorney, against Walter S. Ward, set down in the Federal Court in Manhattan for Nov. 15, would not take place on that date.

The parents of Peters are suing Ward for $35,000 damages for the death of their son, who was shot and killed by Ward near Kensico Dam. Ward said he shot in self defense and a Westchester County jury acquitted him of a first degree murder charge.

"Now that I have been made a Supreme Court Justice," Justice Lynch said today, "I cannot act as an attorney for the Peters family, and the suit probably will be adjourned so that there can be a substitution of attorneys."

More than thirty witnesses had been subpoenaed for the trial, some of them coming from Haverhill, Mass.

1926 SALON CROWNS CHEF AT HOTEL PLAZA

The judges in the Salon of Culinary Art, one of the features of the National Hotel Show in Grand Central Palace, announced yesterday the awards to the chefs whose work represented the supreme achievement in cooking. To André Gamard, chef of the Hotel Plaza, fell the honors of the 1926 salon in this class. The second award went to Attilio Pasquette of the Hotel Ambassador, and the other awards went to these in the order named: V. Derbeuti of R. H. Macy & Co., and John Chiarle of the Hotel Pennsylvania. The winner is now in line for that little group of immortals in cookdom whose productions are "hors de concours"—that is, beyond competition.

In the pastry and confection class first honors went to Maurice Garzani of the Maison Fishl in Broadway. The second honors were bestowed by the jury upon Louis Liard of the Hotel Plaza. In original specialties, first prize was awarded to Wilhelm Gerhig of Macy's for an artistic chocolate representation of a painting in a large frame, also made out of chocolate. H. Astley of the Cunard liner Aquitania, took first prize in pastillage with a model of the new palace at Delhi, done in sugar and executed while the Aquitania was at sea.

In baking, first prize went to F. Arn of the Hotel Plaza, and second prize to Jean Kiffer of the Hotel McAlpin.

The fortieth annual dinner of the New York State Hotel Association will close the show this evening. It will be held in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Commodore.

High School Girl Disappears.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Nov. 10 (AP).—The police were asked today to search for Mary Kiffin, 17-year-old daughter of a wealthy family in Tenafly, who disappeared on Sunday because she feared to face her parents after failing in every subject in the high school. Her parents believe she is working in New York.

MISS PALMER WINS RULING.

California Court Denies Entry There of New York Judgment.

Special to The New York Times.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 10.—Corliss Palmer today won a point in the suit brought against her by Mrs. Eleanor Brewster of New York when Judge Fleming denied a motion of Mrs. Brewster's attorneys to have the New York judgment for $200,000 entered in the courts here.

Judge Fleming ruled that the case must be tried here if Mrs. Brewster desires to enforce judgment in this State. Mrs. Brewster alleges alienation of the affections of Eugene V. Brewster.

Miss Palmer and Brewster recently returned to Hollywood from a Mexican trip in which Brewster reported that they had been married in Ensenada. Brewster reported that he obtained a divorce from his New York wife in Sinaloa.

FIVE MILK INSPECTORS OUT.

Harris Suspends Two Men and Forces Three Women to Resign.

The suspension of two men milk inspectors and the forced resignation of three women milk inspectors, all accused of graft, were announced yesterday by Health Commissioner Harris. Forty-five employes of the Health Department have been dismissed or have resigned under compulsion since Dr. Harris assumed office on Jan. 3 and began his inquiry into graft in the inspection of foods.

In agreement with Charles H. Kelby, named by Mayor Walker to coordinate the investigation in all boroughs of the city, Dr. Harris examined twenty witnesses yesterday in connection with one phase of the milk inquiry. As a result of testimony obtained from milk dealers, he said he had uncovered further irregularities existing in 1924 and 1925.

"MADAME BUTTERFLY"

Little Librettos by LEONARD LIEBLING

WHO does not know the tender, proud, quaint little Madame Butterfly and the picturesque story of her brief life and love, with its dramatic ending? The tale is an eloquent and touching emotional conflict between Oriental and Occidental ideals of conscience and honor.

Puccini's music, intensely understanding and movingly sympathetic, blends piquant Japanese tone-colorings and themes, with lyrical expressiveness, and passionate Italian outbursts in the composer's most typical manner. Several of the numbers are among the most popular operatic airs of the moment. Excerpts from the "Star Spangled Banner" occur several times, and remind one that Pinkerton, the tenor hero, hails from America.

Florence Easton is one of the notable singing interpreters of the title role, and Antonio Scotti gives a lovable impersonation of the kind-hearted Consul Sharpless. Tonight's performance will be conducted by Vincenzo Bellezza, who revealed such fine qualities at his recent debut in the Metropolitan.

SEVEN YEARS AGO the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Law were said to have banished John Barleycorn from the entire domain of American politics. Yet on November 2, eight States, representing geographically the Atlantic coast, the Middle West, the Rocky Mountain region and the Pacific coast, and containing about a quarter of the total population of the country, voted in popular referendums on the Prohibition issue.

The result was "a stunning repudiation of the Volstead Law" is the interpretation placed by W. H. Stayton, Chairman of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. "It means nothing," counters Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, who tells us that the drys "did not participate in an organized way" in these referendums, and that in any case they have maintained their grip on both Houses of Congress.

To get an impartial view of the results of the elections one can not accept at their face value the extreme views of the leading protagonists of the "wet" and "dry" forces. There is a wealth of detail and a depth of public opinion that lies in between.

The Literary Digest this week (Nov. 13th number) in its leading article, reflects editorial opinion on both sides and from every section of the country. After reading it you will have a very fair idea of what the American public think of Prohibition and the Volstead Act.

Other striking news-articles are listed in the panel at the left.

HIGH WIND PUTS OFF SEAPLANE RACES

Schneider Cup Competition Is Postponed Till Saturday to Avoid Danger to Pilots.

CLOSE CONTEST EXPECTED

Power May Decide Issue, as Other Conditions Are Believed to Be About Equal.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 10.—Stiff winds sweeping over Hampton Roads from the Northwest today not only prevented the preliminary navigability trials, but also forced an official postponement of the only international air race of the year—that for the Jacques Schneider Cup—from tomorrow until Saturday.

No other recourse was open to those in charge of the event in face of the rough sea kicked up by the steady twenty-mile blow throughout the day, making it impossible to carry out the tests for maneuverability and mooring through which the Italian and American racing machines were scheduled to have been put today. To have attempted such trials in the rough waters of Willoughby Bay, even though well-landlocked, would have risked the loss of some of the six powerfully engined racing seaplanes—each worth nearly $100,000—being so carefully groomed for this blue ribbon event of the air.

Despite the wind two planes—both American entries—took the air between sunrise and sunset for practice speed runs and sustained damaged propeller blades for their hardihood.

Marine Officer on Practice Spin.

Lieutenant C. Frank Schilt, of the Marine Corps, went up at 8:55 this morning for a twenty-minute spin in his R-Three-C-Three plane which will be No. 6 in the Schneider race, but took off in water so rough that he twisted his propeller blades. This is the black Curtiss racer in which Lieutenant James H. Doolittle of the Army won the Schneider Cup race last year at Baltimore, and the damage sustained in today's mishap was what strengthened other Italian and American racers in their view that the weather did not warrant risking their planes.

The red racing planes of the Italians all remained locked in their hangars throughout the day as well as those of the American team until shortly before 5 o'clock this afternoon when Lieutenant George T. Cuddihy of the Navy decided upon a tryout of his 700-horsepower Packard motored plane, after the wind had somewhat subsided, shortly before dusk. His racer took off at 4:51 o'clock and the 25 minutes he remained aloft included one circuit of the 31-mile Schneider Cup course in approximately 8 minutes.

But when his plane was towed ashore, after a splendid landing, like that of Lieutenant Schilt, it had sustained identically the same mishap. In taxi-ing the plane over the rough waters of the bay for the take-off its composition steel propeller was twisted by contact with the waves.

Like Lieutenant Schilt he had flown with a bent propeller. This damage only served to confirm the wisdom of the decision of the cup race officials to await the promise of satisfactory weather late tomorrow afternoon and Friday for the navigability tests and good weather Saturday for the big race itself.

Race Likely to Be Close.

The consensus of opinion among aviation sharps is that the Schneider Cup race will be a close contest. The Americans hold in high opinion their Italian competitors and their planes, which have very powerful Macchi Fiat motors. The best view is that other conditions being equal, the race will depend primarily on motive power plus success in piloting.

The No. 4 American plane, which Lieutenant Champion is slated to fly, is understood to be the fastest of the American trio. It is the one in which Lieutenant Cuddihy on Monday established his record of a fraction over 256 miles an hour along a measured course of more than six miles. It is propelled by a 635-horsepower Curtiss V-1550 motor. On the other hand, the No. 2 American plane which Lieutenant Cuddihy is scheduled to fly has a powerful Packard motor of 700 horsepower, with a 5-in-4 reduction gear, and this is understood to be the particular plane the Italian aces think they must beat to win the race. Others feel that the plane allotted to Lieutenant Schilt, the Marine Corps entry, has a very good chance. It has only 615 horsepower, but has made over 250 miles and hour on straight runs and won last year's Schneider Cup race.

Lieutenant Schilt is one of the crack high speed fliers of the Marines. While his plane is not rated as being as fast as those Lieutenants Champion and Cuddihy will pilot, Lieutenant Schilt is expected to take advantage of any opportunity to win the race that may arise in the piloting of the higher powered planes.

A F-5-L plane piloted by Lieutenant Townsend, of the Navy, en route from the Philadelphia Naval Air Station for Hampton Roads, with nine passengers, all prospective spectators of the Schneider Cup contest, was forced down by minor engine trouble in lower Chesapeake Bay waters this afternoon, but without injury to any one.

Among men prominent in aviation arriving today for the race were Glenn Martin, designer of the Martin bombers; Commodore Frithiof G. Ericson of Toronto and New York, official referee of the race; Odie A. Porter of Indianapolis, official scorer for the Indianapolis Speedway races, who will time the Schneider Cup pilots electrically with his split second machine; Veniro d'Annunzio, son of Gabriele d'Annunzio, poet and flier, who was a pilot of Caproni bombers during the war but now New York representative of an Italian motor car concern; Major Georges Thenault, French air attaché; Lieutenant Yama Moto, assistant Japanese naval attaché; T. T. Hildebrandt, representing the Flying Club of Baltimore; Dr. George W. Lewis, research director for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and Lester D. Gardner of New York.

J.J.EMERY ESTATE GAINS $899,471 TAX REFUND

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10 (AP).—The estate of John J. Emery, financier and art connoisseur of New York, Bar Harbor and Cincinnati, was increased by $899,471 today.

The increase represents income taxes on the "accumulated income" of $10,000,000 for 1916, 1917 and 1918 and was ordered refunded by Judge Dickinson in the Federal District Court.

Said to be one of the largest refunds to the estate of an individual ever ordered, the amount will be reduced about half by collection of inheritance taxes from Mr. Emery's three daughters and two sons, who, with their mother, are the principal beneficiaries of the estate.

Mr. Emery died at Bar Harbor in September, 1908, leaving a will providing a thirty-year trust for the bulk of his estate. His children were named as beneficiaries of the trust. The provision, however, was voided by the Probate Court of Maine in 1923 at the request of the widow and children for "urgent family reasons."

The Government, declining to recognize the Court's ruling, assessed the tax on "accumulated income," which amounted to about twice the amount due, had the tax been levied against individuals sharing in the estate.

Judge Dickinson in his ruling today accepted the invalidation of the trust provision of the will and held that the income to the principal was "not accumulated," and that instead of levying the tax on the estate, the Government should have assessed the sons and daughters.

DUCHESS ARRIVES, ILL WITH MEASLES

GOT DISEASE VISITING ETON

Countess of Suffolk and Marquis of Anglesea Are Among the Arrivals on Olympic.

The Duchess of Roxburghe, formerly Miss May Goelet, the daughter of Ogden Goelet of New York, arrived yesterday from England on the White Star liner Olympic, suffering from measles, and was taken in a private ambulance to Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's house, 640 Fifth Avenue. She contracted the disease at Eton College, while visiting her son, and developed it on the voyage.

When Dr. Miles Prior, the senior surgeon of the liner, diagnosed the malady two days out as measles, he had the Duchess isolated from the other passengers. He said she was doing well when she left the ship. She was accompanied by Viscountess Maidstone and Anthony J. Drexel of Philadelphia.

The Countess of Suffolk, the Marquis of Anglesea, and Colonel E. S. Gillett also were passengers on the liner, but their names were kept off the list at their request.

Dr. Franz Fischer of Berlin and Professor R. Lessing of London arrived to attend the International Bituminous Coal Congress to be held at the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh.

Dr. Fischer said that he had spent twelve years studying chemistry and science in the Ruhr district, and had devoted a good deal of time to experimenting with making gasoline from coal gas. The world's supply of oil, he said, would not last forever. According to Dr. Fischer the coal fields have hardly been scratched.

Another passenger was Dr. Emanuel Baruch, who returned from Vienna where he lectured on President Lincoln. Great interest was shown by the Austrian people, he said.

The Olympic encountered rough weather the day after leaving Cherbourg, and for ten hours had to be reduced to half speed because of the heavy seas.

Janitor Indicted for Killing Nurse.

The Queens County Grand Jury indicted last night Patrick McClafferty, 49 years old, for first-degree murder. McClafferty is said by the police to have confessed to killing Rebina Lytle, a nurse, in his rooms in the Sanford Arms Apartments, Flushing, where he was employed as assistant janitor, on Oct. 29. It is expected that he will be tried within the next two weeks.

Ex-Judge Wescott Better.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10 (AP).—Former Judge John W. Wescott of Haddonfield, N. J., ill in a hospital here, was today reported as getting better. He has been ill for more than two weeks.

EVA GAUTHIER GIVES NEW MUSIC PROGRAM

Sings Many Works for First Time in Aeolian Hall Concert—Rare Handel Motetto Heard.

Eva Gauthier gave a program of music from the seventeenth to the twentieth century at Aeolian Hall last evening before a large audience. She was assisted by the Arthur Hartmann String Quartet, Arthur Hartmann, first violin; Walter Edelstein, second violin; Mitja Stillman, viola; Naoum Benditsky, 'cello; by Bruno Labate, first oboe; George Apchain, second oboe; Benjamin Kohon, bassoon, and by Emil Mix, bass. Germaine Tailleferre, the French composer, played the harpsichord in the Handel motetto; Celius Dougherty presented his own sonata. True to Miss Gauthier's policy, the program was rich in first times and in rare compositions.

The first group consisted of three seventeenth century songs in manuscript, transcribed from the figured bass by the Italian composer Ottorino Respighi, and sung for the first time. No. 1 by Bernardo Pasquini had a distinctly ecclesiastical flavor, with a reflection of the English madrigal form; No. 2 would have done credit to one of Mozart's lighter operas; No. 3, with its recitative and aria, was distinctly in the mold that Handel developed.

Miss Gauthier, with the assistance of the instrumentalists and Mlle. Tailleferre, presented a motetto by Handel which was said to be its first performance in America. This work is not published except in the large edition of Handel's works, and is only to be had in the museums. The copy for this concert was made from the manuscript in the Berlin Museum. It must be confessed that it sounded like a museum piece. It was long and repetitious and needed more rehearsal. Also Miss Gauthier's voice is not suited to the heavy Handelian phrases and runs. The recitative, the andante and the allegro were the best portions of the work. Miss Gauthier was warmly applauded at the end.

Then Mr. Dougherty gave the first performance of his own Sonata in E flat major. This work, in three movements, was composed in 1925. Mr. Dougherty must have spent a great deal of time on it, for it is long and prolix; involved, confused and confusing.

Miss Gauthier reappeared in a French group of songs by Claude Debussy and four Scottish songs, with accompaniments by Respighi. The last also were first performances in America.

What ATLANTA Offers You

TRANSPORTATION—Fifteen radiating lines of eight strong railroad systems. A semi-circle of ports with adequate coast-wise and export shipping.

LABOR—Intelligent, adaptable Anglo-Saxon people, free from the unreasonable attitude which elsewhere has so seriously hampered production and raised costs.

RAW MATERIAL—25 of the 26 industrial minerals in commercial quantity. Cotton, Lumber and other important materials are all close by.

POWER—Hydro electric lines serving the area at rates lower, with one exception, than in any other industrial center in the United States.

SITES—Plentiful locations on railroads, accessible to Labor, Power, Water, etc. Building costs far lower than in other sections.

WAREHOUSING—Adequate space, well located for reshipment or city delivery.

FINANCIAL RESOURCES—Headquarters Sixth Federal Reserve District. 23 Banks and Trust Companies with resources more than two hundred millions. Atlanta stands 5th per capita in bank clearings nationally, 33rd in population and 15th in volome of clearings.

COST OF LIVING—Estimated by National Industrial Conference Board 7.5% below average for the country. One of the seven low cities in this respect.

CLIMATE—Altitude of 1050 feet above Sea Level makes for health. No extremes of heat or cold.

No State Income Tax
No State Inheritance Tax

FROM the beginning, Transportation has been the keynote of Atlanta's growth. Railroad surveyors, choosing the point where the traffic lanes from East and Mid-West might meet with the easiest gradients, drove a stake. The village of Terminus, which grew up around that stake, has become the metropolis which is Atlanta.

Fifteen lines of eight great railroad systems now radiate from here, serving overnight a market of more than 12 million people—the tremendous traffic originating here keeps the rails shiny. A semi-circle of active ports close by supplies further distribution facilities. An airport, already actively in service, adds the final touch.

Atlanta has come to be known as the Distribution Center of the South. More than 700 nationally known concerns, attracted by the unsurpassed Transportation facilities and other vital factors, have chosen Atlanta above all other cities as Southern headquarters.

On the ground, observing the fundamental production economies available because of conditions in the Atlanta Industrial Area, these great producers are expanding sales offices into branch factories, to serve the amazingly rich Southern market—the fastest growing market in America—whose purchasing power has increased 200% in the last ten years.

They find efficient Anglo-Saxon labor an important economy factor. Power rates compare favorably with the lowest in the country. Taxes are so low as to have attracted national attention. Raw materials—all in plentiful supply and within easy haul—are present at reasonable prices to care for practically every branch of industry. And many other factors of equal importance total up to savings which no producer can afford to overlook.

The facts which brought about this great march of Industry to Atlanta will be laid before you, directly applied to your business, in the form of a special, confidential survey upon your request.

For the reappearance of Old Bill, the lovable, walrus-lipped Tommy of the famous cartoons, Mr. Bairnsfather has mixed melodrama with comedy in "Old Bill, M. P.," put on at the Biltmore last evening. As if this were not enough, he has a good deal to say also about Moscow, Bolshevism, coal miners, war memories and similar terrors of these politically licentious times. Stirred up with incidental music, variegated scenes, stage effects and forty-one characters, to say nothing of "miners, miners' wives and citizens" in ordinary, the resulting compound seems neither fish, flesh nor good red herring, to violate two picturesque idioms.

Scattered and shapeless though the material may be, Old Bill, that "priceless old fruit of the jolly old war," is represented again by Charles Coburn, to the delight of those who remember him from before. With his publican's belly, merry eyes, bulbous nose and informally decorous mustache, his huge frame, his surprised ejaculation of "Ullo, Ullo!" and all the trappings of a perfect comedy conception, Old Bill still crackles with sincere personality. When this cartoon came to life eight years ago Mr. Bairnsfather, if memory serves, was no neater as a playwright than he is today. But somehow the glamour of the war gave sufficient unity to the rambling comedy of Old Bill, Alf and Bert, whose enjoyment of life was not cribbed and confined by want of intellectual development. In "Old Bill, M. P." they still labor over a cigarette lighter that only sparks, they still sing together, drink socially, flirt and laugh uproariously. For all that, one regrets the tedium of their exposition through the medium of labor troubles at an English mine. Mr. Bairnsfather describes his piece an "an adventure in three trucks, eight loads and a shovelful." When Long Tunnel mine is blown up by apostles of Moscow there comes near to being a bucket of blood as well.

For nearly half the play the miners lead a jolly life. Outside the "Better 'Ole" pub on Armistice Day they sing in orderly exuberance, and even in the dank gloom of a pithead a throbbing tenor voice rings clear with fond and sonful memories. Performing his one good deed a day, Old Bill rescues Lady Barbara from some vague unpleasantness off-stage, brings her into his pub and, amid th rebellious, loosened springs of superannuated upholstery, ministers to her distress. Her father, the blond and good-naturedly ineffectual Lord Hadenham, turns out to be owner of the mine where Old Bill labors day by da and her brother, the supercilious Lord Bledlow—who is he but an old comrade from the front? "Ullo, ullo!" What a reunion!

Between songs, exploding furniture spring and whistle-wettings Old Bill manages to represent the more conservative faction of a rebellious miners' union. For Bill, a candidate for Parliament, stands loyally behind his King. The insidious Moscoviane, however, plotters extraordinary, manage to put Bill in the false light of an insurrection leader. But presently he and his two pals are spreading the warning of a mine explosion and are caught in the wreckage of the Long Tunnel. Water begin to rise steadily in their living grave. They face slow death by drowning. Presently they are saved. Presently Old Bill is on trial for criminal complicity, and seems convicted. But the real villain is suddenly unmasked. And presently Old Bill is campaigning for Parliament in his bluff, simple style for a showy final curtain.

Disappointing as all this incoherence is in the theatre, Mr. Bairnsfather nevertheless understands types in character. Occasional shrewd acts of dialogue hit off capitally not only Bill but Alf and Bert, Lord Hadenham, Lord Bledlow and Maggie. Mr. Bairnsfather never develops them; nor does he make them unfold his story; but his cartoonist's sympathy, his comic sense of type and his facility in phase-making result in descriptive skill.

No one needs to be told now that Mr. Coburn's impersonation of Old Bill is perfect comedy. Nor that Mr. McNaughton's Bert is excellent also. Mr. Jordan's Alf (the part previously acted by Colin Campbell) gives off the proper aroma. Miss Clayton makes a bustling, likable Maggie. The awkward construction of "Old Bill, M. P." lets their Cockney flavor evaporate rapidly.

HOSPITAL MUSIC BENEFITS.

"Pied Piper" to Be Given Tomorrow and Saturday in Mecca Temple.

The New York Committee of the National Association for Music in Hospitals, Inc., 109 West Fifty-seventh Street, which is endeavoring to establish music as a fixed and recognized factor in hospital régime, announced yesterday that three benefit performances of "The Pied Piper" would be given at Mecca Temple, 130 West Fifty-sixth Street, in support of the work of the committee, tomorrow night and Saturday afternoon and evening.

The committee hopes to introduce music into hospitals to benefit patients; to arrange so that every hospital will have appropriate musical programs for its wards; and "to give gratuitously proper courses in training together with sufficient experience in hospital practice and ethics, to musicians who wish to carry on this work of taking music to hospital wards."

RADIO INTERFERER HELD.

Chattanooga Youth Operated Out of Wave Length and Used False Signals

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 10 (AP)—Federal Judge Hicks has under advisement today a charge against Martin T. Walters, 18, a university student, of radio broadcasting without a license, operating out of his wave length and using false call signals.

This is the first time an arrest has been made for interfering with radio broadcasting, it is believed.

SERGE RACHMANINOFF HERE

Russian Pianist Brings Some of His New Compositions.

Serge Rachmaninoff, Russian pianist and composer, arrived yesterday on the French liner Paris with some of his new works, including Concerto 4, which will be played for the first time with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra under Leopold Stokowski. He had no piano in his stateroom on the ship and told the reporters that all the melodies for the various instruments had to be carried in his head.

"It is a great deal of work," said the composer, "I must follow the music of the whole orchestra in my head and those who handle the score make many mistakes." He added that music goes through his mind as words in the mind of a writer.

The pianist went to Europe with his wife to visit their two daughters, Princess Wolonsky and Mlle. Tatiani Rachmaninoff in Paris. Their only son was killed in the World War. He begins his tour on Jan. 16 next and ends on April 2.

Open to the Public Saturday, Nov. 20th, 10:45 A. M.

What have YOU heard about the new Paramount Theatre?

Good news travels rapidly and everyone seems to have heard something about the wonders of this unbelievable place.

But whatever you've heard there is a thousand times more to find within that great entrance arch five stories high in its carved stone frame.

Once you pass in under that magnificent bronze marquee all shining with light you are sure of the time of your life! All worry vanishes and life becomes a dream of dazzling beauty, glorious colors, intoxicating music and motion pictures that make the minutes fly like seconds.

As you pass through the entrance into a vast semi-circular colonnade of strikingly veined marble columns supported on black and gold marble bases you feel like exclaiming: "Is this a theatre or the palace of a king!"

Shining fifty feet above is a vast dome gleaming radiant gold, and in the distance you see the Grand Hall 150 feet long.

In our next story you will read more about the marvels within the Paramount Theatre.

OPERA STARS GIVE A DAY TO VERDI

MARION TALLEY RETURNS

Again Brings Her Dainty Charm of Youth to "Rigoletto," in Which She Made Her Debut.

All day and in every way—more especially every way—the Metropolitan stars sang Verdi yesterday. A matinee with "Rigoletto," where, as Hugo's adapter has it, "La donna mobile," and an evening with "Aida" by the banks of the Nile, while thermometers on Broadway were sinking to their lowest registers, made a rare gesture of homage to the greatest of Italy's wizards of song. The tribute was more striking in view of present preoccupation with Verdi's most popular successor, whose posthumous work is among three Puccini operas in the next five days at Mr. Gatti-Casazza's vocal anniversary.

Amid echoes of "Turandot" rehearsals, good old "Aida" came back last night, as exotic as anything in these fifty years since Egypt itself commissioned a lyric drama better than it knew or the world dreamed at that day. Familiar elements in the cast found one new associate in Mr. Pinza, whose bass voice in the High Priest's role made a favorable impression as he had in the operas of the opening week.

The singing of Miss Rethberg, in a new and rather "red Indian" make-up, was a delight to hear in its unforced but impassioned vibrancy at high range that rang thrillingly through the theatre. Mr. Martinelli, actually a tenor who sounds like a man when he doesn't sing like a steam siren, looked a credible figure of a hero in love and war. Mr. Basiola was an adroit African captive. He, at least, did not bellow.

In Miss Jeanne Gordon's return, after absence through indisposition last year, the stage gained a pictorial Princess of Egypt, dramatic in dark mood; she was still vocally handicapped in her early scenes, making such effect as she could with some forcing of tones, but beauty, pluck and perseverance won her an ovation in the last act. Miss Ryan, Messrs. d'Angelo and Bada completed the cast and Mr. Serafin conducted.

A matinée audience of large size and uncommonly prompt attendance early in the day greeted Marion Talley, already heard in other operas, but returning on this occasion to that of her début, again with artists who had sung with her last season. The former Kansas City prodigy is fated to represent the glorification or otherwise of the American girl in grand opera just now.

Miss Talley brought the same dainty charm of youth and simplicity, the careful control of a natural voice that has gained in its deeper notes and not gained in middle register with so much singing to vast crowds. Still her upward chromatic scale in the "Caro Nome" air was an achievement, while her high staccati she scattered with almost reckless abandon that drew storm after round of interrupting applause, acknowledged modestly.

Mr. De Luca, whose legato singing at full might be a lesson to wabbly singers the world over, was again the pater-stage father who led the young singer forward to the audience's acclamations. Mr. Lauri-Volpi, whose fine voice suffers from his "loud speaker" habit, was equally generous at the recalls. The Misses Alcock, Anthony and Louise Lerch, Messrs. Didur and Ananian, were others in the large cast, with the newly popular Mr. Bellezza at the baton.

FRENCH ARTISTS ARRIVE.

Members of Light Opera Company Received by Mayor Walker.

Fourteen members of the French Light Opera Company arrived here yesterday on the steamship Paris, headed by Thomas Salignac, artistic director of the Opéra Comique, Paris, who, twenty-five years ago was French tenor at the Metropolitan Opera House. The chorus and orchestra are being rehearsed in New York and the scenery and costumes are also being made here, M. Salignac said.

The company will open at Jolson's Theatre on Nov. 22, for a season of ten weeks. M. Salignac said that this was the psychological time for the presentation of light and cheerful music in America as the people had become tired of music that had no background to it.

The opening opera "Girofle-Girofla," will go into rehearsal this morning with the principals, M. Salignac added. Some of the artists who came with him were Mlle. Sonia Alny, soprano; Georges Foix, tenor; Mlle. Marcelle Evrard, coloratura soprano; Mlle. Briere, Mlle. A. Moreau and M. Servatius, comedian, and Julien Clement, leader of the orchestra.

After leaving the pier at the foot of West Fifteenth Street, the artists were driven to the City Hall, where they were received by Mayor Walker and later to the Hotel McAlpin, which will be their headquarters.

Ada Wood in Song Recital.

Ada Wood, contralto, gave a recital at Town Hall last evening, with the assistance of Richard Hageman at the piano. Miss Wood presented a program of excellent choice, which included compositions by Beethoven, Brahms and Debussy. She began with Bach's beautiful air, "My Heart Ever Faithful," which she gave with sincerity of intention. Salvator Rosa's "Star Vicino," another lovely number, was followed by D'Arne's "Under the Greenwood Tree," thoroughly English in words and musical setting. All three were sung with good taste, good feeling, and within the prescribed limits of tradition and convention.

Hatton Out of New Film Cast.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 10.—Announcement was made today at the Famous Players-Lasky studio that Raymond Hatton, who has been co-featured with Wallace Beery in various comic films, has been removed from the cast of "Casey at the Bat" and that Sterling Holloway, New York comedian, will replace him.

MUSIC NOTES.

Leopold Auer and Walter Damrosch are sponsoring the debut of a 13-year-old boy violinist, Joseph Knitzer of Detroit, who will appear with the New York Symphony Orchestra at a children's concert on Nov. 27 in Carnegie Hall.

Ernest Schelling has accepted an invitation from the Hospital Music Committee of the State Charities Aid Association to appear at the 700th free concert arranged by this committee, on Nov 16 at the City Hospital, Welfare Island.

R. Augustus Lawson, who gives a concert tonight at St. Mark's Church, 138th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, is there announced as being to the piano "what Roland Hayes is to vocal art."

Hubert Linscott, who sang here with the composer during the visit of Igor Stravinsky, gives a recital at the Master Institute tonight, open to the public.

George Miller, baritone, presenting "A Vocal Daguerreotype" at the Hotel Majestic tomorrow night, is a brother of the late Reed Miller, the oratorio tenor, with whom he first collected and sang the songs of the old South.

NEGRO SPIRITUALS IN PARIS.

Fisk Jubilee Singers Win Large Audience in Salle Gaveau.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Before a distinguished audience which filled to the topmost gallery the Salle Gaveau, the Fisk Jubilee Singers scored a notable success tonight with an appealing program of spirituals.

The five negro vocalists from Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., are leaving immediately for a five weeks' tour of Spain, and this was their only Paris concert. It wouldn't take many more concerts like tonight's to start a Parisian vogue for the plaintive religious songs of the negro, for while there was a large number of Americans present, fully three-fourths of the hall was filled with French folk, all of whom were demonstrative in their appreciation.

"Deep River," "Wish I'se in Heaven" and "I Want to Die Easy" were among the selections which brought forth long applause, and "Carry Me Back to Ol' Virginny" and "Swanee River" had a happily familiar ring even for the French.

THEATRE GUILD LEASES JOHN GOLDEN THEATRE

The Theatre Guild announced yesterday that it had leased the new John Golden Theatre in Fifty-eighth Street near Seventh Avenue. The lease is for "a term of years." The Guild's lease of the Klaw Theatre will expire in January, and the Garrick Theatre, where the Guild made its first production eight years ago, will likewise be relinquished after this season. With its own theatre in Fifty-second Street the Guild will continue to have two playhouses under its control.

The opening Guild attraction at the John Golden, as yet unannounced, will probably be Sidney Howard's play, "Ned McCobb's Daughter."

Clergymen Back Actors' Fund Drive.

Daniel Frohman, who is conducting an active campaign on behalf of the Actor's Fund, announced yesterday that he had received letters from Cardinal Hayes, Bishop William T. Manning, and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, all endorsing the cause and allowing their names to be added to the campaign committee. In addition, many business men are cooperating with Mr. Frohman.

Director to Wed Laura La Plante.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10 (AP).—William U. Fred Seiter, motion picture director, and Laura Isabella La Plante, screen actress, obtained a marriage license here today. The wedding will take place Sunday in a Hollywood Church. Miss La Plante was a "baby star" selected by the Western motion picture advertisers in 1923.

"This Was a Man" at Klaw Nov. 23.

Noel Coward's comedy, "This Was a Man," is announced to open at the Klaw Theatre on Tuesday night, Nov. 23. It is being produced by Basil Dean, with a cast including Francine Larrimore, A. E. Matthews and Nigel Bruce.

"Autumn Fire," now at the Klaw, will be moved to another theatre.

"The Emperor Jones" Revived.

Eugene O'Neill's "The Emperor Jones," with Charles S. Gilpin in the rôle which he originally acted, was revived last night at the Mayfair Theatre. It was preceded by William C. De Mille's short play, "In 1999."

MURAL FOR MORRIS SCHOOL.

As a memorial to former students of Morris High School who served in the World War, a fifty-foot mural painting in the school's auditorium was formally presented to the city last night at a mass meeting in the school, 166th Street and Boston Road, the Bronx. More than 1,200 persons viewed the mural, which has been placed in the panel over the stage, and heard the program of addresses and patriotic music.

Auguste François Gorguet, French painter, who executed the $8,000 painting, was on the platform. It required six years to design and paint the mural. It depicts three female figures —Immortality, Good Government and Peace—grouped around an oak in the midst of a war-time scene in devastated France. In front of the oak rests a tablet, on which are inscribed the names of the eighteen former Morris students who died in the war.

Miss Dela P. Mussey, art teacher in the high school, said the $8,000 the painting cost was raised by voluntary contributions of present and past students of the school.

NOVEMBER 10, 1926.
My Dear Mr. Pemberton:
This is just a line to thank you for giving me such a treat last night at "The Ladder."
It is encouraging to know that we have in the theatre such a thoroughly charming and skillful actress as Miss Antoinette Perry. Her performance of a difficult and taxing role awakened real admiration in me. I am going to send the students of the Theatre Guild School to see her.
You yourself are to be congratulated upon having the courage to bring to New York a play of such absorbing and novel interest, as well as upon having found a cast of such general excellence and mounting the play with such infinite taste.
Sincerely yours,
(Signed) HAMILTON MACFADDEN,

EIGHT YEARS AFTER.

Observance of Armistice Day has necessarily varied in emphasis during the successive years. The sense of military victory and national glory first associated with it becomes dimmer as we get further away from the thunder of the captains and the shouting. Yet one element in the celebration has remained constant. This is the pious and affectionate remembrance of the dead. Thus Armistice Day has been assuming more and more of a likeness to Memorial Day. Whatever changing views about the origin of the war and its sequels may have supervened since 1918, there has been no alteration in our feeling of gratitude to the young men who were proud to give all for their country, and whose graves today make sweet the soil of France to the millions of Americans who do not forget.

We cannot forget our soldier dead, nor can we forget the deep impression of national unity and devotion to a noble ideal which they created as they marched away. While the lapse of time makes us feel that here is no cause for tears, or beating the breast, over a death so noble, nothing can extinguish the instinctive obligation which we all cherish. The hush of silence today is one of deeply felt commemoration. At the summons of their country, the flower of our youth came forward gladly to make every sacrifice demanded. This it should be our pride today to recall. It was a precious gift for the nation, which it will surely never grow too old or too callous to hold in vivid recollection. Armistice Day is still like the "haughty day" of which the American poet wrote, but more and more as the years pass it seems to be "tenderly" filled with emotions centring upon the gallant and high-spirited young men who, as President GARFIELD said of those who fought for the preservation of the Union, heard the voice of their Great Mother bidding them go forth and die for her, and obeyed without a murmur or regret.

HIGH HATS AND HUMANE CONTACTS.

Attorney General OTTINGER calls on Republicans to "discard the moth-"eaten frock coat, throw away the "worn-out high hat and revive actual "and humane contact with the great "body of voters." He modestly disclaims any desire to assume political leadership, but as the sole survivor of the Smith landslide he surely has as good a right to advise as any. Doubtless Mr. MORRIS, who says he is going to remain State Chairman as a matter of stern duty, and Mr. KOENIG, still in purdah, would like to know how he turned the trick. It comes down, in effect, to this: "Who licked "you? 'AL' SMITH. Then why "don't you go and steal his clothes?"

It wouldn't do the Republican Party any harm to get into closer touch with the voters now and then, but this particular strategy is rather baffling. Why go out deliberately to fight the enemy on his own chosen battlefield, where he has shown time and again that he can manoeuvre with devastating skill? It will take hardy political leadership indeed to rival Governor SMITH's own "humane contact with the great body of voters." Why, then, so desperate a recourse? Perhaps because Governor SMITH has beaten the Republicans in their own field, long since stole the frock coat and high hat Mr. OTTINGER now wants them to throw away.

We are accustomed to think of the Governor in terms of the common people. "'AL' SMITH is in no way different from the rest of us, and that is "why we love him," BOURKE COCKRAN used to say. Until the Summer of 1915 he was widely regarded as a popular New Yorker who had done well in the Legislature. That Summer he went to the Constitutional Convention, and ran up against such Republican Olympians as ROOT, STIMSON, WICKERSHAM. There never was a more "high-hat" gathering in New York State. At first they patronized him—patted him on the back as a promising young chap who had really done rather well to rise so high, considering his Oliver Street background. But he promptly met them on their own ground. They soon discovered that his knowledge of State government and finance was superior to their own, and before the convention was over they were sitting at his feet.

Governor SMITH's career since that year has confirmed their judgment. If in the last election the voters had had to choose between an exceptionally able man and an exceptionally representative man merely, they might have been in more of a quandary. As it was, crediting Mr. MILLS with every excellence claimed for him, they had to choose between an exceptionally able man and an exceptionally representative man who was abler still, and had proved it. It is the Governor's unique distinction that he combines the common touch with that degree of sheer ability which Republicans like to think is theirs alone. Mr. OTTINGER wants "team-work between the heart and the brain of the party." That is a pretty good definition of what the Democrats in New York State have had under Governor SMITH.

TOILS OF THE LAW.

There may be danger of misinterpreting Mr. ROOT's statement that our legal system must be rid of "catch-as-catch-can methods" in order to meet the needs "of this tumultuous and complicated world." He was stressing the necessity of arriving at a body of fundamental principles for guidance through—and defense against—the mass of statutes and judicial decisions. In a period of five years 60,000 laws were enacted in the United States, 65,000 decisions were handed down from the bench. That is, indeed, catch-as-catch-can. You grind out statutes and decisions and hope that some of them in some way will work.

On the same day when Mr. ROOT was speaking in New York our Crime Commission was in Toronto studying criminal jurisprudence and crime control in Canada. The members of the commission were "astonished" by what they heard. Astonishment apparently arose from the extraordinary contrast between Canada and this country. Juries in criminal or civil cases drawn in half an hour; men accused of serious crime indicted one day, tried the next, and convicted or acquitted within two days more; two-thirds of all criminal cases disposed of without being sent to a jury; appeals to a higher jurisdiction a rare event—these things sound as though they came not from across the border but from another planet. Yet they total up to that very simple thing—swift justice. More than the inequities of the law, men resent the law's delays.

Canada's methods, or the methods of any other foreign country, cannot be applied in toto to conditions here. But the question is of principles, of the spirit animating the machinery of justice. We stand in greater need of directness and simplicity of approach for the very reason that we have to deal with problems much more complicated and greater in number than has Canada. The more "tumultuous" the environment the greater the need of swift, sure-footed, straightforward guidance. Twelve thousand statutes a year; 13,000 annual decisions; months spent in drawing indictments; weeks in selecting a jury; hordes of witnesses; hypothetical questions several hundred words long; entire printed volumes read or droned into the record.

Despite Mr. ROOT's warning against happy thought solutions, it is impossible not to believe that partial relief might come from abbreviation. The truth may be elicited from a handful of well-selected witnesses more successfully than from a mob of confused gossipers. Justice may be rendered more effectively by a jury presented with the gist of a case than by a jury stupefied with millions of words.

THE BRITISH WAY.

The question of "equality of status" among the Dominions of the British Commonwealth seems about to be disposed of in the characteristic British manner. There was much enthusiastic prediction that the Government would be asked by the assembled Premiers and representatives to declare "full and free nationhood," as General HERTZOG puts it, for all the Dominions. But most of these are pretty well satisfied with their status, except when there is a general election. Premier KING, for instance, will postpone to some other conference the demand of the Canadians to amend their own Constitution and to settle their own law cases absolutely, cutting off the appeal jurisdiction of the Privy Council. He has got something concrete, a Canadian Minister at Washington. There is no hurry: and the zeal for definitions is lacking.

There is an agreeable range and possibility in "status," so long as it isn't defined. General HERTZOG, however he has varied his original program of "sovereign independence" for the Union of South Africa, has been pressing for a definition of the equal status of the Dominions; but a status that has grown up naturally and in different circumstances, changed and always will be subject to change, is scarcely capable of common definition. Australia and New Zealand and Canada, for example, take a different view of imperial cooperation and unity and Dominion "freedom" and "independence" from that of the present majority in South Africa. It was found impossible to draw up "a constitutional declaration" that would satisfy opposing opinions. The Conference gave it up, leaving General HERTZOG, if disappointed, not without a remedy for he will be able to negotiate on his own hook with the British Government.

The Conference proceeded in the usual British way. There is plenty of time. Don't try to do too much. Distrust formulas. Don't try to anticipate events. Relations and institutions will be shaped by them. Anomalies are healthful and definitions pin you down. Each Dominion will work out its own status in its own fashion, and theories or written prescriptions won't be of much use. When a bridge has to be crossed, cross it.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA LYNCHING.

The lynching of three colored persons near Aiken, S. C., was peculiarly atrocious, besides being a deep reproach to the State authorities because of the circumstances. After a fair hearing of their case on appeal to the State Supreme Court, the Judge directed the acquittal of one of the defendants and a new trial for the other two. The evidence against them was so weak that it was expected that they, too, would be freed by the jury. But before any further legal steps could be taken, a mob gathered and the prisoners were taken from jail and brutally murdered. The investigation of the outrage which has been undertaken by The New York World and others is bringing out fresh details, and information laid before the Governor of South Carolina seems to be of a sort to identify some at least of the lynchers. On Monday Governor McLEOD professed a strong determination to pursue an official inquiry of his own relentlessly, and to see that the guilty are punished if the evidence against them is conclusive. The stirring up of the affair has led at least to this result, and the final course of the State officials will be watched closely and with deep interest both inside and outside of South Carolina.

The best citizens of that State must surely support every movement to put a proper ban upon this kind of criminal lawlessness. Lynch law has fewer and fewer defenders in the South. It sets up a kind of terrorism that has wide ramifications. In this particular case the investigators have encountered more than one reputable white citizen who had not dared to testify concerning his own knowledge of the perpetrators of the crime, but was thankful that steps had been taken even by outsiders to uncover the whole matter and expose the guilty. Thus it may be hoped that from so extreme and indefensible an example of "unofficial execution" some help may come to those who, both North and South, are working for the extirpation of this great evil, which is so flagrant a violation of all our national professions regarding the due administration of justice.

JAPAN'S NEW LAND LAW.

By imperial decree the Japanese Government has made effective the legislation, pending since 1910, granting to foreigners the right to own land in Japan. Heretofore they have been able only to lease, and this solely in regions not specifically designated as of military or strategic importance. Beginning Nov. 10 they may acquire title to land, always providing that it is not within forbidden areas. These include the islands of Hokkaido, Saghalien and Formosa, and numerous districts within specified distances from fortified sections and from naval bases.

From the point of view of Americans in Japan the final promulgation of this law, so long awaited, has no especial significance. The number of permanent residents in Japan of American nationality is small. They have always been able to obtain by lease such properties as were necessary to their lawful occupations. Japan was never faced with the problem of large numbers of Americans wishing to buy and settle on rich agricultural lands, and there to establish colonies in which they sought to perpetuate their own language and customs. But this final act is important as an indication of Japan's progressiveness and her good-will toward other nations. The order grants to the Crown the right at any time to exempt from these privileges the nationals of any country which denies to Japanese the right to own land within its territories. This provision, however, has not been put into effect. All foreigners may benefit from the new arrangement.

Anti-Japanese agitators in the Pacific Coast States for years have attacked Japan because she demanded that Japanese enjoy the same rights, so far as land ownership is concerned, as other foreigners, while denying to foreigners within her own territory such an equality. No longer can this argument be used against her. In fact, this new step by Japan may open the way for a satisfactory diplomatic settlement of a long-vexed question. The Japanese Government does not seek to force its citizens upon any country. It asks only for equal treatment. So if it becomes clear that a change in the California land laws is impossible, there is nothing to prevent the negotiation of a treaty setting forth the reciprocal rights and privileges in regard to the purchase or lease of lands by citizens of Japan in the United States, and vice versa.

THE MOTHER OF CHEOPS.

It is a monument of the filial devotion of CHEOPS to his mother, hidden for as many centuries as looked down upon NAPOLEON from the Great Pyramid, that now is opened to sight in Egypt. Dr. GEORGE A. REISNER of the Harvard University and Boston Museum, who for more than twenty years has been exploring ancient Egypt, has finally identified his discovery of last year as the tomb of the wife of SENEFRU and the mother of the builder of one of the seven wonders of the world. The Hanging Gardens of SEMIRAMIS are in the dust. The Temple of Diana of Ephesus was burned by the Goths. The mausoleum which ARTEMISIA erected in honor of her husband, MAUSOLUS, has been pillaged to build other structures. The Pharos at Alexandria no longer holds aloft the light of PTOLEMY. PHIDIAS's statue of Jupiter was carried away to Constantinople and finally destroyed by fire. The Colossus of Rhodes was cast to the ground by an earthquake. But the work of the son of Queen HETEPHERES, whose tomb remains as it was more than forty centuries ago a few feet from this mightiest of monuments, stands alone of all these wonders with the Sphinx and the lesser pyramids about it.

There is a stela, discovered seventy years ago during the excavations of the Sphinx, which makes reference to a temple imputed to CHEOPS as having been built to a goddess, called his Divine Mother. Whatever that structure may have been in its original glory, it can have no such significance as this tomb and temple to his own earthly mother, which was filled with the precious souvenirs of his affection and of his concern for her comfortable and safe journey into the land beyond. The archaeologist will be interested chiefly in the articles themselves as disclosing something more of the art, the daily life, the religion of the Fourth Dynasty, which lies twenty centuries further back than the days of TUT-ANKH-AMEN: the designs of the decorations, the manner of carpentering, the quality of pottery, the metal working and the tools with which they wrought. But the revelation of the devotion of the son to the memory of the mother whose body had been buried first in a tomb elsewhere, but was transferred to a secret burial chamber near his own monument and resting place out "in the beautiful West," will be more appealing even than the one in which attention was shown to the young King centuries and centuries later when he started out on the same journey, though it may not reveal such splendor.

It is a crowning achievement for the years of Dr. REISNER's patient, methodical, brilliant and fruitful labor. In his low-lying compound, like a collection of black Bedouin huts beside the skyscraper of Giza, huddled the other side of the Great Pyramid toward the desert, he has carried on a ceaseless search back through the ages with his company of devoted fellow-workers and loyal natives, and with the sympathy of the Egyptians themselves, who must now rejoice over his recovery for them of an added page of their past on which is written a message of piety. It is another service to the learning and culture of the whole world of which America has good reason to be proud.

"SHABBY" NOVEMBER.

Although November does not hum with the fullness of life common to the Spring and Summer months, it is far from "shabby" or dull. Those who saunter abroad these days in the brown fields and up the sombre hillslopes cannot share the poetaster's traditional melancholia brought on by the dying season. For the walker the buoyancy of the air is far more exhilarating than the stuffy heat of Summer and the blanching glare of an August noontime. Now that the leaves have fallen, clean and crackling under foot, the woods are lighter, the views widen through bare branches, the evergreens bathe the eye more soothingly than ever, and the structural design of the deciduous trees is revealed as perfect symmetry. Consider, for instance, the shagbark. Shorn of its Summer verdure, it cuts against the sky like an etching; its sharp network of twigs and branches seems almost acid-bitten.

Ornithologists, whose outdoor work is never finished, are renewing their acquaintance with the birds that went North last March. For the past two weeks the tree sparrows have been drifting back to the bushes, where they will twitter with equanimity most of the Winter. The reddish fox sparrows are scratching in the leaves, and the white-throated sparrows, the "Peabody birds," endeared to every vacationist by their beautiful, plaintive melody, have returned to Bronx Park, Van Cortlandt Park and other quarters for their autumnal siesta. Now freed of domestic responsibility robins, flickers, purple finches, pipets are wandering about aimlessly with appropriate good humor. And the commoner Winter birds, the chickadees, white-bellied nuthatches, woodpeckers and juncos, who refuse to bother their heads about mere seasons anyway, are as cheery as they are ubiquitous.

While the present season fades, drenching the stay-at-homes with cosmic, factitious gloom, the new season lies waiting for the summons. Already the beech and alder buds are ready for the encouragement of warm weather. Unlike politics, Nature does not change administrations abruptly; she is never off with the old and on with the new. The same wind that whirls the dead leaves through the woods distributes the seeds in the fields. November is the courier of June.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Both Liquids Now Supplied. The thirsty of the city—that is, those whose thirst is legal—may rejoice, for the heavens have opened above the Catskills and the Ashokan reservoir is rapidly filling up. Coming so soon after the vindication of the city's milk supply by the electorate, it must cause great relief to all save those who see in this another betrayal of the people by their enemies.

Tammany Hall, it is whispered, is jubilant. For a few brief weeks while the rain refused to rain upon either the just or the unjust it looked as if the charges made by the official spokesman of the Republican high priests in this city to the effect that the reservoir built by Democrats for Democrats had been permitted by Democrats to leak might not be refuted in time. What if an undeserving Republican had really cut holes in the bottom of the reservoir in order to have the Democrats "get in Dutch"?

It never rains but it pours. In this city of certified milk and honey the babbling brooks again flow unrestricted. There is plenty to drink for all. Even sinners are encouraged and dream dreams in which they have visions of a post-Volstead ship sailing in, like the Homeric galleys from Lemnos, "bringing much wine."

The Shawl Returns to Fashion. To the cynical, who suspect the Paris designers and dressmakers of inventing clothes that require expert and intricate knowledge, it has been something of a mystery that the shawl should return to popularity. It is not a complicated garment. It has no sleeves, no hems, no "lines" artfully seamed in, no detail that the simplest girl cannot devise. In fact, it is nothing but a square of silk or cloth. That such a wrap should be whooped up by Paris seems incredible, yet it is true.

While the blessing is ours, let us rejoice rather than carp suspiciously. The world shows more beauty when the shawl is the fashion. Its simplicity of pattern allows some attention to be given to texture and color. It may be as frail and lacy as snowflakes, as heavily gorgeous as the mirror-studded draperies of India, as satiny-sleek as the lady who wears it to the opera. Variety may appear only in the material and hue. But that is change enough.

Most women know how to wear a shawl. There is no art to learn in the matter. It is a primitive garment, and instinct suffices the wearer, who tosses it arrogantly over her shoulder or wraps it demurely about her, according to her temperament. Men, alas! appear to be uninterested in shawls for themselves. They used to wear them, neatly draped and folded. But they are too feminine now for men. It is impossible to imagine one sweetly wrapped about the square shoulders of the heroes of clothing advertisements.

Political Opinion in the Virgin Islands. Our naval government in the Virgin Islands is preferred by some to native authority. Indeed, a contributor to The West End News of St. Croix (who may be a resident American) says that no one who has not been misled by agitators has any fault to find with the existing government. He declares that the upper classes of Virgin Island society, colored as well as white, would be sorry to see it set aside for any form of "civil government."

The writer of the article in the St. Croix paper says that a senior Senator from a New England State recently introduced a bill in Congress, "by request," the effect of which would have been to "transfer the American colony into another Haiti overnight." On second thought, the Senator withdrew his bill. In a letter to a citizen of St. Croix he wrote that it had been introduced to "oblige a lady."

Though the whites are reluctant to see the naval government superseded, because they might have to endure a much worse one, they want the United States to do something to redeem the islands from decay. They propose American capital to replace Danish, irrigation on a large scale, and the right to manufacture rum for European consumption, which they enjoyed before the Virgin Islands were acquired from Denmark.

The Indians and Their Ancestors. Although it is always possible that traces of prehistoric man may be found on this continent antedating those discovered elsewhere in the world, the latest reported finds in Wyoming do not promise to overthrow the contention of anthropologists and archaeologists that man is a recent settler here.

This does not preclude the probability that there were successive waves of migration. This thesis has much to support it. Nor does it mean that all came by the same route—that is, across the Bering Strait. The mystery of the American Indian is still unsolved, despite the many important discoveries made by scientists in recent years. There are evidences that instead of spreading from north to south, as would naturally be presumed if the Kamchatka-Alaska migration route is accepted, it spread from Central America and Mexico northward.

It is for this reason that the recent uncovering of jungle-buried cities in Central America is of greatest interest to archaeologists. When once the ages of the different architectural types are definitely established, and the area of influence of the successive Mayan dynasties is mapped, it may be possible to approach the problem of the American Indian freed from some of the traditional prejudices which have perhaps unconsciously hampered the outlook of students in the past.

DISPUTING MR. WHEELER.

Dry Leader's Statements on Referendum Are Called Unfounded.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is true that our State courts did not pass on the ultimate legality of the change suggested in the Volstead act, namely, to leave the determination of what constituted intoxicating liquor to the lawmaking bodies of the various States. No determination could be had at this time of this question for the reason that our courts do not pass on the legality of statutes prior to their passage. However, the unanimous opinion of the best legal authorities was and is that the Volstead act can be amended so as to leave to the Legislatures of the various States the determination of what alcoholic content makes a liquid intoxicating.

The Supreme Court has said that Congress could go as far as it liked in defining intoxicating liquor, and that body certainly reached a reductio ad absurdum when it told the nation that an intoxicating liquor was one containing anything above one-half of 1 per cent. alcohol by volume. Legally, Congress could go to the other extreme and define an intoxicating liquor as one containing more than 50 per cent. alcohol by volume and thus nullify the intent of the Eighteenth Amendment. In other words, Congress possesses the power to make the necessary enforcement act a reasonable piece of legislation or a farce.

There have been no decisions holding that the various States could not define intoxicating liquor, provided their definition did not conflict with the existing Federal statute, and Wayne B. Wheeler's statement that "many courts and Legislatures have already declared such legislation to be unenforceable" is misleading and unfounded.

The vote on the referendum in New York State was as important and prophetic as those words of warning on the wall at Belshazzar's feast.

To petition for the change of a bad law cannot be called by any possible analogy an "attack on law enforcement," even though Mr. Wheeler "may insist" to the contrary. The referendum was a petition for the redress of wrongs.

Of course it is obvious that the effective machinery for the amendment or repeal of the Volstead act is the election of a liberal and sane Congress, but what preliminary step can be more efficacious than a vote of the people to determine their wishes prior to the nomination and election of the next Congress?

Straw votes show the direction of the wind of public opinion, and to such a hurricane as blew last election day Congress and our political parties must bend. NORMAN JOHNSON.

New York, Nov. 8, 1926.

Mr. Wheeler's Ingenuousness.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What a delightfully ingenuous soul is our Wayne B. Wheeler! One wishes that he would more often remove the veil of personal modesty from the pure white light of his uplifting spirit. It is so rare for Mr. Wheeler to tell us what he has done. Today he informs us, "I carried the case to the Supreme Court"; the case involving the desire of the people of Ohio to express their opinion of the ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment. Thus did Mr. Wheeler seek to save the people of Ohio from what he calls the "poor policy, poor economy and poor judgment" of expressing their opinion on proposed action of their legislators. Helpful Mr. Wheeler!

But at this point Mr. Wheeler's innate modesty again overcomes him; he tells us nothing of the methods he used to get the opinion of the Anti-Saloon League before the legislators of Ohio and other States. If Mr. Wheeler would only tell us about these methods we should no doubt see that the opinion of the people was not merely without legal effect but that it was entirely futile.

But modesty is carried too far when Mr. Wheeler asks us to credit the creation of "the Prohibition Union" to the "voluntary action of three-fourths of the States." If Mr. Wheeler will let his light so shine that the mass of his fellow-citizens can catch only flickers of its brilliance, he did not conceal it from the State legislators, who saw it as a blinding, compelling glare which lighted the only road to political salvation. HARRISON W. SMITH.

Praise for Noise Diminution.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Unfortunately it seems to be characteristic to condemn and rarely give praise. I think all those who some weeks ago were complaining about the unnecessary noises caused by the excessive blowing of horns and whistles on trucks and automobiles must have noticed the great abatement of these unnecessary noises.

Credit for this should be given to the policy inaugurated by the Police Department, particularly under the guidance of Philip D. Hoyt, Chairman of the Traffic Board, and Deputy Chief Inspector William A. Coleman, who began an active campaign in September to eliminate this nuisance, and who have in a few weeks secured remarkably good results, although there are a few violators yet. I for one want to praise these officials for the very good work accomplished. SIG. SAXE.

NOVEMBER ELEVENTH.

I searched for utter silence in the deep
And holy twilight of cathedral aisles,
And where the pillared pines communion keep
In windless quietude, and where the miles
Of void about a mountain peak are hung
With curtains of still cloud that are not swung
By any breath.

And then I found it where
A stunning silence cracked the startled air

PLANNING THE TAX REBATE.

Cut for Small Corporations and Civil War Note Payment Suggested.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The President's suggestion of a rebate or refund of taxes, which appears to be warranted by the present surplus in the Treasury, is heartening news to taxpayers, particularly to those who have not been benefited by previous reductions. It would be a creditable thing if legislators, setting aside party politics and with no ulterior view of gaining personal glory for future political candidates, would unite their efforts toward bringing about any tax reduction to which the taxpayers may be entitled.

A class of taxpayers deserving of special consideration along this line is that of the small corporations. Whereas individuals have been gaining the benefit of continuous reduction in personal income tax, the taxes of corporate entities have been increased, so that, under the Revenue act of 1926, for the fiscal year 1926 and thereafter corporations will be subject to a tax of 13½ per cent. on net income. This tax, in addition to a 4½ per cent. tax on industrial corporations imposed by the State of New York, are burdensome items, keenly felt by the small corporate taxpayers and tending to retard the progress of their business.

The elimination of the Federal capital stock tax, while intending to effect some saving, was of little benefit to the small corporation. It has been seen that reduction of taxes has served to stimulate business activity, so that the Treasury Department, in spite of lower rates, has suffered no decreased revenue from that source. M. M. FELDMAN.

Would Pay Civil War Notes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I suggest that the surplus now in the United States Treasury, or anticipated, might be better employed than in a wholesale rebate to taxpayers?

The United States notes, representing a forced loan, should be paid. It is a disgrace that they have been allowed to remain unpaid so many years, bearing no interest, while the Government is exerting itself to pay off the interest-bearing indebtedness of the country.

It ill behooves any of us to make remarks about the attitude of foreign nations toward their debts to the United States when our own Government withholds from its citizens, without interest, money forcibly borrowed—conscripted—in the '60s to pay for the Civil War.

Concerning Academic Tendencies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Please accept my thanks for the editorial, in THE TIMES this morning, entitled "Academic Amenities." The teachers and executive financiers operating our higher educational institutions are primarily responsible for the unsportsmanlike degeneration and intemperate perversion, by undergraduates and alumni, of the temperate and health-giving college athletics of the mid-Victorian days. It was not thus when I was there some sixty years ago (the word "thus" being left intentionally ambiguous).

These modern days of banditry, bootlegging and contemptuous violations of fanatically "ideal" prohibitory laws by the most ardent lovers of law and order present an exceptional necessity of inspiring our highly educated youth with a sincere and enthusiastic respect for fundamental law and order, without which "high ideals" run amuck.

It is high time to eliminate the traditional exemption of the "scholar" from the penalties of lawbreaking, and to extend the jurisdiction of police officers and Police Magistrates over "college rowdyism" on the college campus or elsewhere.

Straight-Shooting Policemen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Chief Philip Gargan of the Pelham Manor Police Department has set an example which might well be followed by the protectors of other communities. During the hot weather it was an agreeable change for motorists to note the absence of coats on the neatly attired officers of this small but efficient department.

Now, with an outdoor target range and a seventy-five foot revolver range in the basement of headquarters, all hands from the Chief down are compelled to participate in target practice. Every man in the department is an excellent shot, and residents of the village are secure in the knowledge that no effort is being spared to serve them to the utmost. The forthcoming competition among the departments of Westchester County villages on Nov. 13 promises to be hotly contested, and Chief Gargan is hopeful of excellent scores by his men.

Compulsory training in the use of revolvers should be instituted in all police departments. WILLIAM GILBERT.

Old-Time Wisconsin Newspapers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just been reading with a great deal of interest the national list of firms and newspapers seventy-five years old in THE NEW YORK TIMES supplement.

Under the head of publications, those mentioned from Wisconsin omit The Janesville Daily Gazette. This is today the third oldest newspaper in Wisconsin and has been in continuous existence, as a weekly and later, in 1854, as a daily, since Aug. 18, 1845. The only newspapers in the State older than The Janesville Gazette under the same name as when established are The Grant County Herald and The Milwaukee Sentinel.

The Sentinel has been in continuous existence for seven years longer than The Gazette, and the original Grant County Herald was established in 1843, although there has been a hiatus in its publication.

A Gibe From Philadelphia.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of last Saturday I read the article, "Surgeons Urge Use of Medical Movies." The Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital of Philadelphia, of which I have the privilege to be President, has been using films of this character for eight or nine years. We find them decidedly efficient in teaching, particularly in the surgical branches. They were, singularly enough, introduced to us by a New York firm, once again demonstrating that a Philadelphia institution can realize the beneficent value of a movement or a practice that may otherwise be overlooked.

Philadelphia's educational facilities are so widely recognized that it seems unnecessary to indicate the measurement of advancement between them and some of your local colleges. W. C. HERING.

Take It or Leave It.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On election day I voted early and, desiring to give a complimentary vote to John Doe, asked the inspector how to do it. He looked puzzled and worried, said it probably could be done; but they would have to send for an expert, which would delay matters considerably, and intimated that he hoped I would not insist.

I didn't, but I am not satisfied. Should it not be possible to vote for a man whose name does not show on the machine?

PACIFISM NOT PROGRESSIVE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter of William I. Hull, in which he criticizes Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall for the latter's views on religion and militarism, is, I think, a little extreme on the pacifist side of the question.

When Mr. Hull refers to religion, I presume he infers Christianity, which, taken in its true sense, can hardly be called ideal pacifism. Mr. Hull says that "pacifism is pre-eminently the Christian religion * * * but the sincere devotees of that and other religions have sought to enthrone pacifism in the hearts and lives of men." That is just the whole trouble with the modern Christian Church—it is too full of pacifism to accomplish the very thing it sets out to do, namely, to rid the world of sin.

In my opinion, the Church, which in its early days was known as the church militant, was always meant to be an institution to fight against the forces of evil and all that opposed progress in a spiritual and ethical sense, although it is sad to relate that the Church also fought against progress for many centuries. It is because the Church has lost a great deal, if not all, of its militant spirit that it is in the mess it is today. Not so many years ago I was taught in Sunday school to sing "Onward, Christian Soldiers, Marching as to War." Why "as" to war? What is the matter with "on" to war? The average church today is not even marching "as" much less "on" to war, mainly because we are all only too indifferent to conditions around us.

Now, I hold no brief for war, but it is not without its good points. Some of the charges Mr. Hull makes against militarism are doubtless true, but I don't believe that pacifism was ever the keynote to progress. It took a world war, in which millions were killed or wounded, to put this country in the position it occupies today as a world power, and not pacifism. Run over the history of the world or the major powers in the past three or four hundred years and see when the greatest eras of prosperity and progress came—after a great war in almost every case. War is the best of all reformers, for it wipes away the retrograding conditions and tyrannical factors brought about by years of so-called pacifist progress.

I do not believe that there will ever come a time in the history of this planet when war will be no more—at least not until the millennium—whenever that may come. It is human nature to fight for a cause one believes to be right, and I believe that as we progress we use more discretion as to the nature and causes of the wars in which we engage. Unless the Church or religion can conquer the flesh, I think we can look forward to another great conflict within another hundred years, for it so seems that God finds it necessary to scourge mankind every so often as an aid to his progress.

It seems unchristian to slaughter one's fellow-man in wholesale fashion on the field of battle, but that is when the flesh is stronger than the spirit, when disputes cannot be settled in a more dignified manner than by spilling blood. But it must be remembered that killing mankind in international warfare is not the same as one individual killing another to settle personal quarrels. God did not hesitate to lead the children of Israel into battle when the occasion demanded, but He did forbid the killing of one man by another through personal animosity.

Pacifism as a theory is nice, but it is hardly practical even in this enlightened age. I think we ought to get the Church back on a militant basis against the forces that make for war before we preach pacifism as a Christian ideal. G. H. B.

The People's Chorus.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having heard much that was remarkable concerning the work of the People's Chorus of New York City, I attended one of its rehearsals in the High School of Commerce. I had to hear and see to believe that one man, the director, L. Camilieri, could accomplish in one evening what was accomplished in that atmosphere of a man enthused by his belief in the need of people's hearts—singing.

It was simply amazing what that gathering learned in one evening—girls, boys, men and women—many who could not read music and could sing but little, but who, under their leader's magic, were studying Bach and Beethoven as well as the lighter relief music, and singing with wonderful sweetness and volume. I tell you the results were astounding!

If only the people of New York would awaken to the fact that a great man with a great plan is working in their midst with all his strength and gifts to make happier and better citizens, they would give him the support he needs to enlarge the scope of his activities.

Debt Payments and the Tariff.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Mellon's remarks on the bankers' manifesto bring to mind a conversation I had this Summer with a Belfast banker.

He had been bemoaning the numerous taxes to which the country is being subjected. Belfast was in a bad way, owing to the practical death of the linen industry.

"You see," he said, "America was our best market, but with the present high tariff wall we simply cannot sell to you any longer.

"You expect us to pay our war debt, but how are we to do it if we are not allowed an even chance of selling?"

Now, if our mountainous tariff wall is to "bring purchasing power to our people," as Mr. Mellon and all Republicans claim (in simpler words, the right to be as greedy as we choose), what is to happen to the earning power of those countries from which we are demanding debt payments?

This may be construed as meaning that we are thus indirectly paying back our own debt. Even so, how else is it to be accomplished? JUSTICE.

Names Confused.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial writer makes a bad slip in today's "L'Affaire Garibaldi." He describes Federzoni, recently demoted Minister of the Interior, as the erstwhile "Secretary General of the Fascist Party" and as the leader of that exponent of the "savage" faction of that party.

Of course Federzoni is and was nothing of the sort. What your writer must have had in mind was Farinacci, an entirely different person.

The editorial hypothesis built upon this error is therefore, however ben trovato, actually non vera. GINO SPERANZA.

MAYOR ACTS TO END GRADE CROSSINGS

Conference Today Will Attempt to End Deadlock on Danger Spots in Brooklyn.

WANTS ALL RED TAPE CUT

Long Island Railroad Engineers Invited to Give Their Views, as Are Others Interested.

Mayor Walker announced last night that he had summoned to a conference in his office this afternoon the engineers representing five private and public organizations which are interested in the early elimination of the dangerous grade crossings of the Long Island Railroad on Atlantic Avenue, at one of which five motorists recently were killed.

The Mayor's invitation will include the engineers of the Long Island Railroad, the Brooklyn Borough President's office, the Board of Estimate, the Board of Transportation and the State Transit Commission. Mayor Walker's idea is that delay and needless red tape may be avoided by a frank exchange of views. The engineers will be urged to get together upon the best practicable plan in the interest of the conservation of human life.

The State Transit Commission adopted yesterday an order directing that a public hearing be held next Wednesday, at 2:30 P. M., in the commission's offices, 270 Madison Avenue, on the subject of additional safety devices at the crossings until these crossings are permanently eliminated.

This order followed reports by the commission's engineers concerning the possibility of using recently developed additional safety devices and the suggestion made by the District Attorney of Kings County, that automatic electric signals in addition to crossing watchmen, be employed.

Elderts Lane, where last Thursday's tragedy occurred, is one of eighteen crossings in Atlantic Avenue between East New York and Jamaica. The railroad here traverses a thickly populated section and the problem of eliminating the crossings has been for years a subject of conference and combat, with virtually nothing accomplished. Last year nine persons lost their lives at city crossings on the Long Island system.

Under the passage of the State referendum, which sanctioned a $300,000,000 bond issue for the elimination of grade crossings, there was awarded by the Legislature $5,000,000 to the State Transit Commission for New York City removals. The law provides that grade crossing removals are to be paid for at the rate of 50 per cent. by the railroad, 25 per cent. by the State and 25 per cent. by the city or county.

In New York City, however, the problem frequently is complicated by the fact that a proposed grade crossing removal is coupled with some ambitious project of street improvement for which no part of the State loan is available. The Atlantic Avenue project is thus handicapped. Brooklyn has been clamoring for the sinking of the tracks on Atlantic Avenue below ground and the incidental creation of a fine boulevard on the surface as a Brooklyn outlet to Queens. In such a case the Transit Commission cannot act independently and the railroad and the city, under the provisions of legislation passed last year, must come to terms before anything can be accomplished.

The city, under the Hylan Administration, stood out for the boulevard project and the sinking of the tracks, which would have cost about $50,000,000 as against an estimated cost of $12,000,000 for elevating the roadway above the street grades. The railway has steadfastly refused to pay its legal share of the $50,000,000 expenditure, on the ground that it cannot afford to do so and that, furthermore, the major part of that cost would be incurred in the building of what is essentially a street improvement rather than a grade crossing elimination.

COL. A. D. PORTER IS BURIED

Funeral services for Colonel Augustus Drum Porter of the old 12th Regiment, now the 212th Coast Artillery, and former Third Deputy Police Commissioner, were held yesterday morning in St. Thomas's Church, with the Rev. Dr. Roelif H. Brooks officiating. A platoon of the 212th Coast Artillery acted as military escort, and delegations were present from military and patriotic organizations, and from the Union Club, of which he was also a member. The coffin, draped with the American flag, was accompanied to the altar by the following honorary pallbearers: Colonel Downs of the 212th Coast Artillery, Colonel Arthur Schermerhorn of the Seventh Regiment, Walter Suydam of the Union Club, Chief Justice Frederick Kernochan, Judge Joseph E. Corrigan and Charles A. McManus.

Interment was in Woodlawn Cemetery, where a salute was fired by the guard of honor and taps sounded by the bugler.

LE HAY, IRISH ACTOR, DEAD.

Succumbs After Auto Accident—Long Popular in Comic Opera.

News was received yesterday of the death in London of John Le Hay, veteran Irish actor, resulting from an automobile accident after he had left the Lyceum Theatre, where he had been playing. He was rushed in an ambulance to the hospital and died from shock after an operation.

John Le Hay (Healy) was born in Dublin March 25, 1854. He made his first appearance on the English stage in 1879 in the chorus of "The Zoo" at the Royalty Theatre and later that year in "Pinafore" at the Opera Comique. When the D'Oyly Carte company with the Gilbert and Sullivan operas moved to the Savoy Theatre, Le Hay went with it and remained some years. In 1886 he played Tom Strutt in "Dorothy," and Crook in "Dorie" at the Lyric Theatre, London, in 1889.

JERE S. LILLIS DIES AT 63.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 10 (AP).—Jere S. Lillis, 63 years old, retired banker and clubman, who attracted nation-wide attention in March, 1910, when he was bound and slashed by the late Jack P. Cudahy, son of Michael Cudahy, millionaire Chicago packer, died here today.

At the time of the attack Lillis was President of the Western Exchange Bank here. He was a bachelor. Lillis and Jack Cudahy were warm friends. Returning to the Cudahy home unexpectedly, the packer's son found his wife, Mrs. Edna C. Cudahy, with Lillis.

Cudahy was accompanied by his chauffeur. The pair bound Lillis with a clothes-line. Then Cudahy slashed Lillis with a knife, inflicting wounds on his face, back, arms and legs. There was no prosecution.

Later the Cudahys moved to California, where Jack shot and killed himself in Los Angeles in April, 1921, following ill-health and financial troubles.

JOSEPH SCHWARZ, OPERA SINGER, DIES

BERLIN, Nov. 10 (AP).—Joseph Schwarz, leading baritone of the Berlin Civic Opera and former member of the Chicago and San Francisco opera companies, died today during an operation for kidney trouble. He was 46 years old.

Mr. Schwarz's widow was Mrs. Clara Sielcken, whose first husband was known as the "coffee king." The Sielcken estate at Baden-Baden was the rendezvous for many visiting Americans.

Mr. Schwarz was born in Riga, Russia, in 1882. He started his musical career as a pianist before his voice had matured. His father did not sympathize with his musical propensities and tried to apprentice him in some trade. Schwarz ran away from home and had a severe struggle during his student days at Vienna. He made his début at Linz, Bohemia, and his reception there assured success. He returned to his native Riga as an operatic star.

After a career of several years, during which he sang at the various European capitals, he came to America where he engaged in concert work prior to his engagement with the Chicago Opera Company. His separation from that organization came in 1922, when he went on his honeymoon and failed to appear for the opening of the season. When he reported a month late he was told that the programs had been rearranged without him. He returned to Europe soon after.

"Revelry," Novel of High Politics, Topic at White House Luncheon

From The World's Bureau
Special Despatch to The World

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Samuel Hopkins Adams's new novel, "Revelry," which under a thin disguise of names pictures a recent Administration, was one of the topics of conversation at the President's luncheon to-day to half a dozen Republican Senators.

From the front page Story, N. Y. World, Nov. 10

"A daring and sensational political novel that ought to be the talk of the town in a week and of the country in a fortnight. Not since Paul Leicester Ford and David Graham Philips has anything so vivid and so convincing come into the orbit of American readers."

The Early Life of the Average New Yorker

The average New Yorker is not a native New Yorker. He was probably born and brought up in just such a place as Fermington, Missouri, where the series of monstrous events took place that are recorded by Herbert Asbury in Up From Methodism. And Herbert Asbury's autobiographical record of the religious intolerance of Farmington will give the average New Yorker a renewed hilarious insight into his own childhood.

Advertising Agency Contact and Service

REQUIREMENTS:

1. Rather wide business experience, gained first hand.
2. Proven ability to write—brilliantly.
3. Studious disposition with, among other things, a lively interest in economic questions.
4. Agreeable personality — sincere, positive, tactful.
5. Youth — not beyond the middle thirties.

We have tried to indicate an exceptional man, with a real record of accomplishment. We want him to study the businesses of two important clients, help plan their advertising, develop copy, maintain contact.

We may find this man ontside an advertising agency. He may now be an advertising manager, an executive in a business association, a sales development manager for a commercial corporation or a bank.

Wherever he is, we can offer him tangible opportunity, congenial surroundings, latitude for individual expression, adequate immediate financial return.

A letter addressed to Harry Dwight Smith, DKE Club, 5 E. 51st St., New York, will be kept in confidence and promptly acknowledged. Please give home telephone number.

The Best Benefactor That Manhood Ever Had Among the Nations of the World Is the United States of America

The splendor of its achievement reached the highest water-mark of all the centuries yesterday at daylight when the fighting of the four years' war ended and a mighty wave of equality, brotherhood and home government swept over the old world to deliver it from the old system of government and rebuild the nations along new lines of thought and purpose, such as were wrought out long ago by the fathers of this republic as represented by the American flag.

In this national celebration hundreds of millions of people sat around the tables of victory which were communion tables of good will to the world with a song of all for each, and each for all in the rebuilding of the world.

These Men's Suits

are of fine British Fabrics with fine American Tailoring

$75

Indeed, a happy combination! For we chose the British fabrics with an eye to the unusual, and we selected an American maker who is known for the subtle distinction with which he invests his clothing.

The result, to say the least, is eminently satisfactory. Hardly ever will one find these fabrics and patterns—Shetlands, Scotch Tweeds, Scotch Cheviots—in ready-for-service clothing. Hardly ever will one find this sort of fine tailoring at this price—$75.

As you rush about to business these brisk days you will find that one of these suits will be a decided asset—not only in a vastly improved appearance, but in the impression you make where good impressions are valuable!

WANTS BUSES RUN BY TRANSIT LINES

Merchants' Body Asks Estimate Board to Grant Franchises to Such Companies.

OPPOSES CITY-WIDE PLAN

Says Most Important Question Is the Building of Adequate, Economical Subways.

FAVORS ZONE FARE SYSTEM

Assails the Attempt to Introduce Competing Routes. Will Only Complicate Problem.

The Committee on City Transit of the Merchants' Association proposed yesterday that the Board of Estimate should consider the rights of existing transit companies in the granting of new bus franchises and grant such franchises only to existing companies in Manhattan, the Bronx, Brooklyn and Queens for the extension of present lines.

The proposal was incorporated in the committee's report of a consideration of the Board of Transportation's recommendation to grant new city-wide bus franchises, and the report opposed this recommendation in that it "disregards the principle of unification of economic utilization of existing means of transportation and fails to consider the property rights of companies now operating."

The report, which was adopted by the Board of Directors of the association, said that the most important transit question in the city now was the need for adequate and economic subway construction, and that while other bus franchises were important the committee did not believe that the granting of new city-wide bus franchises was "essential or desirable."

"All disinterested studies which have been made show that it is not practicable to replace surface lines in New York City by bus routes in any wholesale fashion," the report continued. "On the contrary, a sufficient number of buses to carry all existing traffic would generally lead to hopeless congestion of the streets.

"The public should be clearly informed that any attempt to develop a city-wide system of independent bus operation is a distinct movement away from the principle of unification."

The committee said it agreed with the principle of a zone system of fares and considered concerns for surface railway companies which were forced to operate at 5-cent fare, irrespective of distance, "even though the total cost of transportation on these lines is considerably in excess of 5 cents."

"Any attempt to introduce competing bus routes will still further deplete the earnings of the surface lines and render more complicated the present transit situation in our city," it said. "It is of questionable legality under existing railway franchises for the city authorities to introduce competitive transportation, and any attempt in this direction will inevitably lead to higher transportation costs, which must be borne directly by every one through the payment of higher fares or indirectly through heavier taxes.

"We believe that the existing surface, bus and subway lines should be encouraged to develop motor bus lines within their territories as auxiliaries and feeders whenever circumstances make such action desirable or practicable, by other method of handling the question of surface transportation will surely lead to increased cost and further complications which would indefinitely postpone a solution of the transit problems of New York City.

"Provided equitable terms for any required new bus franchises can be agreed upon with the companies operating, we suggest the following as a basis for combining serviceable existing facilities with new and additional motor bus routes when shown to be necessary:

By Manhattan—The existing motor bus system of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company in combination with the lines of the New York Railways Company now controlled by it.

By the Bronx—The Third Avenue Railway system controlling the Union Railway Company, and other lines extending into Westchester County.

By Brooklyn—The combined trolley lines of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Company and the Brooklyn City Railway Company.

By Queens—Coordination under unified control of such existing surface lines as are serviceable, with such additional new lines as may be desirable.

PLANS NEW POSTAGE FIGHT.

McKellar Will Urge Cuts in Newspaper Rates This Winter.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—A fight over postal rates at the coming short session of Congress is in prospect as a result of differences that marked the executive proceedings of the Joint Postal Commission when it reassembled here this morning. Postmaster General New attended and endorsed the bill introduced last session by Senator Moses, Republican, of New Hampshire, the Chairman. The first note of strong opposition came from the Democratic side, when Senator McKellar of Tennessee declared he could not give his support to the Moses bill.

The measure, which received a favorable report before Congress adjourned in the Summer, would not change the postal rates generally of the last law, enacted in 1925, but would make several alterations, including a restoration of the old rate of one cent on "greeting" or private postcards.

Senator McKellar held that the rates on magazines and newspapers should be reduced to where they were under the act of 1920, and indicated that he would fight the question out on this ground this Winter.

From the Postmaster General the commission had a report of financial conditions in the Postoffice Department for the last fiscal year, which ended June 30. Revenues amounted to $718,000,000, or more than $60,000,000 in excess of those for the fiscal year 1925.

Mr. New did not approve restoration of the old magazine and newspaper rates as suggested by Mr. McKellar. He contended that revenues for the fiscal year 1926, notwithstanding the increase, did not come up to expectations in all particulars. He attributed a part of the revenue from second-class matter to the advance in rate from one cent for each four ounces to two cents for each two ounces.

Birth of Marine Corps in 1775 Is Celebrated at Tun Tavern

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10 (AP).—A birthday party for the Marine Corps, born at Tun Tavern, Philadelphia, 151 years ago, was held today at the Penn Athletic Club with Major Gen. John A. Lejeune, Commandant of the Corps, as the guest of honor.

More than 1,000 persons gathered at the luncheon and heard General Lejeune relate deeds of the corps since it was created by Congress, Nov. 10, 1775. The part played by the sea soldiers in the World War was stressed by the speaker, who declared that service to have been the corp's greatest achievement.

"From its inception, the men of the corps have lived up to its motto, 'Always Faithful,'" he said, and this was held true whether the men were in the front line of battle, guarding American property in foreign countries or protecting the Government mail from bandits, the latest assignment of the corps."

OFFERS TRUCK PLAN TO RELIEVE TRAFFIC

Straus Suggests Deliveries in Midtown District Be Made at Night or Early Morning.

PREDICTS SPEEDY RELIEF

Board of Trade Will Send Out Questionnaire—Committee Reports on Dock Problem.

The New York Board of Trade and Transportation voted yesterday to send out a questionnaire to determine the practicability of a proposal by Percy S. Straus of R. H. Macy & Co. that all deliveries of merchandise to business houses in the midtown district between Fourteenth and Fifty-ninth Streets be restricted to night or early morning.

"The growing problem of the increasing congestion of vehicular traffic in the principal business districts of New York City has reached a stage which calls for immediate action by merchants, manufacturers and others materially affected by these conditions," Mr. Straus said. "The erection of many big buildings in the midtown area between Fourteen and Fifty-ninth Streets has resulted in concentrating there a large amount of business involving the movement of merchandise in immense quantities.

"The conditions recited will grow worse as new loft buildings are erected. We have come to the conclusion that much benefit would be afforded if all deliveries to business houses in that district, whether by freight, express or by manufacturers or wholesalers' trucks, were effected during the night and early morning.

"This plan would involve a radical change in operating on the part of the carriers and business organizations. It would have to be acceptable to the railroads, steamship lines, express companies, trucking organizations, merchants and manufacturers. Its practicability could be determined only by a careful consideration of the advantages to all these interests and their objections. We are anxious to cooperate with others in giving it a trial.

The questionnaire sent out will explain the proposal and contain these questions:

"If the railroads and other carriers cooperated, could the proposed plan be adopted in your business to advantage?

"What advantages do you see in the plan?

"What disadvantages?

"Would the cost of doing business be greater or less, and to what extent greater or less?

"Generally speaking, is the plan practicable or impossible?"

The Committee on Harbor and Shipping reported on its investigation of the problem in respect to "professional loaders," who handle cargo from the docks to trucks and for whose services the consignees are required to pay.

"That a great hardship is being perpetrated upon the merchants of New York seems clear," the committee reported. "The difficulties, however, of overcoming the evil are, in our opinion, too great to be undertaken by the Committee on Harbor and Shipping. What is needed is the getting together of all the merchants of New York, the transportation companies and others directly interested, through their various trade organizations, and a large fund in the hands of a body of determined men who will work together whole-heartedly and energetically to eliminate this unnecessary expense in handling cargo in this port."

FIVE HURT IN AUTO CRASH.

In an endeavor to avoid striking William Wayne, 5 years old, of 1,026 East Tenth Street, Brooklyn, Emil Peterson, swerved his automobile last night and four were injured when it collided with a taxicab. The scene of the accident was East Tenth Street and Avenue J, Brooklyn. The Wayne boy was knocked down. He was taken to Peck Memorial Hospital with a fractured skull and internal injuries. The passengers in the taxicab were Mrs. Sadie Wisser and her children, Shirley, 5 years old and Donion, 16 months old, all of 1,080 East Tenth Street. They were bruised and shaken up.

Hurled from his automobile when it collided with another car early yesterday morning in White Plains, Alfred V. Conklin, 70, of 99 Robertson Avenue, White Plains, received injuries from which he died later in White Plains Hospital.

The woman run down and killed by an automobile at Amsterdam Avenue and Ninety-third Street on Tuesday night was identified by her daughter yesterday as Mrs. Barbara Rodriguez, 41, of 137 West Eighteenth Street.

Arts and Letters Institute Elects.

The gold medal of the institute was awarded to Herbert Adams for his work in sculpture. Maxwell Struthers Burt, Edith Wharton, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, Margaret Deland and Agnes Repplier were elected to the department of literature. Rudolph Evans, sculptor, was elected to the department of art, and Albert Spaldiog, composer and violinist, to the department of music.

WALLIS MAY RESIGN OVER TOMBS INQUIRY

Walker Gets Warren's Report —To Summon Commissioner Before Him at Once.

LAXITY IN PRISON REVEALED

Mayor Walker received yesterday the report of Commissioner of Accounts Joseph A. Warren on the conditions which made possible the attempted jailbreak at the Tombs on Nov. 3, which ended with the murder of Warden Mallon and Keeper Murphy, and with the suicides of the three prisoners.

Mayor Walker thereupon spent two hours in conference with Commissioner of Accounts Warren. At the end of this conference the Mayor said:

"I will ask Commissioner of Correction Wallis to come to my office at the earliest possible time to discuss this report."

The Mayor refused to say whether the report was damaging to Commissioner Wallis, but it was believed at the City Hall that today's interview might conclude with the resignation of the Commissioner.

The investigation by Commissioner Warren developed the fact that no special precautions had been taken against an attempted jailbreak, although it was known that three or four attempts had been made to smuggle weapons in to desperate bandits in the Tombs within the last two months. The investigation developed that three weapons of large size had been smuggled into the prison and hidden there with the probable connivance of employes of the Tombs. It also developed an alleged laxity in the searching of prisoners and in the handling of visitors.

It was shown that the prisoners were allowed to retain "pocket money" up to $1,000, available for tips or bribes. The investigation also threw light on the privately operated catering system in the Tombs, which brings waiters and "runners"—who are not city employes or under municipal jurisdiction—into personal contact with murderers and bandits.

Wallis a Hylan Held-Over.

Commissioner Wallis was a hold-over from the Hylan Administration. He was investigated by Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield under that Administration and his dismissal recommended, with the charge that he was "hopelessly incompetent." Nevertheless, great pressure was brought on the Walker Administration to retain Wallis in office, because his activity in various religious and reform movements were considered political assets.

Mr. Wallis was a Special Deputy Police Commissioner for a time, and his handling of the fund raised by the police games was criticized by the Meyer committee, which alleged that the records were in such shape that accounting was impossible. Previous to that he was Immigration Commissioner at Ellis Island. He came under criticism there for making a fervent speech on the free institutions of this country to a shipload of deportees just as they were departing from these shores.

When Governor Charles Evans Hughes named Mr. Wallis for the office of State Insurance Commissioner but changed his mind suddenly and withdrew the appointment before the Senate could act on it.

New Warden Starts Reforms.

Robert Barr, the new Tombs Warden, took charge of his new office yesterday morning and immediately started several reforms in the method of handling prisoners.

One of his first moves was one calculated to prevent a recurrence of the attempted jail break of a week ago. He issued orders that a keeper shall be on duty at all hours in the corridor at the foot of the three cell tiers and off of which are the Tombs physician's office and what are known as counsel cells, where attorneys, separated from the prisoners by a wire mesh, may confer with their clients.

This corridor, which is about 18 feet long and 15 feet wide, was the place where the three prisoners last week started their dash for liberty. At either end is a heavy barred iron gate. Under the new arrangement these gates can be passed only after the keeper on duty has used his set of keys.

Warden Barr said that prisoners charged as first offenders will be kept apart from the others in a colony by themselves. All others, he said, will be disciplined with much the same rules that apply in large military prisons.

The new warden said that the rule laid down by the prison physician, Dr. Perry M. Lichtenstein, that only prisoners suffering from open wounds shall be brought to his office, will again be put into effect. The rule, he said, had fallen into disuse recently.

Warden Barr refused to comment yesterday on his plans for conducting the prison. He said he wants a chance to make a thorough survey of the prison before announcing any radical changes.

MOTHER KILLS CHILDREN.

Crazed Iowa Woman Wounds Her Husband and Takes Own Life.

Special to The New York Times.

BOONE, Iowa, Nov. 10.—In a sudden fit of insanity, Mrs. Frank Clark killed her two daugbters, June, 10, and Betty, 3; seriously wounded her husband and another daughter, Frances, 13, and then ended her own life.

The tragedy occurred early this morning. Mrs. Clark first attacked her husband with a poker and a razor. He ran to the home of a neighbor for help. The crazed mother then slashed Frances, who also fled.

When Clark returned he found the bodies of the two younger girls and his wife in the kitchen.

GOV. HUNT WINS BY 333.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 10 (AP).—Final tabulation of official figures on the election of Nov. 2 from the fourteen county seats today showed Governor George W. P. Hunt, Democrat, had been elected for a sixth term. Hunt's lead over E. S. Clark, Republican, was 333, the count standing: Hunt 39,988, Clark 39,655.

The figures did not include one precinct in Apache County, where 100 votes were cast. The tally sheets in the precinct were sealed up with the counted ballots in a container and could not be listed in the official canvas by the Board of Supervisors.

Walsh and Hawes Lose Part of Their Pay As Senators Because of Slow Vote Count

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Through the slowness of election boards in canvassing official returns of the elections of United States Senators in Massachusetts and Missouri, two Senators-elect have lost their pay for more than a month.

When the Senate met today as a court of impeachment it was expected that Senators-elect David I. Walsh of Massachusetts and Harry B. Hawes of Missouri, both Democrats, who defeated their Republican opponents, Senators William M. Butler and George H. Williams, would appear and qualify as the successors of Messrs. Butler and Williams, who were serving by appointment and whose tenure expired when they were defeated at the polls Nov. 2.

But the new Senators from Massachusetts and Missouri were not there. Through the failure of canvassing boards to complete their compilation of votes cast it was impossible to obtain the certificates of election necessary to enable the Senate to admit them as members.

The impression prevailed among Senate officials that a Senator-elect would draw his salary of $10,000 a year from the day of his election. An examination of precedents showed, however, that when a Senator was chosen at the polls to fill an unexpired term he did not begin to draw pay until he took the oath of office in the Senate chamber. On that account Senators-elect Walsh and Hawes will not get on the payroll until Congress assembles on Dec. 6 and they are sworn in.

Through the construction that a Senator does not draw pay from the date of his election, Messrs. Walsh and Hawes will lose about $860 each. Through failing to be sworn in today and having to postpone that ceremony until Dec. 6 they will lose something more than $700 each.

FIVE ALARMS RUNG FOR BROOKLYN FIRE

175 WORKERS DRIVEN OUT

Twenty-one Companies Respond—150 Families Routed—Loss Put at $300,000.

A fire of undetermined origin that started near 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Greenpoint district of Brooklyn destroyed the three-story frame factory of the Diamond Candle Company, 992 Metropolitan Avenue, and, carried by a stiff breeze to three other buildings, did serious damage to the Pellegrino Bottle Works, 986 Metropolitan Avenue; to the Emmanuel Riechson Braid Factory, 317 Devoe Street, and to the Graybro Fabric Company, 1,006 Metropolitan Avenue. Five alarms were turned in and five Manhattan companies, as well as sixteen Brooklyn companies, responded.

The fire was discovered by Jack Rosenberg, who owns a cooperage shop on Morgan Avenue, a half block away from the Diamond Candle Company. He was driving past in his truck when he saw smoke issuing from the second-story windows. He turned in an alarm and hurried back to the building. More than seventy employes, mostly women, were inside, but they all got out safely. Rosenberg aided three girls who were a bit dazed by the smoke and fumes.

Meanwhile crowds of the curious began to crowd in about the burning building. Four other alarms were turned in, and police reserves numbering 100 were called from various stations. At the fourth alarm Fire Chief Kenlon took charge. Fire Commissioner Dorman and Fire Marshal Brophy came with Kenlon.

The near-by factories, which had caught in places, were emptied in an orderly manner of about 100 employes. Check-up later showed that not a person who had been in any of the burned buildings was missing. One hundred and fifty families, all living in tenement buildings and frame houses surrounding the blaze, were escorted out of their homes by the police. They were allowed to return some later.

Soon after the second alarm Chief Patrick Maher ordered his firemen out of the candle factory. A few minutes afterward the roof of the entire structure came down. The firemen in the street were showered with glass and debris, but none was hurt. For two hours thereafter the fire fighters were hempered by dense smoke from vats in the candle factory.

Three persons were injured in the course of the fire. Patrolman Gruppel of the Stagg Street Station was conducting Mrs. Anna Harrington and her family from their home at 523 Devoe Street, when both he and Mrs. Harrington slipped and fell down the stairs. They were attended for bruises at St. Catherine's Hospital. Lieutenant James W. Tocher of Engine Company 216 cut his left hand on broken glass.

TO PREVENT TAILSPINS.

D. W. Douglas Tells of Plane Tests Near Santa Monica, Cal.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Nov. 10 (AP).—Donald W. Douglas, the asronautical engineer who designed the United States Army round-the-world planes, announced here today, through officials of his airplane factory, the invention of a device which would make a tailspin impossible. Mr. Douglas is in New York at present.

Plant officials stated that twenty-two test flights were made yesterday at Clover Field, near here, in which it was demonstrated to their satisfaction that the most feared mishap to heavier-than-air planes could be prevented.

The apparatus used consists of especially designed ailerons on the tail of the machine and a new type of surfacing. The plane in which the tests were made will be taken to McCook Field for further tests by army air experts.

Gets $5,000 for Loss of Wife's Love.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Nov. 10.—A Monmouth County jury assessed the affections of Mrs. Vivian Lawrence, vaudeville actress, of Newark and Ksansburg, at $5,000 and recorded a judgment today for that amount against Robert H. Reed, a newspaper man, with office at 12 Beaver Street, Newark, and in favor of Mrs. Lawrence's husband, Albert Lester Lawrence, who charged Reed with alienating his wife's affections.

H. F. MORSE LETTERS ARE READ AT TRIAL

One to Ship Head Asked Delay in Giving Out List of Stockholders.

MORE PAPERS IDENTIFIED

William Guggenheim Testifies to Being a Director of the United States Company.

Two letters written by Harry F. Morse to Rupert M. Much, as President of the United States Steamship Company, in 1921 were read yesterday in the Federal court, where three sons of Charles W. Morse and thirteen other defendants are on trial for conspiracy to use the mails fraudulently in the promotion of stock sales in companies organized by the senior Morse. In one of the letters which was sent to the company's office at Augusta, Me., Mr. Morse requested Mr. Much, who is one of the defendents in the case, not to give ont any stockholders' list without a court order. In this letter, dated May 19, 1921, he added: "I hope you can delay taking of a stockholders' list for a year or more, as you state." In another, dated July 21, 1921, he asked that unimportant communications be destroyed, "as I do not care to have any correspondence of mine on file in the office for reasons that you are familiar with."

William Guggenheim was called as witness by Special Attorney General Fletcher Dobyns and said he was a director of the United States Steamship Company and also a stockholder. Counsel for the defense objected to the admissability of the testimony and the witness was excused.

Lester C. Merrick, who spent most of Tuesday identifying stock certificates and financial data, was recalled. He said that he was head of the transfer stock department of the United States Steamship Company. Merrick identified numerous documents dealing with the exchange of stock of the United States Steamship Company for stock of the United States Ship Corportation. A summary of various transactions prepared by Merrick and offered as evidence by the prosecutor was ruled out by the Court.

BUCKNER ADVISES STUDENTS

Tells Harvard Men to Practice Law Where They Live.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10.—That a young man graduating from a law school should plan to practice law in the community in which he wants to make his home was the advice given tonight by Federal Attorney Emory R. Buckner of New York City to an audience of 200 students at the Harvard Law School in an informal address at a meeting of the law school society of the Phillips Brooks House Association. Federal Attorney Buckner stated that there was no reason why a man should go to New York to practice if there was another place where he might have more friends and contacts or where the girl he expected to marry lived. Most men just graduating from a law school had delusions about practicing law in New York, he continued. They believed that all lawyers in New York made a lot of money. This was not the case, for 95 per cent. of the lawyers in New York made less than $6,000 a year.

The second delusion was that the young graduate going to New York wanted to get into an office where he could become a partner the soonest and the surest. He should select the office where the training would be the most beneficial.

SUES TO OUST HOSPITAL.

Lawyer for Estate Says Veterans' Institution Is Trespassing.

Special to The New York Times.

NORTHPORT, L. I., Nov. 10.—The new Veterans' Hospital under construction on a section of the Hodgens estate near Northport has become involved in a suit brought by the estate for possession of the 550-acre tract on which it is being built, it was learned today.

E. C. Beyliss, acting superintendent of the hospital, was served with papers charging him with trespassing. The tract was sold to the Veterans' Bureau in Washington in July, 1925, by a firm known as J. R. Ryan of New York City, for $500 an acre. C. B. Partridge, attorney for the estate, said it was valued at $1,000 an acre and that Ryan had no authority to sell any part of it.

It was reported that Ryan took a $40,000 mortgage and his commission as compensation, turning over the rest of the $250,000 purchase price to the estate. Ryan insists that he had power of attorney to sell the land. The case is set for a hearing in Brooklyn Supreme Court on Nov. 15.

FINDS NO CODDLING IN CANADIAN PRISON

CONVICTS EAT IN OWN CELLS

Sensitive Ones Brought Change by Objecting to Manners of Others in Mess Hall.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Nov. 10.—The Crime Commission of the State of New York arrived here in a snowstorm this evening after having spent the second day of its study of Canadian crime control making a detailed inspection of the great Federal penitentiary at Kingston, Ontario, a prison wherein no inmate has less than two years to serve, where there are no baseball games, moving pictures or other entertainment for the prisoners and coddling of convicts is unknown.

State Senator Caleb H. Baumes of Newburgh, Chairman of the commission and author of the Baumes law which increased prison sentences, said after the inspection had been completed that he had been deeply impressed by a form of discipline he had never before encountered in an institution of that character, which was not enforced with a lash, but seemed to have created among the prisoners themselves something closely akin to an esprit de corps.

During the luncheon hour the members of the commission commented on the celerity with which the 671 inmates of the prison were fed. Brig. Gen. W. S. Hughes, Superintendent of Federal Prisons throughout Canada, who personally conducted the commission through the institution, told the visitors that the prison mess hall had been abolished at the request of the convicts themselves.

Sensitive Convicts Objected.

Now instead of eating at a common table the prisoners march in single file past a serving counter, pick up what resembles a "plate dinner" at a moderate-priced restaurant and take it to their cells. General Hughes did not explain what the prisoners had complained about, but from other sources it was learned that some of the convicts had objected to eating next to others who were unable to handle knives and forks with as much finesse as they had handled burglars' tools and, unlike their more refined fellow-prisoners, insisted upon making weird noises while drinking their soup.

The Crime Commission was met early this morning in the Hotel Frontenac at Kingston by Brig. Gen. Hughes, Major W. G. Anglin, surgeon at the penitentiary; Howard Creighton, Canadian parole officer; Major W. S. Lawson, structural engineer attached to the prison, and Deputy Warden R. B. Tucker. They were driven about the city in several automobiles and were taken for a visit to the Royal Military Academy across the St. Lawrence River, which is the West Point of Canada.

At Kingston, as at Toronto, the commission was shown every courtesy and given every possible aid in its search for remedies for the crime situation in the State of New York. The Canadian officials, jurists and others seem eager to explain and to illustrate to their visitors just how they brought about a kind of criminal justice which has placed a material check on crime throughout the Dominion and has satisfied the law-abiding citizens that Canadian criminal justice is stern, fair and swift.

Considers Prison Extraordinary.

Although the Kingston Penitentiary is nearly 100 years old, Senator Baumes said he considered its modern methods, equipment and sanitation system extraordinary. All of the great buildings were spotlessly clean in every department. The Commissioners were told to pick out any cell, room or department they wanted to see and not merely to look in where prison officials opened doors for them.

Brig. Gen. Hughes said that Miss Jane M. Hoey, a member of the commission from New York City, was the first woman who had ever been permitted to inspect the men's prison at Kingston and that this had required a "special dispensation." Asked about the lack of entertainment furnished the prisoners, General Hughes said:

"We consider that we are here to carry out the sentence of the Court in each instance, and the sentences were for so many years at hard labor."

Inspection corroborated his statement. The penitentiary is a vast workshop wherein many things are made and many trades are acquired by the prisoners. The prison had an order, General Hughes said, for 100,000 mailbags, to be ready by Christmas, and would be able to fill it. He declared that every article he was then wearing, including hat, shoes, overcoat, underwear, suit and socks, had been made in the Kingston prison.

Imprisoned by Faulty Lock.

In a blinding flurry of snow the gates of the women's prison clanged behind the members of the commission. They remained behind them an hour or more. When General Hughes attempted to open the door to let his guests out, he found he had no key. One of the prison matrons was sent for. After vainly trying her key for about five minutes she gave it up and explained to General Hughes that a key recently had been broken in trying to open the door. A third key opened it and the members of the commission seemed visibly relieved.

Tomorrow morning the commission will hold a public hearing in the Court of the King's Bench here. Prominent jurists and others concerned in crime control and the punitive features thereof will address the commission and answer questions. There is talk of a special meeting of the commission here Friday morning, as when they leave Montreal they will separate, leaving on different trains and going in different directions.

OFFERS TO OPERATE LINES.

Munson Company Makes Proposal, but No Bid, for Government Ships.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—A proposal by the Munson Steamship Company of New York to operate vessels to South America now under the flag of the American Delta and American Dispatch Lines was received today by the Shipping Board.

Although the board held the proposition did not comply with stipulations of advertisements asking for bids, it announced the offer would be reviewed.

Moore & McCormack, New York steamship operators, advised the board that though they were not interested in acquiring ownership, they would submit an alternate proposal for charter of the American Republics Line. The Munson people said they were also interested in chartering the line, but would not buy it, since it had suffered losses under Government operation.

Prince of Wales's Odd Attire Startled French Officialdom

PARIS, Nov. 10 (AP).—Conservative dressers of French officialdom are still rather startled at the unusualness of the afternoon dress introduced by the Prince of Wales on his official visit to Paris at the dedication of the Canadian home at the "Cite Universitaire."

Instead of the classically conventional wing collar and sombre tie, the heir to the British throne eported a low turn-down collar with rounded edgee and a black and white striped cravat that might have eerved equally well with sporting clothes.

The conventional dress overcoat with straight lines, black satin or silk lapels and lining was replaced by a navy blue Chesterfield of heavy cloth. M. Becq Fouquieree, who is somewhat of an arbiter of French official elegance, is inclined now to be more indulgent toward the sartorial vagaries of his country's statesmen, having seen the Prince's innovations.

W. B. FRENCH SEIZED ON THE LINER PARIS

Banker's Son Is Accused of Cashing Worthless Check for $3,500 in Nice, France.

"ALL BUNK," HE DECLARES

Attorney Takes Him in Hand on Pier—Released on $5,000 Bail—Hearing Set for Nov. 17.

When the French liner Paris reached Quarantine yesterday morning from Havre detectives boarded the vessel and arrested William Barton French, son of the late Seth Barton French, a former partner in J. P. Morgan & Co. He was charged with cashing a check for $3,500 at the office of Thomas Cook & Son at Nice, in the south of France, drawn on the Guaranty Trust Company of New York and returned to Cook & Son with the endorsement "insufficient funds."

French was taken, with his attorney, Outerbridge Horsey of 30 Broad Street, in a taxicab by the detective to the Tombs and arraigned before Magistrate Jean Norris on a technical charge of being a fugitive from justice. He was held for examination on Nov. 17 and remained in the Tombs four hours while his attorney was arranging bail, which was fixed at $5,000.

Arrest Asked by Radio.

Captain Joseph Blancart, master of the Paris, received a message from the Chief of Police in Paris last Friday instructing him to arrest William Barton French. The captain said that acting upon the notification he sent for Mr. French. Nothing further was done in the matter, and the other passengers in the first cabin were unaware of what had occurred until the ship arrived yesterday. Some small sums were due to the ship, and Captain Blancart wished to detain his passenger's baggage on board. After talking with officials of the French line, the captain decided to let the baggage be turned over to the Customs officials at the pier. This was done after French and his escort had left for the Tombs.

French, who is tall, well dressed and about 31 years old, took his arrest philosophically. When questioned by reporters on the pier he said:

"This all bunk—utter bunk. It will be cleared up in a few hours. The whole trouble was that Cook's agent in Nice cabled over to his firm here to put the check through with the Guaranty Trust Company before I had time to get the money paid into my account to meet it."

Obeys His Attorney.

He appeared distnrbed at not being able to get his baggage from the ship and wanted to protest to the customs officials, bnt Mr. Horsey, his attorney, waving his cane toward his client, said: "You get over there and sit down until I tell you to get up." French followed instructions.

In court, Mr. Horsey asked for time to enable his client to establish his innocence, and adjournment of the hearing was granted at the request of Assistant District Attorney William R. Maloney, who asked more time to investigate the case.

French has been living in Paris for some time with his mother, Mrs. Seth Barton French, who is said to hold certain funds in trust for him that were left by his father. Recent dispatches from Paris said that Mrs. French had advertised in the French newspapers that she would not be responsible for her son's debts.

French was married in 1916 to Miss Jeannie Emmet, daughter of the late Henry Coster Emmet of New York, who divorced him in 1920. On June 3, 1924, he married, at Crown Point, Ind., Miss Hazel Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Georgs Allen of Portland, Ore.

REED HITS TAX PROPOSALS.

Missouri Senator Calls Coolidge Plan a Joke.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 10 (AP).—Senator James A. Reed of Missouri today characterized President Coolidge's income tax reduction announcement as "one of the greatest jokes of the season."

"The facts are," he said, "that on the insistence of Mr. Mellon, backed by the President, Congress was literally dragooned into making a levy much greater than was justifiable. Under the levy the taxpayers were compelled to pay to the Federal Government an amount which, it is now admitted, was $250,000,000 more than they should have been compelled to pay.

"It is now proposed, as a special act of grace, that this money, which was unnecessarily and wrongfully extorted from the American people, shall be returned; and the proposal is so made as to give the impression that we owe this great benefaction to Mr. Coolidge and his eminent Secretary of the Treasury.

"All the talk about the wonderful economies being practiced by the Coolidge Administration is simply so much hunk."

England Has First Woman Sheriff.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Nov. 10 (AP).—The first woman ever to be appointed a Sheriff in England was chosen here yesterday. She is Mrs. Lucia Welch. The new appointee will be forced to attend executions during her tenure of office.

CORPORATIONS ASK EARLY TAX RELIEF

Conferees in Washington Urge That Congress Repeal Added Levies of ½ Per Cent.

CALL FOR QUICK ACTION

Meeting Declares That the Treasury Does Not Need the Large Sums Collected.

EXTRA SESSION SUGGESTED

Basil Manley Wants Democrats to "Force" Coolidge to Call Congress to Revise Law.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10. — Relief from the present corporation income tax bill will be sought from Congress through concerted effort of representatives of practically all the great basic industries, under plans formulated at a meeting here today, when the following resolution was adopted:

1. To petition the Ways and Means Committee for a public hearing before the meeting of Congress on the subject of corporate income tax relief.

2. That Congress be urged to repeal in the short session:

(a) The additional one-half of one per cent. levied on corporate income and becoming effective in the calendar year 1926.

(b) Repeal the additional one-half of one per cent. made effective for the calendar year 1926, since, from the public statement of the Treasury, one-half of one per cent. additional for 1927 is unnecessary, and the additional revenue to be derived from the further one-half of one per cent. in 1926 will not be required.

3. That in addition to this obviously justified permanent relief, Congress be asked to afford such further temporary and permanent relief as the fiscal circumstances of the Treasury may justify.

4. That the conference, through its Executive Committee, present to the Joint Congressional Tax Committee created by the Revenue act of 1926, further proposals for reform of the present inequitable system of corporate taxation.

Gives Treasury View of Taxation.

Gerrard B. Winston, Under-Secretary of the Treasury, made an informal statement on taxation from the Treasury viewpoint.

At the meeting were represented The National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, William S. Bennet; National Coal Association, Harry L. Gandy; American Mining Congress, McKinley W. Kriegh; American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, James Craig Peacock; National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association, R. P. Hazzard; National Petroleum Association, Fayette B. Dow, and National Association of Manufacturers, James A. Emery, general counsel.

Mr. Emery, who was chosen Chairman, explained the purpose of the conference as follows:

"Its members believe that a tax on a corporation is a tax on the stockholder. The characteristic business organizations of the United States are owned by more than 19,000,000 stockholders, including investors, customers and employes. The profits of every dollar invested in the corporate forms of business operate more than 85 per cent. of the production, transportation, commercial and organized service activities of our people.

"Every dollar of corporate investment is subjected to a normal tax two and a half times that levied against the individual and partnership business. That rate was increased by the last Congress 1 per cent. in anticipation of a deficit which it was thought might result from the repeal of the corporate stock tax. That anticipation has not been realized. On the contrary, the returns from the corporation tax for the first nine months of the calendar year 1925, at the 13 per cent. rate, already exceed by many millions the returns of the calendar year 1924, with a quarter of a year yet to go."

Calls for an Extra Session.

Basil M. Manley, director of the People's Legislative Service, which was established with the support of the late Senator Robert M. LaFollette, suggested today that the Democrats force President Coolidge to bring Congress into session for dealing with the tax problem.

Urging that "it is time to stop playing peanut politics with the Federal taxes," Mr. Manley said:

"The Democrats ought to know that there is no time for sound tax revision in the short session, and that if they try playing 'three-card monte' in this Congress, with Madden and Smoot dealing the cards, they are sure to guess wrong.

"If the Democrats have a sound scheme for getting rid of the absurd corporation taxes, automobile sales taxes and other taxes that are simply passed on to the long-suffering consumer, let them force an extra session of the new Congress, in which they will have some real power, and show their stuff."

OPPOSES TAX CUTS NOW.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 10 (AP).—There should be no immediate reduction in taxation, Louis J. Taber of Columbus, Ohio, National Master, told the National Grange in convention here today. Mr. Taber urged retention of the direct primary and correction of its weaknesses, asserted that the Grange found sentiment in favor of drastic enforcement of prohibition, and said it should demand development of the Muscle Shoals power project in the interests of agriculture and national defense.

In expressing his opposition to immediate tax reduction, Mr. Taber gave as his reasons "urgent need of internal improvement—highways and waterways—the protection of health and property of the public, and the retirement of the public debt, to which any surplus should be applied."

He said the Grange should make it a cardinal creed that taxes be based on "ability to pay" and "benefits received," and this program should include a continuation of the present Federal income and inheritance taxes.

KHAKI AND BLUE MIX AT THE VICTORY BALL

MILITARY GUARD IN STREET

The sixth annual victory ball of the American Legion, New York County, was held last night in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf amid decorations of hundreds of American and allied flags.

Many dinner parties were given in advance of the ball. Miss Muriel Wurts-Dundas had as her guests Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Cox, William J. Chipley, Ferdinand Sanford, Paul Monroe, Miss Carol Silvester, Miss Elizabeth Green, Robert Ingersoll Brown and C. Shelby Carter.

Harold L. Downey's guests were Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Stursberg, Miss Alice Stursberg, George McM. Godley, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Young and Miss Mary A. Downey.

Mrs. Edward Prime's dinner was given for her granddaughter, Miss Bessie Fish Benjamin. The guests were Miss Elizabeth Wyatt, Samuel Sloan Auchincloss, William Bayard Hawthorne, Lieutenant Charles R. Skinner, U. S. N.; Rupert King Weekes, Miss Alixe Walker, Reginald Garnett and Lawrence Stevens.

Mrs. Frank E. Hayward had as her guests Major and Mrs. Charles Wilson, Captain Richard McCullough, Farras Towers and Lindsley Hoppin.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Lockett's guests were Edward Thurston and Mrs. William Boorum.

As the guests arrived at the hotel they were treated to a distinctly military touch by the 212th Anti-Aircraft Regiment, which provided a guard of honor. The troops were drawn up on the Thirty-third Street side of the hotel and rendered formal military honors to general officers as they arrived.

In the hotel hundreds of allied flags, with the American colors, predominating, formed the principal decoration. The military aspect was further enhanced by the presence of allied officers in dress uniforms mingling with the khaki and navy blue of the officers and men of the American military and naval forces.

The grand march began at 11:30 o'clock and was reviewed by General Summerall, Rear Admiral Plunkett and Major General Haskell. First in the line were the colors of the Sixteenth Infantry, with fourteen battle streamers hanging from its color staff. Naval colors, with bluejackets and aMrine guards from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, followed. The Allies were represented by Associazione Nationale Combattente Italiani, Belgian Great War Veterans, British Great War Veterans and Federation French Great War Veterans. Representing patriotic groups were the Military Order of Foreign Wars, Military Order of the World War, Naval Order of the United States, Colonial Dames of America, Old Guard, Overseas Service League, Society of Colonial Wars, Society of American Wars, Sons of the Revolution, Sons of the American Revolution, Veteran Corps of Artillery and Veterans' Association of the Seventh Regiment. The National Guard was represented by the Seventy-first Infantry, 104th Field Artillery, 212th and 244th Coast Artillery, 102d Engineers, Fifty-first Machine Gun Squadron, Reserve organizations, 305th, 306th, 307th and 308th Infantry, 302d Engineers, all of the Seventy-seventh Division, 401st Engineer Battalion of the Sixty-first Cavalry Division. American Legion colors were conspicuous as their veteran color guards passed in review.

Each set of colors consisted of the national and regimental flags, accompanied by armed color guards.

Lawrence Smith Butler was Chairman of the Floor Committee, Miss Muriel Wurts-Dundas of the Débutante Committee and Mrs. William F. Cogswell of the Junior Committee.

The Boxholders.

NAVAL OFFICER WED ON SHIP

Lieut. C. M. Furlow Planned to Elope, but Captain Stepped In.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 10.—Lieutenant Charles Marvin Furlow of Madison, Ga., and Miss Helen Russel Clark of Haverford, Pa., were married with a military wedding this evening aboard the U. S. S. Nokomis at the navy yard.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. S. Clark of Seattle. Last year she completed her sophomore year at the University of Pennsylvania. While at college she has lived with her sister, Miss Louise Clark, at 345 West Lancaster Pike, Haverford.

The Rev. John Hart, chaplain of the University of Pennsylvania, officiated at the wedding. Captain Benjamin Dutton of the Nokomis gave the bride in marriage. Miss Clark's sister was her maid of honor. Lieutenant John M. Higgins of the Nokomis, classmate at Annapolis of Lieutenant Furlow and a former oarsman of the Navy crew, acted as best man.

"We expected to elope and have a quiet wedding," Lieutenant Furlow said today. "When the Captain heard of it he said 'Nothing doing. You'll be married right here on my ship and I will give the bride in marriage.' So I told my fiancée there was nothing to do but to obey the Captain's orders."

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Hall Chase of this city and Rose Hill, Waterbury, Conn., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lucia Hosmer Chase, to Thomas Ewing Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ewing of 45 East Sixty-fifth Street.

Miss Chase, who is a member of the Junior League, was graduated from St. Margaret's School in Waterbury and later attended Bryn Mawr College. She served in the Red Cross Motor Corps in New York during the World War. Last July Miss Chase received an artist's diploma from the Vestoff Serova School of Russian Dancing. At present she is at the Theatre Guild School.

Miss Chase is the sister of Mrs. Charles P. Taft 2d of Cincinnati, Ohio, and of Mrs. James R. Shelden Jr. of Waterbury, Conn.

Mr. Ewing was graduated from St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and from Yale University in 1919. During the World War he served as a pilot in the Army Aviation Corps and saw service overseas with the Second Pursuit Group. Mr. Ewing is Vice President of the Alexander Smith Carpet Company and is a member of the Racquet, University, Brook, Meadow Brook, Riding and Whippany River clubs.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hanes of The Birches, Rye, N. Y., will give a dinner at the Ambassador tonight for Miss Chase.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Scalero—Ryan.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Maria Teresa Scalero, daughter of Rosario Scalero, the composer, and Mrs. Scalero of this city and Rome, Italy, to William K. Ryan, son of Mrs. William K. Ryan of Haverford, Pa., and the late Mr. Ryan.

Miss Scalero was graduated with highest honors in decorative arts from the Royal Academy of Beaux Arts in Rome and is now studying architecture at the University of Engineering and Architecture in Rome. She is a granddaughter of the late Bartolomeo Scalero, conservatore of the Quirinal Palace in Rome, and of the late Avvocato Delgrosso, President of the Provincial Deputation of Turin, Italy. Her father has been for several years head of the composition department of the David Mannes Music School in this city. He teaches also at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Mr. Ryan is a graduate of the Hill School and is a member of the class of 1925 at Princeton University. He is now studying composition at the Curtis Institute of Music. On his maternal side Mr. Ryan is a descendant of President Monroe and of Bishop Thompson of Virginia, whose wife was Lady Spottswood of England. He is a grandson of Thomas Fortune Ryan of this city and of the late Joseph Bondurant of Louisville, Ky.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—A settlement has been effected out of court of the $6,000,000 suit brought by John B. Bolton of Philadelphia against John M. Van Heusen of Jamaica Plain, soft collar maker, in which a Suffolk County jury in July, 1925, returned a verdict for Mr. Bolton of $1,314,241. The amount paid in settlement was not divulged, but Mr. Bolton's counsel said the terms were "satisfactory."

Russian Film Actress Here.

Natalie Barachs, a Russian moving picture artist, arrived yesterday on the White Star liner Olympic under a contract to the First National Pictures. She was engaged in pictures for the Soviet until a year ago, when she went to Paris. She said: "I believe that the Russian girls are the most beautiful in the world. It is a revolution and not a beauty shop which makes for real beauty and gives character to a girl's face." The actress will leave in a few days for California.

MRS. BRANDEIS GIVES WEDDING SURPRISE

AT MUNICIPAL BUILDING

Mrs. Lyela Studebaker Brandeis, widow of H. Hugo Brandeis, wealthy Omaha merchant, was married to Frank Comerford, Chicago lawyer and author, yesterday in the Municipal Building. News of the marriage will surprise friends of the couple in this city, as their plan to be married had not been made known. Only her mother, who accompanied them to the Municipal Building, and a few intimate friends knew that the ceremony would take place.

After the death of her first husband, who was connected with the large Brandeis Department Store in Omaha, the then Mrs. Brandeis was married in London in 1914 to Charles Wesley Turner, a stock broker. They were divorced in 1919, after she had had him indicted for converting to his own use $25,000 he borrowed from her to protect his stock transactions. After the divorce she preferred to be known by her first husband's name. She has been living at 870 Park Avenue.

Mr. Comerford for a time was a representative from Illinois in Congress. He is a member of the City, Iroquois and other Chicago clubs. His first wife was Miss Jean Cowgill, a writer. They were divorced in 1921.

Mr. and Mrs. Comerford have left on a wedding trip, during which they plan to visit Cuba. They will go to Chicago in a month to make their home at the Lake Shore Drive Hotel.

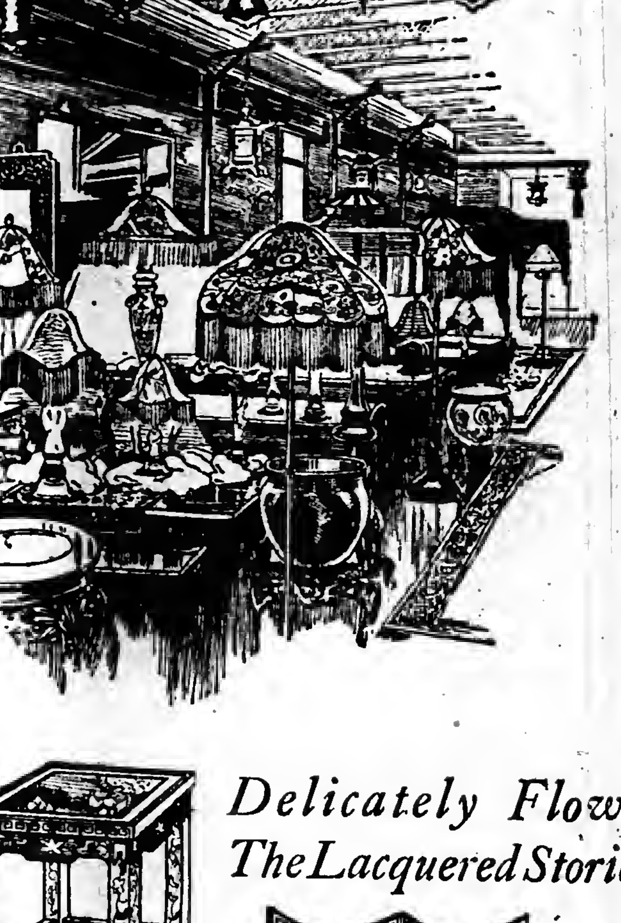
VANTINE'S

The House of the Orient

Fifth Avenue New York At 52nd St.

A Fairyland Palace of Lamps

Where Crystal and Jade Figures Uphold Soft Lights That Gleam Thru Colorful Silks



—that is Vantine's Third Floor, where rows on rows of lamps glow with softly colored lights.

There are soapstone figures of dainty Oriental ladies, gleaming like little white ghosts beneath their silken shades; there is a Chinese junk, under full sail on an ocean of carved teakwood; there is a red Cinnabar lamp, whose intricate carvings tell a story all their own.

The shades vary in material, color and design as much as the lamp bases, and all are lovely.

Long winter evenings before the cozy fire will find added charm and comfort in the soft light of an Oriental lamp. And Vantine's offers lamp shades from $12 to $125 and bases from $16 to $600.

FLYMAN IS VICTOR IN THE ELKRIDGE

JOY SMOKE TAKES CLASS A

Comes Home in First of the Graded Handicaps of Day—Fator Boots Nida to Victory.

By HENRY R. ILSLEY.

Special to The New York Times.

PIMLICO, Md., Nov. 10.—Cold weather, a heavy track, an ordinary card and small fields failed to keep down the attendance at the ninth day of the Autumn meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club. The stake feature, the Elkridge Steeplechase, brought out only four jumpers, while for Class A, the top number of the Pimlico Graded Handicap, only three went to post.

The Brookmeade Stable's Flyman, by Superman—Firefly II, ridden by R. H. ("Specs") Crawford, was easily the winner of the afternoon feature. He picked up top weight of 140 pounds and ran the two miles in the very slow time of 4:08 1-5 over a soggy course. He was the odds-on favorite, paying $[illegible] for each $2 ticket in the [illegible]. The net value of the stake was [illegible].

[illegible] Fator booted the Rancocas Stable's filly Nida home to win the Forest Park Handicap in a driving finish by half a length from Lee Rosenberg's Polly McWiggles. The last time out over the same distance of six furlongs Nida, at 13 to 10, couldn't run fast enough to keep warm. This afternoon, away to a poor start, she was forced to travel overland, came around the leaders and stood a long drive. And the price was right, as she paid $[illegible].

Racing Strip Is Slow.

By the time the three candidates for the money in Class A of the graded handicap left the paddock the sun and a sharp breeze, aided by the harrows, had greatly improved the condition of the racing strip and it was no worse than slow, with only a few heavy spots. The starters were E. F. Whitney's Joy Smoke, the favorite; R. E. Potts's Lieutenant II and Jefferson Livingston's Son of John.

Starter Milton gave them a walk-up getaway and Jimmy Butwell was not ready with the favorite, getting the worst of the break when he should have been on top. Son of John showed the way around the clubhouse turn, the other two passing him on the run down the backstretch. Butwell made his move on the last turn, easily took command with Joy Smoke and the latter coasted home, with Son of John trailing far back. The winner paid $[illegible] and ran the mile and seventy yards in 1:46 1-5 under top weight of 115 pounds.

The dearth of steeplechasers at this time was exemplified in the running of the afternoon's stake event. In the past the Elkridge has brought out some famous cross-country performers, notable among the winners being The Brook, Roi Craig, [illegible] Barleycorn. Last year it was won by the Greentree Stable's [illegible]. This year there were [illegible] nominations, but only four [illegible] jumpers were able to get to the post.

Crawford Near Spill.

The Elkridge, which is restricted to three-year-olds, is the last cross-country stake of the season. Flyman went to the post the odds-on favorite and won without difficulty. Crawford let the Superman gelding off the pace set by Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Madrigal II, which was making his [illegible] start through the field. He then moved up with the gelding and [illegible] in the lead with J. E. Davis's Endicott.

Throughout the race a very slow pace was maintained over the sodden turf. The quartet held together in a bunch long enough to make it an interesting contest. Madrigal II again came to the fore, but Crawford took command when ready. Flyman nearly tossed it all over the final obstacle, where he made a bobble and almost unseated Crawford. In the run to the wire Flyman drew out to win by a couple of lengths from the B. B. Stable's Thomas Paine, the latter leading Madrigal II by four lengths. The race was run in the slow time of 4:08 1-5, the slowest in the history of the stake.

The Belair Stud's filly Laura Dianti easily took the money in Class B. Stevens rated the daughter of Wrack in back of Thistlewood and Son Ami until the last turn, where she came around the others, assumed command and won easily. Whatever chances the Log Cabin Stud's Crossfire might 'ave had to get in the money were ruined at the break, when he reared straight upward, nearly tossing off Coltiletti.

Class C brought a field of eleven, and there was money for half of them. The winner was E. B. McLean's three-year-old filly Cupid's Curse, on which Williams rode a waiting race. Voshell and Hec battled it out during the early running, while Festival chased the pair. The winner was always within striking distance and in the drive to the winning post Williams got her up to head Hec.

DEVON IN TRIUMPH AS LEXINGTON OPENS

Catches Peekaboo in the Final Sixteenth of Feature Race After a Poor Start.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 10.—Off next to last in the field of eight, Devon made up a world of ground in the stretch to win the Lexington Herald Handicap, the feature of the opening program, over a heavy track here today. A large crowd attended in spite of the raw weather, snow flurries falling during the racing. The winner paid $15.80 for $2.

Marconi was off like a flash, but was through after six furlongs of the mile and a sixteenth, and was supplanted in the lead by Peekaboo. Jockey D. Lynch pushed Devon through on the inside in the stretch and caught the suddenly tiring Peekaboo in the final sixteenth to win by a length and a half. Ballot Brush was third.

$6,000 FOR LANDLORD TOPS PIMLICO SALE

Colt Goes to A. C. Bostwick as 22 Head Are Auctioned Off for a Total of $45,650.

Special to The New York Times.

PIMLICO, Md., Nov. 10.—Horses in training from a number of consignors were sold in the paddock of the Maryland Jockey Club course this morning under the auspices of the Thoroughbred Sales Company. Twenty-two head came under the hammer, bringing a total of $45,650, an average of $2,075. There was not a large attendance and the bidding lagged.

Most important of the offerings was the consignment from the stable of Commander J. K. L. Ross, eight head coming under the hammer for a total of $34,400 and an average of $4,300. Top price of this lot, and also for the whole sale, was $6,000, which A. C. Bostwick paid for the two-year-old bay colt Landlord, by Boniface out of Tiarco, a good race winner in Canada.

R. A. Smith took Hijo, a three-year-old bay gelding, by Spanish Prince II out of Speariana for $5,700. This is another good winner across the border, and he also won at the present meeting. A. C. Bostwick went to $5,000 for The Pine, a two-year-old bay colt, by Cudgel out of Audienne, and a half brother to Whisk Broom II, that has shown some fast workouts but has never started.

The two-year-old chestnut colt Adamas, by Imp. Wigstone out of Finery, and a four-time winner, was knocked down to R. A. Smith for $4,700. The same buyer took the five-year-old bay gelding Wheatstick, by Cudgel-Wheatear, winner of nine stakes, for $4,300. W. A. Waldron bid $3,500 and took Denise, a two-year-old bay filly, by Tredennis out of Barribel. Frank L. Alexander paid $3,000 for Plotter, a two-year-old bay colt, by Ajom-Intrigante. The only other number in the Ross consignment was Imp. Junetta, a two-year-old bay filly, by Junior-Spearetts, for which R. A. Smith paid $2,200.

The other sales were unimportant.

RICKARD CONSIDERS WILLS AND PERSSON

Promoter Apparently Has Forgotten Ban Against Negro at Time of Title Bout.

FEBRUARY LIKELY DATE

Swede, However, Is Under Indefinite Suspension Here—Other Boxing News.

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

The prospect of a heavyweight battle between Harry Persson, Swedish giant, and Harry Wills, New Orleans negro veteran, in Madison Square Garden loomed yesterday when Promoter Tex Rickard declared himself ready to arrange such a bout to determine Persson's prospects as a candidate for a heavyweight title bout next Summer. Rickard indicated his intention of opening negotiations immediately with Paddy Mullins, manager of Wills. If the match is arranged it cannot be held before February.

The promoter declared at the time of the Gene Tuney-Jack Dempsey bout that under no circumstances would he ever permit himself to be the medium of any money-making by Wills. Apparently his anger, which prompted this declaration because of attempts to block the Philadelphia battle, has subsided. Whether Manager Mullins has forgotten it could not be learned.

Persson Held Up by Injury.

Meanwhile Persson is nursing an injured left thumb and will be inactive for a period of three weeks or more, according to information yesterday. The Swede is suffering from a splintered bone in the left thumb and has found it necessary to request another postponement of his battle with Pat McCarthy in Boston. The injury was sustained by Persson in the bout against Bud Gorman, in which the Swedish boxer was disqualified on a foul. For this Persson was suspended indefinitely, constituting another bar to a Wills match in the immediate future.

Wills has returned to this city from Rochester, where he went following his disqualification in the bout with Jack Sharkey. At Rochester Wills underwent treatment for his injured right arm. He plans to rest a fortnight before entering training for whatever ring engagements present themselves.

Matchmaker Andy Neidsrreiter has closed an international match for his twelve-round feature at the New Broadway Arena, Brooklyn, on Nov. 22. The principals will be Andre Routis, French featherweight, and Tony Canzoneri, local Italian.

Bernstein Guides Jack Herman.

Phil Bernstein, Bronx manager of fighters, has undertaken the management of Italian Jack Herman, Westchester heavyweight, for a period of three years, and has signed Herman to battle Monte Munn in the Garden on Dec. 2. Paddy May, Tuckahoe conditioner of fighters, has been engaged as trainer for Herman.

Johnny Keyes, veteran manager, is campaigning for title matches for two of the lads under his direction. Encouraged by the victory on a foul of Irish Tommy Jordan over Lew Tendler, Keyes is seeking a match for Jordan against either Joe Dundee or Pete Latzo, world's welterweight champion, and he is also advancing Frankie Fink, Texas featherweight, as a contender for the title in the 126-pound class.

Dave Lumiansky, manager of Chick Suggs, New Bedford negro fighter, is predicting a knockout victory over Honeyboy Finnegan, Boston's southpaw, when the lads clash in their bout next Monday night in Boston. This match is being recognized by the Massachusetts Commission as for the featherweight championship.

Veteran "Iron Man" Signs for Six-Day Rrce Starting Dec. 5.

The six-day bicycle race, which opens in Madison Square Garden on the night of Dec. 5, will see Reggie McNamara, veteran Newark "iron man," in competition again. McNamara submitted his contract yesterday, after which he departed with Freddie Spencer, Bill Hanley and Tony Beckman for a hunting trip.

McNamara will be competing in his forty-sixth race. He hopes to repeat the triumph he scored in the last New York six-day race with Franco Georgetti.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—Erwin Rudolph of Chicago moved into first place in the world's championship pocket billiard tournament at the Elks Club tonight when he scored his fourth straight victory to forge ahead of Ralph Greenleaf, the only other undefeated contestant.

Charles Harmon of Glendale, L. I., was Rudolph's victim tonight, taking the short end of a 125 to 84 score. It was a brilliant finish that enabled Rudolph to gain the edge over his rival as he had been trailing throughout the match.

Harry Oswald of Pittsburgh lost his first game in the tournament when he went down to defeat before Arthur Ponzi of Philadelphia in the first of the evening matches. The score was 125 to 99.

Arthur Woods of Pawtucket, R. I., won from Harold Pindle of Appleton, Wis., in the afternoon by a score of 125 to 89. It was the second victory for Woods and the fourth defeat for Pindle. Play went thirty-one innings.

Tom Hueston came through once more in the second afternoon game, by defeating Pasquale Natalie of Baltimore. The Baltimorean matched wits in safety play with the veteran for forty-five innings, but the veteran worked him into such a mental state that he made three scratches in a row and lost 17 points. Hueston then stepped to the table and clicked off seventeen balls and completed his string of 125. The final count was 125 to 99.

COPULOS DEFEATS SHULER.

Joseph Copulos vanquished Harry Shuler in the fifth and sixth blocks of their twelve-block three-cushion billiard match at the Strand Academy yesterday, winning 60-44 in the afternoon and 60-25 at night. This gives Copulos a clean sweep of the tourney to date. He is playing in championship form, having required only 336 innings for his 360 points. Shuler's grand total is 226. The blocks are being played on a 60—50 basis.

Copulos had high runs of five and seven in both blocks, while Shuler's best runs were six and four.

CUTLER LEADING E. APPLEBY

Albert G. Cutler, former junior champion, defeated Edgar T. Appleby, the international amateur 18.2 balkline champion, in the first block of their match at the Claridge Academy last night, 400 to 247 in fifteen innings. His high run was 148. Appleby had a high run of 92 and took fourteen innings. Cutler is playing for 800 points against 600 in two blocks.

HORNSBY TO REMAIN A CARD

Denies Trade, Saying He Prefers St. Louis to Any Other City.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 10 (AP).—Denying rumors that he would be traded to the New York Giants because of friction known to have existed between him and President Sam Breadon of the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals, Manager Rogers Hornsby said today he would rather play in St. Louis than any other city.

"The question of Mr. Breadon and I conferring on our terms for next year is our private business," he said. "I can only say that I would rather play in St. Louis than in any other city."

MET. BOWLERS ARE VICTORS

Beat Spinella's Five-Man Team Two of Three at Thum's Alleys.

The Metropolitan team defeated Barney Spinella's Five in the American national bowling tournament at Thum's last night two games out of three. The Metropolitan team rolled 939, 1,006 and 967, while the Spinella team scored 912, 967 and 987. Jerry Phillips of the Spinella outfit set a new high score record for the tourney by bowling 263 as well as getting a total of 683 for three games. He also rolled thirty frames without a miss or break.

Optimism Is the Watchword as Yale Prepares for Princeton

GLOOM AND DESPAIR NOT KNOWN AT YALE

ALL EYES ARE ON FUTURE

By ROBERT F. KELLEY.
Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—The ancient line about heads "bloodied but unbowed" goes for Yale this week, whether you consider it a hackneyed one or not. There is this about the atmosphere in the old college town as the battered Bull Dog prepares for the first of his traditional encounters against the Princeton Tiger this Saturday so unmistakably that the observer cannot fail bnt be impressed by it.

Everywhere except in New Haven Yale is regarded as the under dog for this second of the Big Three encounters. Princeton, conqueror of Harvard, is regarded as an almost certain winner Saturday, bnt not up here. Yale has never gone under without a fight and the Elis are not going to do it this year, if the surface of things here means anything.

Bill Kline, who has been called home by the death of his mother, is out of the game. If the big fullback reports for the battle against the Tiger, his return will be as dramatic and unexpected to the Yale coaches as to those waiting in the stands for the start of the game. Right now, the coaches are regarding him as lost for the game and are priming Jerry Wadsworth for his place.

Coaches in High Spirits.

Up at the Y Club on High Street, where Yale coaches have their meals and where, behind the closed doors of their dining rooms, the strategy of many a Yale encounter has been mapped ont with the cigars, there was laughter despite the severe losses in veterans. Tad Jones, the head coach, came out presently and sat in his office to talk of the approaching game.

"What can I say in the way of predictions for the Princeton game?" he repeated the question and puffed quietly at his cigar. Then he looked directly at his questionar and said, "Only this. That the game is not going to be won by talk. It is not going to be won today, tomorrow or the next day. The talk won't win it. The score will. It will not be decided until some time after 2 o'clock on Saturday and don't forget that. And we will give them a very good run for their money."

Obviously, Jones is pot of the belief that all is lost. That is plain in his speech. Another thing which interests the outsider as he comes to New Haven these days is the disruption and dissension that, according to some published reports, is eating at the core of things.

After an hour or so with the coaches and players the observer can only believe that if it is here then there is also present some mighty fine acting np here.

Jones says there has never been a season when he has found such unity and help among his coaches, and certainly they give this impression as they break bread together at luncheon. None of them will say anything in the way of comment in the reports, for they are not recognizing them, hut they are pretty much annoyed at them and at further ones which concern players.

Cooperation Rules Supreme.

There is no truth in these reports. Yale football t'day was one compact body working h.', and with an appealing spirit in t.e face of its past record to pull out the last two games of a somewhat disastrous season.

None of the coaches had anything in the way of alibis to offer for any of the games lost. The state of mind is at once aoparent that the past is forgotten and the future being faced with something almost akin to confidence.

The loss of Kline has hnrt, there is no denying that, for the Yale coaches were counting heavily on him, hut in this afternoon's practice, the last hard one before the game, they worked with Wadsworth and some others and are carrying on.

There is a slight rift in the gloom of injured and absent stars. There is the possibility, only a slight one, hut nevertheless a possibility, that Larry Noble, the best of the passing backs, may get into the Princeton game. If Yale were able to slide Noble in, the result would be very mnch like that effected for Princeton when Slagle got into the Harvard game. Noble is about the best bet the Elis have in the backfield. He is their only real passer.

Jones is still undecided about his starting line-up and probably will not definitely announce it until the team reaches Princeton Friday and practices in Palmer Stadium before retiring to Trenton for the night.

End Positions Settled.

The backs are furnishing the most trouble. The ends and the tackles, it is felt, will stand up. Sturhahn and Webster have heen crippled a hit, but are considered in shape now for the guard positions, and Harvey is in the centre.

Tihby Bunnell, ths captain, is, of course, the quarterback, but beyond that the make-up of the backfield is not at all certain. Holahird, Falling, Ordway, Goodwine and McGunigle are possible halfbacks, with Wadsworth, who has been a sub for two years, earning a letter each season, as the probable man to take Kline's place.

Work today, with a cold wind whipping down over the old Yale Field, consisted largely of dummy scrimmage and of kicking and passing, with Wadsworth taking a shot at both placement and dropkicks. He has played the rôle of field goal kicker in the past.

For the first time in years there is no "Princeton" team facing ths varsity this week, for Saturday's game will be the first under the new Roper-Jones non-scouting agreement. It will be the first time that a Jones team has faced a major opponent without scouting it.

"There may be some interesting things happen because of this," said the coach. "Of course I have told my men what we knew of Princeton last year, but if they start anything new, then it will be simply up to the boys out there to cope with it, and that, I think, will add to the game.

"This non-scouting plan has worked well, I think. It has been successful from my standpoint and I think the thing has been a success. It will be interesting to watch it in operation."

Yale, then, without knowing what it is up against as it knew it through scouts in the past, goes up to the Princeton game confident that, whoever says anything to the contrary, it is still in the fight. And far, far stranger things than a Yale victory would have happened in Big Three history.

Football Officials Named For Yale-Princeton Game

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—The officials for the fiftieth football clash between Yale and Princeton here Saturday were announced today as follows:

Referee—V. A. Schwartz of Brown.
Umpire—Walter R. Okeson of Lehigh.
Linesman—D. L. Fults of Brown.
Field Judge—Fred W. Murphy of Brown.

BIG 10 TEAMS DRILL ON ICY GRIDIRONS

End Practice for Saturday's Contests—Michigan Ready for Ohio State.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10 (AP).—Outdoors again after a day of partial idleness caused by a snowstorm, Big Ten teams went through ths week's last scrimmages tonight on icy gridirons and announced themselves ready for Saturday's combats.

Michigan's squad is ready for Ohio State and feels in the best condition of the season, but is aware that ths Buckeye backfield is as good as its own and that the fight for the conference title will require the best football of the year to win. Ohio State, whose team has met fewer formidable opponents than the Wolverines, was cautioned against overconfidence while Wilce drilled his men on a defense against the forward passing game.

Northwestern wound np its training for Chicago, and promised to break the string of Maroon victories which have been consecutive since Paddy Driscoll's day at the Wild Cat school. Stagg told his team that if it played as much better football this week as it did a week ago against Illinois, Northwestern could he held scoreless. The Maroons have played defensive football all season, and contemplate no deviation from this program on Saturday.

Iowa too had its last workont for the Wisconsin game at Madison, polishing up plays with which it hopes to win. Both teams have had dismal seasons.

Illinois, Purdue and Minnesota squads will get a general workout in Saturday's tilts with Wabash, Franklin and Butler, and none of the coaches plans to reveal anything hut straight football. Illinois is working secretly for Ohio State, Purdue for Indiana and Minnesota for Michigan. Indiana, preparing to play host to Mississippi A. and M. went through a stiff scrimmage and spent two hours in ths freezing atmosphere. Coach Page said his men will have an advantags over the Southerners if the day is unseasonably cold.

BIG TEN TEAMS SEEK NEW FOOTBALL RIVALS

Shifts Expected Even Among Conference Opponents—Chicago May Drop Northwestern.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10 (AP).—Athletic directors and football coaches of the Western Conference have chosen the eve of the Army-Navy game to draft their 1927 schedules. They will meet here Friday, Nov. 26, and intend to witness ths gridiron spectacle after arranging thsir games for next season.

Rumblings of new alignments among the traditional Big Ten opponents were heard today, the annual Chicago-Northwestern series being one which gossip indicates is likely to be broken. Illinois is ready to accept the place on the Northwestern program for 1927 and the Purple also is anxious to arrange an intersectional game to fill its new double-deck stadium with its seating capacity of about 70,000.

A. A. Stagg, Director of Athletics at Chicago, remains silent on the reported break with Northwestern, a gridiron foe of more than a quarter of a century.

Chicago has an engagement with Pennsylvania to be played in the West in 1927, hut it is questionahle if Illinois and Penn will clash again next year. Penn cams to Illinois this season, losing 3 to 0 before 65,000 spectators, and a year previous Red Grange was responsible for the defeat of the Quakers in Philadelphia.

The Michigan-Minnesota and the Indiana-Northwestern double-headers of this year undoubtedly will not be arranged for 1927. The coaches do not want any more of the double-header games, provided it is possible to arrange schedules without them. Although the Big Ten rules provide that each team shall play four games within the Conference, John L. Griffith, Commissioner of Athletics, is opposed to the double-header idea and hopes it can be avoided.

Coach Rockne of Notre Dame, who has been playing Conference opponents and also beating them, hopes to arrange at least three games with Big Ten foes next season. Rockne will play the University of Southern California here the Saturday following Thanksgiving, using Soldiers Field, with a seating capacity of 100,000, as the battle ground.

Rockne hopes to renew the contract with Northwestern. The games between the two schools have provided one of the high lights of the football season. Notre Dame also will play the Army next year and also may again engage Minnesota.

Coach Yost of Michigan has arranged to play the Navy at Ann Arbor on Nov. 12 of next year and will dedicate the new Michigan Stadium, with its seating capacity of 75,000, with the Ohio State game on Oct. 22, 1927.

In announcing that the Buckeyes will share in the dedicatory ceremonies Yost set at rest rumors that an Eastern eleven, probably Harvard, would be asked to come to Ann Arbor for this game. Purdue's showing against the Navy, although losing 13 to 17, makes it apparently certain that the Boilermakers will come in for their share of attractive games. Both Purdue and Indiana will go East to meet Harvard next Fall.

Rasch and Brody Triumph.

Leo Rasch and H. Brody were the winners last night in the three-cushion tournament at Doyle's Billiard Academy. Rasch conquered R. Ryan, 25 to 18, in forty innings, while Brody beat E. Barker, 25 to 21, in forty-two innings.

PRINCETON SCORES THREE TOUCHDOWNS

BRIDGES FIRST TO TALLY

Goes Through Line and Races 30 Yards for Touchdown—Baruch Over on Fake Forward Pass.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—Today Princeton's preparations for the Yale game included a long scrimmage against a scrub team which included several members of past Princeton elevens. Three times the goal line of ths scrub team was crossed by the Tiger first team.

Jake Slagle returned to football togs this afternoon, hut took no part in the scrimmage. While his teammates romped through the all-star team, Slagle went through a private warming-up drill on the side of the field. Earl Baruch held Slagle's post at left halfback during the scrimmage, and accounted for one of the touchdowns.

Mike Miles reported to the field for a short time this afternoon, but left early to continue his study of Spanish in preparation for a test Whitey Willauer replaced Miles in the scrimmage, and he, too, cantered down half the length of the field for a touchdown after intercepting a pass. Jim Bridges opened the scoring when he raced 30 yards across the all-star goal line.

Howe on the Field

Chuck Howe, who was taken out of the Harvard game after an injury, was on the field again today, but Ernie Bartell remained at the pivot post on ths varsity, while Howe recovers from his injury. Bartell may start at centre against Yale in place of Howe, and Slagle, whose ailing leg was injured further in the Harvard game, may be replaced by Earl Baruch Saturday.

Slagle, who has been hailed as the best Princeton halfback of all time, limped on to Soldiers Field before the Harvard game and shot through the line and around end for the longest gains of any of ths backs. The Tiger hopes for the Yale game concentrate on Slagle, and Princeton's stock will take a jump if his leg permits his entrance on Saturday. This afternoon he punted and passed for more than an hour, and his leg seemed to be in better condition today.

Charley Moeser, who was also injured in the battle at Cambridge, left the field early, giving way to Johnny Stinson at right end during the scrimmage. The team against which Bill Roper pitted his Tiger charges this sneppy afternoon incinded six football stars of past Princeton teams. The team included Stan Keck, captain and all-American tackle in 1921, and two of his teammates, Al Wittmer, all-American centre, and Ralph Gilroy, star back field man on the 1921 eleven.

Al Wittmer and Stan Keck are coaching ths Tiger lins this year. Another coach to enter the fray against the varsity was Jack Winn, end on Princeton's 1919 team. Mel Dickinson, Captain of Princeton's "team of destiny," which downed Chicago in 1922, played ton's 1919 team. Mel Dickinson, capnan, backfield ster of last year, and head foothall coach at Lawreneeville this year, returned to the football field to face the varsity.

Varsity Shows Fewer.

The Tigers exhibited ths drive that won the gams with Harvard last week when they crossed the all-star goal line three tinies. There was no attempt at making a drop kick for the extra points.

Jim Bridges pinnged through the scrub line, eluded the secondary defense and, in ons of the best bits of field running ehown on University Field this year, raced 30 yards to score the first touchdown.

A few minutes leter Earl Baruch added another 6 points when he faked e forward pass and skirted right end for another 30 yards and a touchdown.

Princeton's attack seemed to please Head Coach Bill Roper, and after Baruch crossed the goal line he gave the ball to the scrubs to test the Princeton defense. The scrub attack failed as the varsity solved all its attempts at passes, line plunges and end runs, until Whitey Willauer snatched the ball out of the air as Al Wittmer tossed a pass. From the middle of the field, Willauer romped through the all-stars for the final touchdown.

The varsity unleashed its complete retinue of plays against the scrubs this afternoon, and had little opportunity to exhibit its defensive powers, since the all-star team made few gains and was on the defensive for the greater part of the afternoon.

Sympathy for Yale Star.

Princeton's sympathy went out to William Kline, Yale fullback, on learning that he was called away because of his mother's death. Sympathy was extended to the Yale star through the editorial column of The Daily Princetonian, the undergraduate newspaper.

The line-up for the scrimmage this afternoon follows:

VARSITY.		ALL-STAR TEAM.
Stinson	L.E.	Schenk
Darby	L.T.	Edgerton
Blake	L.G.	Dickinson
Bartell	C.	Taylor
Davis	R.G.	Lewis
Rosengarten	R.T.	Keck
Lawler	R.E.	Stout
Caulkins	Q.B.	Ewing
Bridges	L.H.	Chandler
Baruch	R.H.	Wise

1,500 Harvard Tickets Left For Annual Game With Yale

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10 (AP).—A diminishing interest in the annual football classic between Harvard and Yala was seen today in the announcement by the Harvard Athletic Association that it had been able to fill all applications so far from Harvard men and that it expected to have 1,500 tickets available next week for like distribution. An announcement which will be mailed with tickets at the end of the week waives the "personal occupancy" rule, except for tickets in the cheering section, for this year only. While permitting ticket holders to transfer the pastsboards, it warns against violation of the rule against speculation.

FOUR TOUCHDOWNS SCORED BY BROWN

Varsity Eleven Gains Almost at Will in Scrimmage—Squad in Shape for Harvard.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 10.—Brown's varsity eleven, which will meet Harvard on Saturday, today scored four touchdowns against team B in a twenty minute scrimmage session on Andrews Field. The varsity ripped through the seconds almost at will, Randall, Lawrence and Mishel getting loose several times for long runs.

Lawrence scored two of the varsity's four touchdowns, while Randall and Broda each got one. Randall's touchdown run of 45 yards was the longest sprint of the afternoon.

Following the scrimmage Coach McLaughry put the first team through a long dummy scrimmage drill against Dr. Snell's polywogs, equipped with ths Harvard plays. McLaughry took complete charge of this drill, explaining the assignments for each player in detail.

J. H. Stewart of Bradley Beach, N. J., alternated with Towle at end. Stewart probahly will get ths call in case it is necessary to substitute for either Broda or Towle.

The squad is in the best shape of the year, not even a hruise being reported by the varsity players. The team will be slightly heavier than it was at Dartmouth, as all of the players have been gaining steadily. Broda has put on the most weight, adding six pounds in the last two weeks.

Defensive dummy scrimmage has been ordered for tomorrow with a light dummy scrimmage, punting, passing and brisk signal drill schednled for Friday. The team will leave at 11 o'clock Saturday morning for Cambridge. Following the game the squad will have dinner at the Hotel Lenox, Brown's headquarters in Boston.

WESLEYAN LINE SHIFTED.

Ellis and Craw Get Posts to Gain Speed—Johnson at Quarter.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 10.—A long, hard scrimmage with the freshmen eleven was held by the Wesleyan varsity eleven this afternoon. Coach Hill tried a new line combination which appeared to work well and which he may use against Bowdoin on Saturday. Ellis replaced Clive at tackle and Craw superseded Briggs at guard. Ths new combination was slightly lighter than the old but is expected to give more speed.

It now appears that Johnson, a sophomore, will probably run ths team at quarterback, replacing Bittenberger. Johnson has put drive into the team every time he has had a chance to play. The revamped line-up pleased the coaches. The work was mainly for defensive purposes.

HORWEEN TO MAKE ONLY ONE CHANGE

Saltonstall Replaces Meadows in Harvard Line-Up Announced for the Brown Game.

PUTNAM HURT IN PRACTICE

Receives Cut Over Eye in Scrimmage, but Doctors Say He Will Be Able to Play.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10.—In the tentative Harvard line-up which Coach Horween announced this afternoon would probehly start against Brown on Saturday only one change has been mads from the combination which opened against Princeton last week. Saltonstall has replaced Meadows at left snd in the Crimson first-string line-up.

Because several of the Harvard regulars are still on the injured list, the Harvard mentor stressed the fact that the line-up he gave out was subject to change, but with Dr. T. K. Richards, Harvard's football physician, still maintaining that Guarnaccia will he ths only member of the varsity squad not in shape on Saturday, all of the Crimson regulars have been assigned their old positions in the Harvard line-up.

Strong will share the wing assignments with Saltonstall, while Coady and Pratt will hold down the tackle positions, Kilgour and Simonds the guards and Camache will be at centre. Ths Harvard back field will present no changes, with Putnam at quarterback, French and Miller at halfback and Sayles at fullback.

Putnam Cut Over Eye.

Toward the close of a forty-five-minuts offensive scrimmage against the scrubs today Putnam was badly cut over the eye and had to leave the game. His place in ths team was taken by Stafford. Putnam returned to this field in civilian clothes to watch the balance of the practice with bandages over his eye, but when questioned about the injury at ths close of the drill, the Harvard doctors declared that he will be in shape to play on Saturday.

The Harvard squad was out early today, beginning the afternoon practice with the usual kicking and signal practice. Following the offensive drill against the scrubs, a team of coaches and ineligibles, which has been rehearing Brown plays during the past week under the tutelage of Charlie Linehan, Harvard's official scout for Dartmouth and Brown, came into the secret practice field to oppose the varsity with Brown's offense.

Wales, quarterback on the 1921 Harvard team, was ths Randall of the "Brown" team today, while Dolph Cheek, captain of the Harvard team last year, went nnder the name of Michell, ths flashiest of Brown hacks. Mickey Eaton and Fred Eaton impersonated Lawrence and Cornsweet, respectively, in the dummy scrimmage, which lasted for the balance of the afternoon practice.

Coady and Kilgour Return.

Captain Coady and Kilgour, still bearing the scars of the Princeton game, were in uniforms today for the first time this week, although they were not on either of the two teams Coach Horween used in scrimmage. Brown has discarded his cane and he is expected to see service against the Browns. Camache did not appear until late because of an examination, and when he did report he spent the afternoon passing to Chauncey, as the Crimson halfback practiced drop-kicking from the 30-yard line.

Tickets for Saturday's gams against Brown are scarcer than for any other contest thus far this season. Since Tuesday ths Harvard athletic office has been turning away applicants for the pasteboards, and members of the varsity squad who have been trying to find additional seats are meeting with the same rebuff.

ST. MARK'S VICTOR OVER GROTON, 20-0

Conquers Traditional Football Rival After Having Lost to It for Four years.

Special to The New York Times.

GROTON, Mass., Nov. 10.—After four years of defeats ths St. Mark's football team defeated its ancient foe, Groton School, 20 to 0, on the latter's field here this afternoon. Groton was unable to cope with St. Mark's attack, the latter's passing keeping ths Groton lins and back field demoralized, and it was comparativsly easy for the victors to gain.

McLaughlin, in the St. Mark's back field, excelled. His cutbacks through the Groton lins were sensational. Cottrell, winning captain, was almost as effective in this style of play.

The line-up:

ST. MARK'S (20).		GROTON (0).
Palmer	L.E.	Thorne
Hare	L.T.	Adams
Field	L.G.	White
Hill	C.	Richards
Goodyear	R.G.	Gade

This Spring - Needle Knit Underwear Does Not Bulge or Gape at the Knee, Seat or Elbow

THERE'S a definite mechanical reason why Allen-A always fits well—why it does not gape or bulge with use.

All Allen-A underwear is knit on spring needle machines (patented). The knitting loops are drawn tight as the garment is made. (There is an actual mile more yarn in each Allen-A garment). The stretch is in the weave itself—not in the yarn. Hence it always springs back to shape.

Allen-A underwear always keeps the same, sleek, elastic comfort. It will make you smile the first time you wear it.

This underwear is made to fit all over — chest, waist, your favorite leg and sleeve length, too.

Gray Random of fine wearing quality.	Medium weight wool and cotton mixture. Very comfortable.	A novelty stripe silk and wool in three colors.

First and Second Army Varsity Teams in Lively Scrimmage

ARMY FIRST TEAM ENGAGES SECONDS

Squad Works More Than Two Hours Rehearsing Ground and Aerial Formations.

HEWITT WITH BOTH ELEVENS

Saunders Takes Place of Perry at Right Tackle—Bretnall Proves Accurate Punter.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The Army football team started practice early this afternoon here today and kept at it after it was necessary to turn on the flood lights. More than two hours were taken up in a long and strenuous session which included a rehearsal of the Army air and ground attack for Notre Dame on Saturday. In addition to offensive measures, the Cadets went through defensive manoeuvres with a view to stopping the Notre Dame plays.

Coach Biff Jones scrimmaged the varsity and second teams, the B team using Notre Dame plays against team A. At the outset the B team gained consistently, but Coach Jones interrupted the play frequently with pointers on stopping the various formations. At the end, the Cadets had halted about every Notre Dame move that has become known thus far.

On the ground plays, Jones had out all of his first-string backs. He worked Merrell Cagle, Wilson and Harding on one team and Gilbreth, Trapnell, Zimmerman and O'Donnell on another. Hewitt, Army captain, replaced backs in both teams at various times.

Several line shifts were tried out in the course of the afternoon. Saunders was at right tackle in place of Perry, and Reaman and Hammack were used at the guard positions. All of the men performed creditably and there is strong possibility of some line changes before Saturday.

Trapnell, Zimmerman, Hewitt, Murrell and Bretnall did a lot of kicking and punting. The last named is a back who is likely to see service against Notre Dame because of his fine and accurate kicking today.

The team will leave for New York tomorrow morning and will work out in the Yankee Stadium in the afternoon. The cadet corps contingent, 1,200 strong, will arrive at the Stadium at about 1:30 P. M., Saturday, according to orders issued today.

DARTMOUTH PRACTICES IN DRIVING SNOWSTORM

Dooley Scores Two of Varsity's 4 Touchdowns in Last Strenuous Workout for Cornell.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 10.—The Dartmouth team had its final hard workout on the college campus today in the midst of a driving snowstorm before leaving for the Cornell game. The recent rains have made the regular field a sea of mud, upon which it has been impossible to practice. Today's snow made the footing even more treacherous.

For the first time since the Harvard game, more than two weeks ago, the first team went through a regular scrimmage. It is a half-hour session in which the regulars faced the second team the varsity won, 24 to 12. Dooley plunged, the first team and, carrying the ball from scrimmage in brilliant fashion, made two of the touchdowns.

The Green offensive, as it was shown today with Dooley an integral part of the running attack, looked better than it has in weeks. With Dooley calling signals, the regulars kept their opponents on the run with a varied attack, which included wide end runs mixed in with tackle plays and forwards.

Lane and Fusonie made the other scores for the first team, both on long passes. Fusonie played left end with the varsity, teaming with the former halfback, McAvoy. The combination is an entirely new one as Fusonie has always been on the other side of the line. The pair's work today was better than that of any other pair of Dartmouth ends this year. It is probable that these two will be on the wings against Cornell Saturday.

Tomorrow's practice will be comparatively short as the squad is slated to depart for Ithaca at 5, o'clock. Coach Hawley would not make any definite prediction when asked about the game tonight. He said: "Cornell has a big, rugged team and we are expecting a hard game."

WILLIAMS STRESSES PASS.

Again Concentrates on Aerial Attack in Drill for Amherst.

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 10.—The Williams varsity again resorted entirely to forward passing in practice today. The expected scrimmage with the freshmen did not materialize, Coach Lawson evidently deciding not to take chances with further injuries with the Amherst game Saturday in view.

Instead a dummy scrimmage was held, following a long signal workout. The varsity did nothing but throw passes against the scrubs, while the latter when in possession of the ball used Amherst formations. The varsity line-up remained unchanged.

CHOATE DROPS PROGRAM.

Omits Traditional Souvenir to Counteract Football Commercialism.

WALLINGFORD, Conn., Nov. 10 (AP).—The commercial spirit pervading football is decried in an editorial in The Choate School News, and the same issue announces that to help counteract this spirit of commercialism the souvenir program, a feature of the football season, will be omitted this year. Choate School, Kent School of Kent and Taft School of Watertown form in Connecticut a sort of prep school Big Three. The Choate-Kent game will be played here Saturday, and it is for this game that the souvenir program, a tradition of the game, will be eliminated.

Minnesota's Thundering Herd Now the Galloping Gophers

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 10 (AP).—The Galloping Gophers have replaced the Thundering Herd at the University of Minnesota. For some weeks past sporting accounts of the activities of the Minnesota football squad have contained references to the Thundering Herd. It was Dr. Clarence Spears's idea to bury the Thundering Herd stuff. The expression, he protested, was misleading.

"If you've got to have them thunder," Coach Spears suggested to newspaper men, "why don't you call them Thundering Gophers? That's about as much thundering as a football team can do—thunder about as loud as a flock of gophers."

So hereafter it's going to be Galloping Gophers.

NOTRE DAME ENDS WORK FOR CADETS

Attack and Defense Rehearsed in Scrimmage—Players to Start East Today.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 10.—Coach Knute Rockne and his assistants sent the varsity through a short and active session of offensive and defensive scrimmage against the scrubs here today, the final practice for the Army game at New York on Saturday. The first eleven tried out its new plays and formations which will be used against the Cadets, and gained consistently, particularly with aerial and shift formations. The scrubs at times baffled the varsity with their much-practiced Army formations, but failed to show any consistent ground-gaining ability.

Plays through the line and off the tackles were repeatedly smothered by the first-string players, who came through the final scrimmage in good condition. The squad will leave for New York tomorrow to meet the Army in what promises to be by far the hardest test of the season. The trip will be no new experience for most of the players, as they took the same route East last Fall and were defeated by the Cadets. The squad, with added experience, is highly confident and prepared to wage a hard fight.

The scrimmage marked the only bit of action for Notre Dame this week, inclement weather permitting of only dummy scrimmage and work on signals and formations on Monday and yesterday. Rockne has devoted much of his time to the tackles, while Hunk Anderson has drilled the guards with the backs and ends taking pointers from Tommy Mills. The work today after the scrimmage comprised a rehearsal of defensive and offensive tactics for the Army.

Tommy Mills, who has replaced the injured Joe Boland at left tackle, appeared to advantage in the practice. Johnny Smith, one of the leading guards, who was injured in the Northwestern game, is a doubtful starter. Art Parisien and Bucky Dahman are also ailing, but the rest of the squad is in condition to meet the expected hard test against the Cadets in New York.

The backfield was interchanged several times today in the final workout, while Rockne also made several shifts among the forwards, but at the close of the workout he appeared quite satisfied with the showing of his 1926 array of South Bend talent.

LAFAYETTE DECLINES GAME.

Will Not Face St. Mary's on Coast —No Alabama Clash Either.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 10.—Lafayette has declined an invitation to meet St. Mary's College on the Coast Dec. 11, according to a statement today by D. Leroy Reeves, graduate Manager of Athletics. The college authorities felt that the trip would interrupt for too long a period the studies of the football men. The game would have been played in the University of California Stadium at Berkeley. St. Mary's has not been defeated this year.

Lafayette, moreover, will not play the University of Alabama in the Sesquicentennial Stadium in Philadelphia Nov. 30. Alabama declined the invitation of the Sesquicentennial officials yesterday. Lafayette also had decided not to play the game, although the officials had not been notified to that effect.

NAVY POINTS BACKS TO STOP AIR GAME

RESERVE FORCES IMPROVE

Second Quartet Behind Line to Relieve Regulars as Soon as Possible on Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 10.—Preparing for the game with Georgetown here on Saturday, the Naval Academy backs were drilled in defense against the forward pass in the same manner they were made ready so successfully to take care of the tosses of Benny Friedman.

The passes were executed by the squad B backs who had been drilled for the two past afternoons in the Georgetown formations and methods as sized up by the Navy scouts.

The Navy team appears to have progressed definitely since the Michigan game and is particularly well off in the matter of reserve backs. Coach Ingram, with the Army game in mind, will use his regulars Saturday only as long as absolutely necessary.

The starting back field this afternoon was made up of Goudge, Caldwell, Hannegan and Hamilton. This combination will undoubtedly start Saturday, but there is an excellent reserve quartet in Shipley, Schuber, Coffman and Ransford. This group is individually as strong as the first string.

The second back field gives the team a great advantage over the eleven which faced Michigan. Shapley and Schuber were not in the best physical trim at that time and Coffman had not developed to his present usefulness. He has been coming along fast and made a fine showing against West Virginia Wesleyan last Saturday.

There are indications that Osborn will be used in the back field. He was regular centre for two seasons, but was kept back by illness early in the season.

SUNDAY STAY APPEALED.

Athletics Carry Baseball Case to Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

Big Stop-Clock and Announcing Device To Guide Fans at Wisconsin-Iowa Game

Special to The New York Times.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 10.—Spectators at the homecoming game between Iowa and Wisconsin on Saturday will not be in the dark as to the number of minutes left to play. There will be a big clock on the scoreboard to show them.

The clock, which is electrically operated, is constructed like a stop-watch such as is used by the officials. It is controlled from the sidelines and can be stopped whenever time is taken out by the field judge and started when the ball is again put in play.

George Levis, the business manager of the University of Wisconsin Department of Athletics, announced today that a contract had been signed for the installation of the clock and that it would be ready for Saturday's game with the Hawkeyes, and will also be used for basketball games.

Another feature that has been provided to keep the 42,000 seat holders informed as to what is going on is an electric announcing system. Amplifiers have been installed at various parts of the stadium, and the play-by-play description will be broadcast by an experienced man, assisted by representatives of the two teams. The ball carrier, tackler, kicker, passer, &c., will be called and the more intricate plays explained.

CORNELL REGULARS NEARING TOP FORM

Hard Two-Hour Session Reveals Entire Squad in Excellent Physical Shape.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Cornell's preparation for the Dartmouth game reached its climax this evening in a two-hour outdoor drill on the practice field. This was the first time in a week that weather conditions have been favorable and, though the gridiron was soft from a heavy rain of yesterday, the Red elevens engaged in a lively scrimmage, and they maintained a hot pace right through.

The scrimmage established that the Ithacans are physically in shape. Men like Butterfield, Balderston, Schumacher and Evans, who have been on the injured list or kept out of play because of fatigue, have come back to form, and every man eligible to play Saturday should be ready to start.

Doble drilled the Ithacans on defense again this evening. The Cornell backs were kept chasing long passes and they had only fair success. Butterfield, Balderston, Grasner and Hoekelman started against the second team, indicating that Doble feels they are needed in defensive play against Dartmouth's aerial.

When the varsity turned to the offensive drill, however, Molinet, Beck and Isaly got into the line-up. Wickham and Scholes played end, Anderson and Evans tackle, Carey and Munn guard and Rapuano centre. The forwards are developing a faster charge and seem about due to put up a fine game against Dartmouth.

COLGATE HAS DRILL DESPITE BLIZZARD

Heavily Clothed Varsity Players Battle Yearlings—Students Stage Big Rally.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The Colgate eleven this afternoon went through a two-hour practice session in a driving blizzard. The sun favored Hamilton with its presence on Monday, while a heavy rain drove the Maroon squad into the gym for the rest of their workout yesterday. Hauser allowed his players to keep on their hooded jackets and sheepskins for the line scrimmage and passing drill today, ordering them to uncover only for a snappy signal drill and a brief defense scrimmage against the yearlings, who were using Syracuse plays.

The intense cold forced the Maroon eleven to work hard in order to keep warm, and the men ran through their plays with plenty of snap. The return of all the injured regulars to the line-up has put new hope into the student body, resulting in a huge rally tonight. That the game Saturday will be witnessed by the largest crowd ever assembled in Archbold Stadium was made certain today by the announcement that few tickets remain unsold, and these only for the bleacher seats erected for this contest.

Garfunkel Three-Cushion Victor.

Sam Garfunkel defeated James Maturo in the Eastern States three-cushion billiard championship tournament at Kreuter's last night by 40 to 21 in forty-eight innings. Garfunkel's high run was 5 and Maturo's 3.

SYRACUSE COACHES RIP VARSITY LINE

Mentors Stage Annual Battle on Field of Snow and Show Regulars a Few Tricks.

SECRET PRACTICE IS HELD

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The annual scrimmage between the coaches team and the varsity featured the practice at Syracuse today. A steady snowfall which set in last night covered the gridiron with a white blanket, but could not interfere with Pete Reynolds's plans for the final scrimmage before the Colgate game.

Joe Bach, line coach, former Notre Dame tackle, played a tackle. Bill Fivaz, Orange centre of 1924, played another tackle. Bob Wittman of the ineligibles played a guard, with Roy Martineau, 235-pound freshman line coach, playing the other guard. The other positions on the line were filled by scrubs, while Roy Simmons, backfield coach, and Orange quarterback and captain in 1924, played halfback, with Tommy Manning, an ineligible, and Baysinger behind the line.

The scrimmage lasted only about fifteen minutes, but it was long enough for Bach and Martineau to show the varsity linemen a few tricks. Martineau, who played five years of pro football with the Buffalo All-Americans and the Rochester Jeffs, tore through the varsity many times, but the varsity did succeed in making a few gains, thanks to some plunging by Ray Barbuti.

The practice was held in the strictest secrecy, but it was announced later that the scrubs, armed with Colgate plays, had it out with the varsity for more than an hour. Charlie Cook, who has an injured knee, was absent from the field. It was reported that Captain Vic Hanson called the signals on offense, playing in the backfield on attack and at end on defense, with Lawton Fontaine as his alternate.

Leghen Beats Duby in Cue Game.

From Britain to Brokaw!

$65 to $90

OVERCOATS, made at Tottenham Court Road, London. Slip-ons and double-breasteds. Very big, much bigger than American coats. Wider across the shoulders. About an inch longer. Roomier all the way through. So thoroughly British that after you've worn one of these coats for an hour, you're apt to start talking with an English accent.

Brown mixtures predominate. A generous sprinkling of blue grays. Grays with reddish overplaids. Browns plaided with black.

If you're looking for a coat that's warm, that's handsome, that will wear well and that's a bit different from the ordinary—hail a taxi and tell the driver to go to

SESIT TAKES PART IN COLUMBIA DRILL

Plays Only Ten Minutes, but Seems in Top Form for the Penn Game.

MADDEN MAKES TOUCHDOWN

Captain Hits Line for Eight Yards and the Only Score of Strenuous Practice Session.

A strenuous practice session was in order for the Columbia squad at Baker Field yesterday in preparation for the Penn game at Philadelphia Saturday. The feature of the session was a twenty-minute scrimmage between the first two elevens, with Captain Bill Madden scoring the only touchdown.

Mike Sesit, vsteran halfback, played about ten minutes in the scrimmage and appeared to be in good condition, so that it is likely he will start in Saturday's game. Sesit was unable to play against the William and Mary team here last week because of an injured shoulder. Madden scored the only touchdown on an 8-yard line plunge.

Team A lined up with Furey and Brady, ends; Kerrigan and Reynolds, tackle; Cuneo and Adler, guards; French, centre; Kaplan, quarterback; Madden and Sesit, halfbacks, and Rieger, fullback. Later in the scrimmage Art Hyde went in for Brady, Norris for Rieger and Green for Sesit.

The line-up of Team B was Glenn and K. Williams, ends; Cornell and Davenport, tackles; Shaw and Alkoff, guards; Lambart, centre; Kumpf, quarterback; Matthews and Green, halfbacks, and Farrell, fullback.

The first part of the practice period was taken up with drills in fundamentals, a line scrimmage and work on the machines. Coach Charley Crowley also sent the back field through drills in kicking and tackling, and the backs also ran through their assignments with a skeleton line-up. Following this the junior varsity opposed Team A in a one-hour dummy scrimmage, the jayvees using Pennsylvania plays, with the regulars on the defense.

A scrimmage is scheduled for today's workout, which will be the last session at Baker Field before the squad leaves for Philadelphia tomorrow morning.

M. I. T. SOCCER TEAM CONQUERED BY ARMY

Rallies in Last Five Minutes of Game, Scoring Twice, but Cadets Win, 3 to 2.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Army won a closely fought soccer game from Massachusetts Institute of Technology here today, 3 to 2. The Cadets had a lead of 3 to 0 when Tech's attack quickened in the last five minutes of the game, and Cline booted two goals for his team.

Browning and Glasgow stood out in Army's play, while Cline and Kwok starred for Tech.

The line-up:

ARMY (3).		M. I. T. (2).
Lueberman	G.	Sparre
Briggs	R.B.	Kwok
Smith	L.B.	McDowell
Wiley	R.H.	Badger
Sawyer	L.H.	Coolidge

Tate	O.R.	Enger
Alexander	I.R.	Ventura
Kirkpatrick	C.	Sacco
Persse	I.L.	Silverstein
Brownlog	O.L.	Marquez

Goals—Kirkpatrick (2), Cline (2), Browning.

Referee—Hollywood. Time of halves—40 minutes.

RUTGERS TRIES OUT PASSES

Squad Has First Practice of Week in Preparation for Lehigh.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 10.—Rutgers today received its first workout on Neilson Field this week in preparation for the game with Lehigh at Bethlehem on Saturday. After a two-day rest, following the Lafayette game, Coach Wallace sent his regulars through a long signal drill.

All of the varsity players were in uniform with the exception of Al Brown, varsity centre, who has a shoulder injury. The overhead game received much attention and this feature probably will be the main feature of the Scarlet attack on Saturday.

LEHIGH HAS LONG DRILL.

Many Shifts in Line Cause Wendell to Order Hard Scrimmage.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 10.—Long after darkness settled over Taylor Stadium this evening Coach Percy Wendell was sending his Lehigh charges through scrimmage in preparation for the Rutgers game here on Saturday. The drastic changes in the line had made it imperative that a long scrimmage be held.

The varsity backfield with Hayes, Hand, Simes and Zahnow worked to good advantage. On the line today were Jack Lentz, a centre and back, at end; Jack Wilson, a tackle and end, at guard, and Cresswell and Kirkpatrick, second-string men, at the tackle positions.

P. S. A. L. HOCKEY DATES SET.

8 High Schools to Compete in Tourney Starting Nov. 26.

Play in the Public Schools Athletic League's high school's hockey championship tournament will get under way on Nov. 26, according to the schedule released yesterday by the P. S. A. L.'s Hockey Committee. Games in the tournament will be conducted on Monday and Friday evening each week in the Brooklyn Ice Palace. Eight schools have nominated teams for the title race, one more than last year, when Jamaica H. S. won the title.

The schedule follows:

Nov. 26, New Utrecht vs. James Monroe; Stuyvesant vs. De Witt Clinton; 29, Morris vs. Jamaica; Boys' vs. Erasmus Hall.

Dec. 3, New Utrecht vs. Morris; Stuyvesant vs. James Monroe; 6, Boys' vs. De Witt Clinton; Erasmus Hall vs. Jamaica; 10, New Utrecht vs. Boys'; Stuyvesant vs. Morris; 13, Erasmus Hall vs. De Witt Clinton; Jamaica vs. James Monroe; 17, New Utrecht vs. De Witt Clinton; Stuyvesant vs. Jamaica; Morris vs. Erasmus Hall; Boys' vs. James Monroe.

Jan. 3, New Utrecht vs. Jamaica; Stuyvesant vs. Erasmus Hall; 7, Morris vs. Boys'; De Witt Clinton vs. James Monroe. 10, New Utrecht vs. Erasmus Hall; Boys' vs. Stuyvesant; 14, Morris vs. James Monroe; Jamaica vs. De Witt Clinton; 17, New Utrecht vs. Stuyvesant; Morris vs. De Witt Clinton; 21, Boys' vs. Jamaica; Erasmus Hall vs. James Monroe.

Columbia Forwards Request For More Penn Game Tickets

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—Columbia is displaying even more enthusiasm than usual over its game with Pennsylvania at Franklin Field Saturday and has written for more seats for the contest, which will mark the resumption of gridiron rivalry between the two universities after a year's lapse. The New York squad during its stay here will be quartered at the Manufacturers' Country Club, it was learned today.

The Columbia Student Board chartered a special train last week to carry Lion rooters to Philadelphia for the game. The special will leave Pennsylvania Station at 9:45 Saturday morning, arriving in West Philadelphia at noon. Four thousand Columbia adherents are expected to make the trip by train and auto.

PAUL SCULL BACK WITH PENN SQUAD

Injured Halfback Is Likely to Face Columbia—Douglass Stars in Scrimmage.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—After being out of uniform since the Penn State game last Saturday, Halfback Paul Scull appeared on Franklin Field today and engaged in a light workout. Trainer Lawson Robertson said he thought Scull would be ready to face Columbia. Scull was told to take things easy and merely jogged around the field and tried one or two drop kicks.

The team was back on Franklin Field again, the varsity line and a patched-up back field scrimmaging against Pos Miller's scrubs. Mulligan, Atlantic City boy, was at quarterback, although Paul Murphy, regular field general, followed the team and called the plays. Douglass, Pine and Fields were also in the back field. Douglass got loose for one sensational run of 65 yards for a touchdown and made several more good gains.

Charley Rogers and Al Wascolonis were used in the scrimmage for about five minutes. Rogers showed some of his real speed by getting loose for a run of 25 yards, and just before retiring to the side lines streaked 20 yards. Wascolonis's shoulder is still sore, but he will be in shape by Saturday to battle against Coach Crowley's team.

Before the scrimmage wound up Carroll, Freeman and Thompson also received a chance to perform in the back field. The scrubs had a hard time holding the varsity back all afternoon.

N. Y. U. OVERCOMES FUMBLING IN DRILL

SHOWING PLEASES MEEHAN

Coach Expects Opposition Saturday From Davis and Elkins, but Will Use Many Substitutes.

Chick Meehan, coach of the New York University football team, drove his men through a scrimmage at Ohio Field yesterday afternoon that was almost as long as a regulation game. The squad's sure handling of the pigskin was in marked contrast to the fumbling in its recent games.

Roberts, Strong, Briante and Connor hucked and plunged their way through the scrub line again and again without losing the ball. They were thrown hard and often and tackled roughly, but not a fumble did they make.

The showing pleased the Violet coach, as he feels that the Davis and Elkins game Saturday at Ohio Field is no set-up despite the fact that the New York University team figures to win easily. No effort was made at scoring on the second team in the scrimmage, but many touchdowns could have been tallied had Meehan let the men carry the ball to the goal line.

It is likely that many Violet substitutes will see service Saturday and all got a workout yesterday. Ashton and Cestari, who are candidates for the berth now held by Losa, alternated with him at left end as varsity players. Neither is likely to displace Losa despite their good work.

Just before the scrimmage Kenneth Strong, whose field goals won the Carnegie Tech game for New York University last Saturday, went through a fifteen-minute kicking session. He kicked field goals from varying distances up to the forty-yard mark and from varying angles. Strong also got away some long punts.

DAVIS AND ELKINS READY.

Coach Henderson Gives Squad Final Practice as Snow Flies.

Special to The New York Times.

ELKINS, W. Va., Nov. 10.—The Davis and Elkins College squad staged its final practice today before the New York University game Saturday. Coach Henderson gave his men two hours of stiff work on a muddy field and the air was full of flying snow as the Senators ran through their paces.

The squad on the second invasion of the East will consist of but seventeen players, who will leave for New York Thursday afternoon. Cain, star end, will not be able to play.

MANHATTAN LOSES 3 MEN.

Draddy, Martin and Whelan Out of Football Line-Up for Season.

Trainer Jim Mumbo has counted out three of the Manhattan College football players for the rest of the season. The most serious loss is Vincent Draddy, the big freshman fullback. Draddy had several thigh ligaments torn in the City College game, and is confined to bed for at least a week at his home.

Ed Martin, the 193-pound tackle, has not recovered from a bad shoulder bruise received in the St. Lawrence University encounter, and has been excused for the games with Upsala and St. Thomas Colleges. The other candidate out for the year is Tom Whelan, substitute end, whose left ankle was wrenched in practice. Whelan is a basketball player, and will rest before starting at the court game.

Three Pairs of Brothers May Start in Jasper Line-Up.

NEVERS'S ESKIMOS FACE GIANTS TODAY

St. John's Prep and Geo. Washington High to Battle Before Pro Game at Polo Grounds.

Ernie Nevers, who is compared with Jim Thorpe, Red Grange and other leading stars in intercollegiate football, will lead his Duluth Eskimos, one of the strong contenders for the National League football title, into action against the Giants at the Polo Grounds this afternoon in the main part of a football double-header. St. John's Prep of Brooklyn and the George Washington High School will open the Armistice Day program at 1 o'clock, the professional game starting at 2:30 o'clock.

Other stars with the Eskimos are Kelly and G. Rooney of Northwestern and Fitzgibbons of Creighton, who will carry out the ground gaining assignment, along with Nevers. The line possesses plenty of weight and power to test the Giant forwards to the limit.

Hinky Haines, Walter Koppisch, Jack McBride and Texas Grigg will comprise the starting backfield for the Alexander-coached eleven. Carney will be at end and Joe Alexander will return to his regular centre berth. The other line positions will probably see the regulars start. All service men in uniform will be the guests of President Tim Mara of the Giants.

The probable line-up:

	Former N. Y. Giants	College.	Former Duluth College.	Eskimos.
Voss	(Detroit)	L.E.	(St. T.)	Murray
Siegel	(Ohio.)	L.T.	(Creigh.)	Keisling

FORDHAM RESERVES ENGAGE FRESHMEN

Team Which Is to See Much Action Against C. C. N. Y. Scrimmages 90 Minutes.

SCORES FIVE TOUCHDOWNS

Baut and Geruso Each Count Twice —First Eleven Except Bruce Has Signal Rehearsal.

The Fordham second team, which Head Coach Frank Gargan intends to use in a good part of the game with City College on Saturday, engaged the freshman eleven in scrimmage for an hour and a half at Fordham Field yesterday. The regulars watched the action and later they were sent through a brisk rehearsal of signals. Team A will start the Lavender game and the length of their stay in the game will depend on their showing.

The seconds scored five touchdowns and blanked the yearlings. Frank Baut scored twice, once on a run of 60 yards after intercepting a pass, and later on a dash of 40 yards through tackle. Al Geruso also made two touchdowns, making a pretty run of 70 yards through a broken field on an intercepted forward and crashing through the line for another. Bob McClennon, playing at quarter, scored the other touchdown on a reverse play.

In the second team line-up, the one which is to play against C. C. N. Y., were Denny Roberts and Bill Ferral ends; Cannella and Hermonat, tackles; Hutchins and Wenzel, guards; O'Connor, centre; McClennon, quarterback; Geruso and Visco at the halves and Baut at fullback. Gargan and Ward will devote most of their time to this team during the rest of the week.

With the exception of Burt Bruce, the first team was intact in the signal drill. Although he played in the Holy Cross game and will be ready for Saturday, Bruce is still troubled with a broken nose which he received in the New York University game. He is using a protective guard, which covers his face and protects the injury.

Zev Graham was at quarter with Jim Delany and Johnny Grip, who has earned a regular position after his performance against Holy Cross, and Jim Zakszewski at full. Ralph Buckley was again in uniform, but did not participate in any of the strenuous work.

Miller to Coach Lafayette Five.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 10.—Michael A. Miller of Allentown has been appointed coach of the Lafayette College basketball team, according to announcement today. Before coming to Lafayette last year Miller was freshman basketball coach at New York University for four years.

C. C. N. Y. ELEVEN HOLDS ITS FINAL SCRIMMAGE

Parker Drills Varsity on Defense Against Fordham Plays in Long Workout.

Coach Harold J. Parker for the first time this week had all his regulars at practice last night under the floodlights of the Lewisohn Stadium and began active preparations for the Fordham game by holding a long scrimmage, which was the final one of the year. The Lavender first eleven was kept on the defensive most of the drill, with the reserves employing Fordham formations.

A keen fight is being waged for the left tackle position between Johnny Elterich, who has played there most of the year, and Irv Packer, who occupied the berth last year, but who reported late this year because of scholastic difficulties and found his berth gone. Packer played through most of the Haverford contest and will probably start against the Maroon.

The Lavender mentor devoted much of the drill with his booters, who showed up against Haverford. Donstein and Cohen were both added to the squad and will probably do some of the kicking against the Violet. Willie Halpern and Jack Goldstein placement kicks, from the forty-five and forty-yard lines and will have a chance Saturday, for Parker hopes that the contest may be a close one and three points from the toe may much toward determining the outcome.

Artie Rosenbluth was in uniform last night, but took no part in the scrimmage. His leg is responding to treatment, however, and Trainer Dorman announced that he will be ready for Fordham.

ST. JOHN'S SCORES TWICE

Weiss and Salemi Cross Line in Scrimmage With Junior Varsity.

Ray Lynch, coach of St. John's football squad, took advantage of yesterday's fine weather to send his charges through a long, hard workout. The entire squad reported, and as a result Lynch was able to shift his varsity line and back field to test several new plays to be used in the coming game with Canisius.

In the game played with the junior varsity, the regulars did not fare as well as usual, scoring only two touchdowns against the second string men. Captain Weiss was accountable for one of these as a result of several line plunges, and Salemi registered the other, running 30 yards through the scrub defense.

SQUASH RALLY WINS FOR HARVARD CLUB

Met. Class A Champions Take Last Four Matches to Beat N. Y. A. C., 4-3.

YALE CLUB IS UPSET VICTIM

Handicapped by Absence of Stars, It Bows to Columbia Club, 4-3—Loughman Beats Morgan.

STANDING OF THE TEAMS.

	W.	L.		W.	L.
Harvard	2	0	N. Y. A. C.	1	1
Crescent	1	0	Princeton	1	1
Columbia	1	1	Yale	0	1

Harvard and Princeton each won one match by default from Montclair A. C., which has withdrawn from the A league.

By ALLISON DANZIG.

Playing without its national champion, Fillmore Hyde, the Harvard Club, metropolitan Class A squash tennis champion, came within a point of losing the first match it has played in the tournament this season, last night when it defeated the New York A. C. on the Winged Foot courts, 4 to 3.

Trailing at 0—3 in matches, after Hewitt Morgan, their No. 2 man, had bowed to Frank Loughman in a stunning upset, the Crimson representatives were forced to take the remaining four matches to pull out the series.

It was a trying night for the favored teams, for the Yale Club bowed to the Columbia Club on the latter's courts by the same score. The Elis also were handicapped by the absence of their No. 1 man, Tom Coward, who has not yet returned from Europe.

In addition, they were without the services of Auguste Cordier and Douglas Bomeisler and were forced to use two Class B men in their line-up. Nevertheless it was a splendid victory for Columbia after its defeat by the Crescent Club last week. Princeton won the third match last night by default from the Montclair A. C., which has dropped out of the Class A league.

Morgan's Defeat Upset.

The defeat of Morgan by Loughman was as big a surprise as the triumph of George Davidson of the Crescents over Rowland Haines last week. Morgan ranks fourth, while Loughman is in the third ten. Morgan did not get a game, losing at 15—6, 15—11. A week ago Loughman gave Harold Mixsell of Princeton a stiff battle, and last night he played in the same form except that he did not make quite as many errors.

The terrific hitting of the New York A. C. player gave him the victory. Morgan was caught yards away from the ball repeatedly. In justice to him it must be said that he has played very little squash this season and this was his first match.

Loughman not only had pace, but he also used a soft ball effectively and found the corners for nick shots frequently. In both games Morgan got away to a good start, leading at 5—0 in each, only to falter as Loughman bombarded the walls with unfailing control.

J. C. Rochester came within a point of bringing victory to the New York A. C. when he carried C. F. Fuller to 8—15, 15—6, 17—16 in the next to the last match and it was not until the final engagement that Harvard clinched the series when Morris Phinney defeated S. R. Greene in three games at 15—6, 15—18, 15—9.

Rand Beats George.

William Rand, former national champion, knew too much for Rowland George in the No. 3 match and won at 15—11, 15—6. Murray Taylor was the other Harvard winner, while G. B. Woods, who substituted for Hyde, gave a splendid account of himself in carrying R. E. Hughes to 18—17, 15—13 in the lead-off match.

The feature at the Columbia Club was the decisiveness of the victory of Haines over Otis L. Guernsey of Yale and the triumph of Frank Kidde of Columbia over Francis Day. Haines set a terrific pace and won at 15—5, 15—7. Kidde, one of the oldest players in tournament play, triumphed over Day in three hard-fought games at 13—8, 6—15, 15—12. J. D. Kennedy won by a single point in the third game from C. J. MacGuire and that point decided the match in Columbia's favor.

The summaries:

Harvard Club 4, N. Y. A. C. 3.

R. E. Hughes, N. Y. A. C., defeated G. B. Woods, 18—17, 15—13; Frank Loughman, N. Y. A. C., defeated Hewitt Morgan, 15—6, 15—11; William Rand Jr., Harvard, defeated Rowland H. George, 15—11, 15—6; R. M. Kirkland, N. Y. A. C., defeated G. B. Rushmore, 14—16, 15—11, 15—3; Murray Taylor, Harvard, defeated W. E. Chambers, 15—11, 15—4; Morris Phinney, Harvard, defeated S. R. Greene, 15—6, 15—18, 15—9; C. F. Fuller, Harvard, defeated J. C. Rochester, 8—15, 15—6, 17—16.

Columbia U. C. 4, Yale Club 3.

Rowland B. Haines, Columbia, defeated Otis L. Guernsey, 15—5, 15—7; Frank Kidde, Columbia, defeated Francis Day, 13—8, 6—15, 15—12; H. Victor Crawford, Yale, defeated W. Murray Lee, 15—12, 15—3; J. D. Kennedy, Columbia, defeated Charles J. MacGuire, 15—9, 9—15, 18—17; Arthur Goldburg, Yale, defeated J. L. Kerbeck, 6—15, 15—1, 18—14; R. H. Reutter, Columbia, defeated L. H. Sonneborn, 7—15, 15—6, 15—12; W. B. Schielter, Yale, defeated J. N. Cole, 18—14, 15—11.

MANY CITIES SEEKING A. A. U. TITLE FIXTURES

Record Number of Applications to Be Considered During Baltimore Convention.

Greater interest in amateur athletic competitions throughout the country is reflected in the number of applications for championship fixtures which will be considered at the Amateur Athletic Union's convention in Baltimore, commencing on Saturday. It was revealed at local A. A. U. headquarters yesterday that a record number of applications have already been submitted to the organization for title fixtures in track and field, men's and women's swimming, marathon running, boxing, wrestling, basketball and handball.

New Orleans is in the field for the national junior and senior outdoor track and field championships, which includes also the relay title races and the decathlon. The Crescent City submitted its bid a year ago when the event was awarded to Philadelphia because of the Sesquicentennial celebration. Another bidder for this fixture is Chicago, a city which held the championships three years ago.

The indoor track and field championships are being sought by this city and Detroit. Other applications received are: Men's outdoor swimming, New York and Honolulu; men's indoor swimming, Chicago and San Francisco; women's outdoor swimming, Los Angeles, New York and Honolulu; women's indoor swimming, Buffalo, San Francisco and St. Augustine, Fla.; boxing, Boston; junior boxing, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Cleveland, Grand Rapids, Mich.; wrestling, Iowa State College; basketball, Kansas City; handball, New Orleans, Los Angeles and San Francisco; marathon, Philadelphia, Boston and Detroit.

Holland and Germany Seen As Coming Golf Contenders

Oakley of Green Section on Tour of Continent Found, However, That There Was Less Interest in France, Switzerland and Italy—Tourney for Christmas Seals.

By WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON.

Doubt as to the generally held theory that Holland was the birthplace of golf is expressed by Russell A. Oakley, Chairman of the United States Golf Association Green Section. Mr. Oakley spent three months on the Continent this Spring and, relating his experiences in the Bulletin of the Green Section, states:

"It is claimed by some that Holland is the birthplace of golf. If this were the case one would expect to find it the national game there. It is far from that as yet. And somehow I have a notion that the Dutch had as much to do with planting the seed that produced modern golf as the American Indian with the creation of baseball."

Mr. Oakley found, however, that there is considerable interest manifested in the game by the Dutch, who already have some real fans among them. He also predicts that within a short time not only Holland but Germany will make a real showing in golf. He is less hopeful over the game's ascendancy in France, Switzerland and Italy. The French, he declares, have had plenty of opportunity to demonstrate their keenness for the royal and ancient pastime, but they have not yet arrived at a stage where the game is the passion that it is in America and in Britain.

One of the things that baffled Mr. Oakley was the lack of any real enthusiasm for the game on the part of Italians. Realizing the manner in which Italian-Americans have taken hold here, many of them rating among the topnotchers, Mr. Oakley was prepared to find a great wave of enthusiasm in Italy, but whatever interest there is in the game there at the present time is due, not to the natives, but to the foreign population, he states.

The organization of which Mr. Oakley is head is continually at work seeking to better golf conditions. One of the enemies of golf against which the Green Section is battling is Brown Patch. During the past year experiments have been carried on at the Arlington Turf Garden to determine the efficiency of various chemicals in controlling the disease, particularly the small type. Numerous chemicals were used in the tests, including copper sulfate, copper stearate, bordeaux mixture, formaldehyde, sulfur, phenol, superkalimat, sodium fluosilicate, potassium permanganate and various compounds containing mercury. It was found that the outstanding control of the fungus was obtained with the mercuric compounds.

The most promising discovery made was the effectiveness of calomel, one-fifth of a pound of which applied to 1,000 square feet of surface functioned as well as one pound of chlorophenol mercury, which has, until now, been the most effective check. In addition to cutting the cost of treatment, calomel, it has been demonstrated, prolongs protection and is comparatively fool-proof so far as burning the turf is concerned.

A. W. Tillinghast, the golf architect, has planned a tournament to be played at the Seaview Golf Club, Absecon, N. J., on Dec. 8, 9, and 10 to aid the annual Christmas seal drive of the National Tuberculosis Association. One of the requirements for entry in the event, known as the Christmas Seal Golf Tournament, is that all contestants will be required to wear Christmas seal badges, which may be secured for each day's play at one dollar, or for the entire tournament at two dollars. The qualifying round will be played on Wednesday, Dec. 8, provision being made for six sixteens. Prizes will be awarded to the qualifying winner, the winner of the tournament, runner-up and winner of defeated eight, and also the winner, runner-up and defeated eight winners in the other five flights.

Entries may be sent to A. W. Tillinghast, 33 West Forty-second Street, or to the National Tuberculosis Association, 370 Seventh Avenue.

Another promising golf course has reared itself on Long Island. It is the Harbor Hills Country Club, located on the property formerly known as the Middleneck Farm of the late Julius Fleischmann at Port Washington. The property has recently been taken over by the Elmwood Holding Company, of which John J. de Lucca of Long Island City is President; Daniel Frank of Jackson Heights, Vice President, and Daniel Lee of Newark, Treasurer.

The new organization has already made numerous improvements and others, now planned, are aimed at making the club one of the most attractive on the island. Few golf properties are able to boast of the natural advantages of Harbor Hills, which is beautifully located scenically and which has facilities for polo, riding, tennis, skating, tobogganing and skiing as well as golf.

At the present time only nine holes are in operation, but another nine will be thrown open in the Spring, making a 6,500-yard layout available. Austin P. Frawley, who laid out the Scarsdale and Mount Vernon Clubs in Westchester, is in charge of the plans. The club is unique in that there is no initiation fee, the annual charge for membership being $200 or $250 for man and wife.

According to word received from D. Scott Chisholm, Los Angeles golf enthusiast and writer, George Von Elm, who wrested the national amateur golf championship from Bobby Jones at Baltusrol this year, is almost recovered from the injury to his hand and will be ready for action when the Winter events start out that way. Von Elm, it will be recalled, had two of his fingers on his left hand crushed while changing an automobile tire in the middle of the Nevada desert. According to Chisholm, the accident occurred when Von Elm was ninety miles from nowhere and rattlers all around him. For a time it was feared that his golf might be impaired by the injury, for his hand was badly crushed.

Chisholm also states that George Duncan, former British open champion, will arrive in New York on Dec. 7 on his way to the Pacific Coast for the big tournaments to be staged out there and for a series of matches, one of which will be a thirty-six-hole engagement with Harry Cooper. He reports, too, of having breakfasted with Leo Diegel, who is now teaching the young and old of Hollywood how to play the royal and ancient game.

That Neal Fulkerson, who has now changed his allegiance from the Belleclaire Golf and Country Club to the North Hills Golf Club, Douglaston, L. I., is making rapid strides in a golfing way has long been evident, but recently the twenty-year-old star performed a feat that stamps him as something of a wonder. He holed the Belleclaire course in 64 strokes, three strokes below the record. During its existence many stars, including Duncan, Hagen, Sarazen, Barnes and J. H. Taylor, have played Belleclaire, yet none of them has been able to lower the old figure until Fulkerson did it in a match in which he and his father opposed T. C. Cantrell and H. G. Hoffheimer.

LEAGUE SWIM FOES TO MEET ONLY ONCE

Additions to Intercollegiate Association Ranks Make Change Necessary.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—Only one meet between each of the teams in the Intercollegiate Swimming and Water Polo Leagues will be held during the coming season, H. Allen Gosnell, Secretary of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association, announced today.

While the teams have formerly met twice a year, the increase from five to eight full members in the league has necessitated a change in plans. Dartmouth, the Navy and Syracuse have been added to the league, which was formerly composed of Princeton, Yale, Columbia, Pennsylvania and C. C. N. Y. only. Fordham was recently admitted to associate membership.

The Intercollegiate championships will be held in the City College pool this Winter, while Princeton will hold the annual interscholastic championships.

PENN HARRIERS SELECTED.

Robertson to Start 7 Men in Junior National A. A. U. Run Today.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—Coach Lawson Robertson of the University of Pennsylvania track team today selected his team of seven men to take part in the national junior A. A. U. cross-country run here tomorrow. The men picked are Captain William Glenn, C. Russell Payne, T. R. Starratt, E. J. Walsh, W. Pearson, S. Ralph and R. Harris.

Charles Morgan of New York, wearing the United States Army colors, who won the Baltimore-to-Laurel run, is entered, as well as teams from St. Bonaventure College, George Washington University, Meadowbrook and several other local clubs.

MERMAIDS AT N. Y. U. OPEN SEASON DEC. 7

Led by Miss McGary, Violet Will Start Busy Campaign With Meet Against Carroll Club.

Girl swimmers of New York University will engage in their first tank duel of the season on Tuesday, Dec. 7, it was announced yesterday by Miss Ethel McGary, national A. A. U. long-distance champion and captain of the team. The mermaids of the local Carroll Club will provide the opposition on that date.

Meanwhile, in preparation for the open meets, there will be an interclass tournament for the Violet Naiads this month. The initial varsity fixture, and one o fthe most important, will be a clash with Temple College of Philadelphia, tentatively set for Dec. 14. Hunter College will be taken on later in the season, and half a dozen other encounters are in sight.

Prospects for a successful Winter of competition never were so good at N. Y. U. In addition to Miss McGary, there are available Miss Esther Foley, newly crowned national high fancy-diving champion; Miss Mildred Nodine, a star plunger; Miss Ruth Bracker, one of the all-around stars of the Women's Swimming Association, and Miss Patricia Gritzner, a star sprinter. Other promising candidates are the Misses Jennie Rothman, Helen Markowitz, Roberta Lyons, Ruth Alshuler, Helene Wold, Winifred Caterson and Constance Simons.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Decline After Early Strength—Money Easier in Trend, Francs Recover.

The two really significant incidents of yesterday's financial markets were the further downward tendency of money rates, and the recovery by the franc of practically all the previous day's decline. The rate for sixty-day loans was not quotably reduced on actual transactions, but the bid price went under the season's lowest price and the general drift of the market was unmistakable. It is perhaps more noteworthy in that money rates were not easing off at this time last November, but there is very tangible reason for the contrast. In this week of 1925, the fury of Stock Exchange speculation for the rise had reached its climax, and it was on Nov. 9 that the Boston Reserve Bank rate went up. It is a very different position which now confronts the money market.

Yesterday's stock market movement was of slight significance. Prices advanced irregularly in the early trading, then lost all the previous gains and more, closing not much above the lowest. Wall Street ascribed the decline to the fact that the increase in "unfilled steel orders" was less than had been predicted; but it is possible that the explanation was superfluous. The day's changes were not important in themselves, and appeared to represent wholly professional swapping of the shares.

The recovery of the franc was chiefly interesting from the fact that the Chamber of Deputies is about to reconvene and that, in some quarters, an idea had prevailed that the week's earlier reaction in francs was due to belief that the Poincaré program would be obstructed. Yesterday's market did not seem to think so. Yet the position as it stands raises at least one curious and interesting question—Will the Ministry's prestige and parliamentary control be helped or hindered by the recent swift recovery of the franc? The Paris market declared, not long ago, that some such recovery was necessary in order to insure continued legislative success by Poincaré. But an exactly opposite theory has occasionally been suggested, based on the fact that his legislative victories of August were won wholly because of the falling franc and the desperate outlook then existing for the currency.

Wall Street was undoubtedly disappointed over the increase of only 90,152 tons, reported for October by the United States Steel Corporation. Even the steel trade publications had expected 150,000 and Wall Street more. Yesterday's actual figures, however, merely go to confirm the testimony of preceding months, that production and consumption have been adjusted with greater closeness even than they were last year. In October of 1925, orders left on the books at the month-end increased 391,597 tons. But that increase barely brought the total back to the figure reported at the end of the preceding May; there had been 537,000 decrease between May and midsummer. But even the relatively small increase reported for last month leaves the total similarly above that of last Spring; there had been practically no midsummer reduction this year.

The discovery, from the Iron and Steel Institute report of Monday, that October's production of steel was actually the largest turned out in that month of any year on record, was considerably more to the point than the "unfilled-order tonnage." With the microscopic study of variations in trade which has lately grown popular, there has been a growing tendency to lose the larger perspective. Sometimes downward as well as upward fluctuations of industrial activity are purely casual. We shall presently learn of a rapid decrease in weekly railway car loadings, but observers familiar with the course of merchandise distribution, who know that the season's maximum demand is always filled in October, will certainly not argue that serious trade reaction is thereby indicated—unless indeed the shrinkage were to duplicate the year-end story of 1920.

It seems to have become peculiarly difficult of late for watchers of "the trend of trade" to pick their way. Nothing, for instance, would seem more plainly and reasonably to indicate nation-wide reaction in one branch of trade than the decrease which recent months have shown in building construction contracts. Yet yesterday's Bradstreet report for October, classified by districts and cities, shows that, in the majority of the cities, last month's record overtopped 1925 and that, if the decrease in Miami alone were to be eliminated from the comparison, the country as a whole would show an increase.

WEEK OF OCT. 30 SET RECORD FOR FREIGHT

1,216,432 Cars Loaded, Most in American Rail History—Few Transportation Difficulties.

23D MILLION-CAR WEEK

All Goods but Live Stock and Forest Products Have Shared in Freight Rise This Year.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—During the week ended Oct. 30, more cars were loaded with revenue freight than in any one week ever reported, the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association announced today. The total for the week was 1,216,432 cars.

This unprecedented volume of traffic, which since the beginning of the year has surpassed all previous years, is being moved without transportation difficulties, noticeably without car shortage, except in minor instances.

The record week of Oct. 30 was an increase of 6,269 cars over the previous high record established in the week of Oct. 16, when the total was 1,210,163 cars. The highest loading for any one week in each year since 1922, with the highest loading so far this year, follows:

	Cars.
Oct. 24, 1925	999,718
Sept. 25, 1925	1,087,433
Oct. 25, 1924	1,113,035
Aug. 23, 1923	1,124,438

Twenty-third Million-Car Week.

The week of Oct. 30 was the twenty-third week this year that loadings have been in excess of one million cars a week, and brought the total number of cars loaded with revenue freight for the first forty-four weeks this year up to 45,257,913, an increase of 1,827,810 over the corresponding period last year, and 4,100,539 cars over the corresponding period of 1924.

Except for live stock and forest products, which over the cumulative period have shown a slight decrease, this record movement of freight has been due to the increased movement of all commodities, particularly coal, ore, miscellaneous freight, merchandise, less than carload-lot freight, and grain and grain products.

The total for the week of Oct. 30 was an increase of 125,278 cars over the same week last year, and an increase of 143,058 cars over the same week in 1924.

Grain and grain products loading for the week of Oct. 30 totaled 58,042 cars, an increase of 10,478 over the corresponding week last year. Compared with the same week in 1924, it was a decrease of 4,394 cars. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading totaled 37,104 cars, an increase of 7,569 cars over the corresponding week last year.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 455,915 cars, an increase of 39,786 cars over the same period in 1925, and 40,641 cars above the same week in 1924. Coal loading totaled 236,776 cars, an increase of 42,234 cars over the corresponding week in 1925, and 54,527 cars above the same week in 1924.

40,055 Live Stock Cars.

Live stock loading amounted to 40,055 cars, a decrease of 511 under the same week last year, but 570 cars above the week in 1924. In the Western districts alone 31,256 cars were loaded with live stock, five cars below the week in 1925.

Loading of merchandise and less than carload lot freight for the week totaled 276,666 cars, an increase of 6,753 above the same week in 1925 and an increase of 18,794 above the week in 1924. Forest products totaled 72,870 cars, an increase of 2,776 above the same week last year and 2,363 above two years ago.

All districts except the Northwestern and Central Western reported increases over the week before in the total loading of all commodities.

Car loadings of freight for the week ended Oct. 30 compare as follows with recent weeks of this and previous years:

	1926.	1925.	1924.	1923.
Oct. 16	1,210,163	1,106,114	1,102,358	1,073,085
Oct. 9	1,184,862	1,106,046	1,098,956	1,085,938
Sep. 25	1,182,940	1,121,025	1,087,954	1,060,436

W. C. ROSEN BEFORE I. C. C.

Banker Testifies to Financing for Southwestern Merger.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—Details of the financing of the railroad consolidation involving the Kansas City Southern, the Missouri-Kansas-Texas and the St. Louis Southwestern were put before the Interstate Commerce Commission today by Walter C. Rosen, a director of the Kansas City Southern and a partner in a banking house in New York participating in the enterprise.

The Kansas City Southern proposed to acquire stock control of the M. K. T. and the latter to acquire similar control of the St. Louis Southwestern. Control over the other lines involved would be assured the Kansas City Southern by the operation, Mr. Rosen testified. The project had been taken up tentatively in 1924 by L. F. Loree and his associates and the necessary stock purchases now were complete or tentatively complete. The banking firms interested, he said, had taken no profit. They had made thorough studies of the railroads' earnings, and as a matter of business the stocks, at the prices paid, all represented good investments.

The Kansas City Southern, although it would own a majority of the M. K. T. stock, probably would offer an exchange of its own securities for outstanding stock of the purchased railroad to clear up virtually all of the M. K. T. issue, Mr. Rosen said.

NATIONAL BANK CHARTERS.

Application Made for Rochelle Park (N. J.) Institution.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The Controller of the Currency has received an application to organize the National Bank, Rochelle Park, N. J., with capital of $25,000, through Henry Schnakenberg, 152 Rochelle Avenue, Rochelle Park. A charter has been issued to the Tioga National Bank, Philadelphia, Pa., capital $200,000.

Voluntary liquidation has been entered into by the First National Bank, Warren, Ill., capital $50,000, absorbed by State Bank of Warren. The First National Bank, Monessen, Pa., capital $50,000, and National Bank and Trust Company, Monessen, capital $150,000, have consolidated under the charter of First National Bank, Monessen, and under title of First National Bank and Truet Company, Monessen, with capital stock $160,000.

DELAY IS FORESEEN IN HILL ROADS UNION

Transportation Act Probably Will Have to Be Amended First, Says Elliott

Commenting on the prediction hy Arthur Curtiss James that the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington railroads would be merged, Howard Elliott, Chairman of the Northern Pacific, said yesterday that "a workable plan for consolidation has not yet been developed, and probably some amendment of the Transportation act will he necessary before anything definite can he accomplished."

Directors and officers of the company, Mr. Elliott said, have discussed the question of consolidation for six years, or ever since the Transportation act of 1920 was passed.

"Personally," he declared, "I have always heen in favor of a greater unification of these three roads, believing that it will make of them a railroad system of greater service to the growing West and Northwest than at present, and will in time produce savings very heipful to the area and to the owners of the securities.

"No one can say today what the position of the Interstate Commerce Commission will he, nor how rapidly any greater unification than exists today can he made effective."

The qnestion of commission approval, in the opinion of railroad men, involves the old conflict of public and private intereet. Officials of the St. Paul and their bankers would undouhtedly object to heing forced to compete with as powerful an aggregation as the three Hill roade combined, and might suggest, as did H. E. Byram shortly before the St. Paul went into receivership, that the St. Paul he linked with either the Great Northern or Northern Pacific.

This would disrupt both banking and private interests, and, of course, would be seriously opposed hy the Hill roade. It is for this reason that closer unification of the three roads has heen hanging fire for six years and would probably hang over for some time even if the Transportation act were amended.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 10 (AP).—There is 'nothing new" in the discussion of possible consolidation of the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific and the Burlington railways, in the opinion of rail circles here today.

ANOTHER GAIN IN GOLD BY GERMAN REICHSBANK

20,921,000 Marks Added to Reserve in Week—Note Issues Down 141,059,000.

BERLIN, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Reichsbank report as of Nov. 6 shows the following changes, in Reichsmarks:

Gold coin and bullion	Increated	20,921,000
Reserve in foreign currencies	decreased	25,000
Bills of exchange and cheques	decreased	67,034,000
Silver and other coins	increased	1,390,000
Notes on other banks	increased	9,539,000
Advances	decreased	32,013,000
Investments	increased	52,000
Other assets	increased	79,063,000
Notes in circulation	decreased	141,059,000
Other maturing obligations	increased	149,267,000
Other liabilities	increased	4,541,000

Total gold holdings are now 1,736,976,000 reichsmarks.

Following is the Reichshank's gold reserve for a oeries of recent weeks, compared with the two preceding years, in thousands of marks:

	1926.	1925.	1924.
Nov. 6	1,736,976	1,296,897	680,288
Oct. 30	1,716,055	1,293,868	684,221
Oct. 23	1,679,241	1,294,718	630,502
Oct. 15	1,652,617	1,304,541	613,022
Oct. 7	1,616,308	1,174,661	594,685
	1924.	1923.	1922.

The addition to the bank's gold reserve since the low point of April, 1924, amounts now to 1,295,161,000 gold marks, or $308,248,318. When the war began, the bank's gold holdings were 1,253,199,000 marke. They were increased to 2,537,780,000 gold marks on Dec. 30, 1916, the high point in its history.

Following is the Reichsbank's outstanding note circulation, in reichsmark denominations:

Nov. 6	3,184,773,000	2,677,644,000
Oct. 30	3,325,834,000	2,802,884,000
Oct. 23	2,824,529,000	2,595,209,000
Oct. 7	3,139,320,000	2,607,784,000

Last week's note circulation was the highest reached since the war. Before the return to the gold standard the bank's circulation was stated on Oct. 31, 1924, at 1,780,930,000,000,000 of the old and depreciated marks, but the great depreciation of the paper mark at that time made the gold value of the circulation then outstanding less than the present maximum.

When the war began the Reichsbank's note circulation stood at 2,405,580,000 gold marks.

NEW RULINGS ON EXCHANGES

The Committee on Arrangements of the New York Curh Exchange has ruled that contracts for Bon Ami common A stock must be settled on Nov. 12 by delivery of temporary certificates; contracts for Department of Antioquia, Republic of Colombia, 20-year external 7s of 1945, must be settled on Nov. 12 by delivery of definitive bonds numhered 2,951 to 5,700 for $1,000 bonds and numbered from 251 to 800 for $500 bonds.

The Curh has removed from the unlisted trading privileges United Oil certificatee of deposit for capital stock, and Republic of Finland external loan 6½s of 1956.

The New York Stock Exchange has admitted to its list interim receipts for $15,000,000 of the Republic of Finland external loan 6½s of 1956, and permanent bonds of the Angio-Chilean Consolidate Nitrate Corporation 20-year 7 per cent. sinking fund debenture loan, due on Nov. 1, 1945. The temporary bonds of the latter issue have been stricken from the list.

A Correction.

Through a typographical error in THE TIMES's reference yesterday to the Stock Exchange figures of hrokers' loans, the etatement that "The members of the etaff of the Businese Conduct Committee responsible for the erroneoue tahulation will not he disciplined," was printed to read "The memhers of the Business Conduct Committee responsible for the erroneous tahulation will not be disciplined." THE TIMES had already pointed out, in its article on the euhject, that the error in last week's brokers' loans figures was made honestly in the calculation hy membere of the etatistical staff of the committee.

Byram on St. Paul's Prospects.

H. S. Byram, receiver of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, said yesterday the road's gross earnings in 1926 might fall elightly below 1925, but that net operating income from present indications would be about $2,000,000 above that of 1925.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

Early price movements on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday were largely upward, but the statement of unfilled orders, released by the United States Steel Corporation at noon, revealed so unexpectedly small an increase that the stock of this company hroke rather badly. Other issues declined in response to the weakness of this issue. Steel at its closing point of 146½ was 1½ below the closing quotation of the previous day. General Motors, which has been moving recently contrary to Steel, was also weak yesterday, closing at a net decline of 1⅝ points. Otner active snares which were from 2 to nearly 5 points lower at the end of the day's trading were Allied Chemical, American Smelting, Atchison, Mack Trucks, Goodyear Tire preferred and Youngstown Sheet & Tuhe. Stocks showing sharp gaine at the close were Commercial Solvents B, Continental Baking A, Greene Cananea, Otis Elevator and United States Ruhber.

Seeking "Soft Spots."

It was pointed out yesterday that one of the market's characteristics at the moment, which keeps the Stock Exchange from heing a dull and uninteresting place, is the fact that a very determined little group of hear operators is combing the list every day for vulnerable spots. The information of these bears is of the best sort, and usually their sudden hammering of a stock brings acceptable results. This was evident yesterday in one or two of motion-picture stocks and in a few of the epecialties. The tactics being followed at present include the element of surprise. It is not unusual to see 5,000 or 10,000 shares of one of these vulnerable stocks thrown onto the market without a moment's notice.

Demand for First Grade Securities.

There was admitted yesterday to be a fine line of demarcation, particularly in the bond department, in inquiries between first-grade and second-grade securities. The first-grade bonds have all the best of it, despite the fact that the rate of return on most of those which have been issued recently is less than 6 per cent. In practically every case the issues have been oversubscribed and the bonds have gone to a premium. On second-grade securities the inquiry is not extensive and as a matter of fact it has taken a good deal of work to move them at all in the last month or so and this despite the fact that some of them yield up to 6.90 to 7.20 per cent. One hanker who is familiar with the situation said yesterday that he could not remember a time when such vast amounts of capital had been seeking investment as at the present time, with the owners of this capital demanding absolutely prime securities.

Money Market and Sterling.

Aside from its importance as an index to financial and commercial affairs, the present easiness in the money market is receiving attention because of its possible bearing on the sterling-exchange rate. With sterling only a fraction above the gold shipping point, there has been talk recently of possible losses of British gold to New York, even though the pressure of seasonal purchases now is apparently easing up. The New York money market has been the centre of interest in this regard, and a few weeks ago, when firmer rates were being predicted generally, it was thought the Bank of England might have to advance its discount rate in order to prevent the withdrawal of American balances from London. In the present circumstances this is no longer feared. Bids for time money at 4½ per cent. were reported yesterday, the first time since last Spring that the local market has approached that level. Most bids, however, were at 4⅝ per cent., and little business is being transacted at less than 4¾ per cent.

Northern Pacific "Unification."

No one can say, according to the Chairman of the Northern Pacific, how rapidly a greater unification than that which exists today between the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington can be made effective. The question has been hanging fire ever since the passage of the Transportation act in 1920, and the fly in the ointment appears to be the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul. The proposed merger would place three strong roads together, leaving a weak one to shift for itself. The St. Paul's officials would naturally oppose euch a scheme, and the Interstate Commerce Commissioners would undonbtedly lend an attentive ear to their arguments as they did when H. E. Byram expressed similar views before them two years ago.

Report on General Electric.

It was said yesterday in utility circles that the report expected to be made soon by the Federal Trade Commission on the extent to which the General Electric Company may he involved in organizations generating and transmitting electrical power should provide a high spot in the industry for the current year. The relations between the General Electric Company and puhlic utilities came into prominence more than a year ago, when, following rumors of action hy the Trade Commission, General Electric distributed its holdings in the Electric Bond and Share Company. Since then it would seem that General Electric has refrained from entering into utility enterprises involving interstate relations. In New York State, however, General Electric, without crossing State lines, has become a party to a project for giant power generation on the St. Lawrence. Whether this new development will be discussed in the expected report of the Federal Trade Commission was a suhject of conjecture in utility circles.

Unit of Trading in Cotton.

There is a very definite sentiment in the cotton industry for the reduction in the unit of trading from 100 to 50 bales. This movement has been approved by the New Orleans Cotton Futures Brokers' Association and will be adopted soon hy that exchange. It also is the unit of tradi: in the Chicago market. Many cotton brokers in this city believe there would be wider interest in cotton trading here ehould this reduction be put into effect on the New York Exchange.

With One Less Working Day.

The remarkahle increases in railroad gross earnings for the last week of October, such as the $1,105,000 reported by the Canadian Pacific and the $496,246 by the Great Northern, are even more unusual when the fact is considered that this week had one less working day than the corresponding week of last year. In computing gross earnings by weeks, the railroads begin on the first of the month, chopping off seven days for each week until the last one, then giving it the nine or ten days that remain. This year the last week period had two Sundays and in 1925 only one. November will, therefore benefit proportionately and should show a handsome increase over November, 1925.

MONEY.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 10, 1926.

Following Tuesday's decline in the Stock Exchange call loan rate to 4⅛ per cent., after it had ruled at 4½ since Oct. 19, another instance of the easy condition of the money market was revealed in the day's trading, when best houses bid 4½ per cent. for all maturity money, lowest since last Spring. However, no business was reported under 4¾, at which figure a moderate amount was loaned for 60-90 and 120 days. Day by day money continued freely offered at 4¼ per cent., but demand was light, dealers reporting a large number of loans being paid off. Both commercial paper and acceptances were firm at unchanged discounts.

This New Book Explains SECOND MORTGAGE Industry

"SHARING Second Mortgage Profits With Investors" is the title of an instructive book compiled by the United States Bond & Mortgage Corporation, the largest second mortgage institution in America and the first to really standardize this lucrative field.

Its development of an entirely new plan of safety operation, which has resulted in such marked success, will be of great interest to the judicious and foresighted investor.

The book clearly shows how a policy of careful selection of small amortized second mortgages on individual homes of the better type has secured the Company continued and consistent progress, without the loss of a single dollar, either by foreclosure or default. The Company has never accepted mortgages on business buildings, groups of houses, vacant lands, garages, hotels or theatres. The average mortgage purchase is less than $4,000.

The management of the Corporation has had many years of experience in mortgage and banking affairs. Directors in more than forty banks and financial institutions appear on the Company's Board of Directors and Appraisal Committees.

Because of these exacting standards the Company has found it necessary to increase its capital stock in order to take care of the large number of satisfactory mortgages being offered constantly. This capital stock is now on sale.

To any interested person, irrespective of how little he has to invest, the Company will gladly send this interesting book, which graphically describes how the Corporation operates and how it shares its profits with all its stockholders. M'FADDEN ATTACKS HULL'S BANK PLAN

SCHEME FUTILE, HE SAYS

Chairman of Banking Committee Addresses Board of Trade and Transportation.

Louis T. McFadden, Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House of Representatives and author of the McFadden National Bank bill, yesterday at a luncheon of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation at 41 Park Row attacked the amendment to that measure offered by Representative Morton C. Hull of Illinois. He said it was academic and wrong in principle and would not restrict branch banking as Mr. Hull intended it should do. He urged the members of the board to voice their opposition to it in letters to their Congressmen.

Mr. McFadden explained that his bill was designed to give national banks in the Federal Reserve System the same scope that State banks have and said that recently many large national banks, to preserve their business and furnish the service demanded by customers, had surrendered their national charters and become State banks. Unless the National Bank act was changed to enable national banks to give service equal to that of State banks, he said, the Federal Rerve System would be endangered.

After outlining the provisions of his bill, designed to admit both national and State banks to the Federal Reserve System on an equality of operating conditions, Mr. McFadden said he believed his measure could be enacted without delay when Congress meets in December if the Senate and House conferees could agree on a disposition of the Hull amendment, which, he said, had provoked more discussion than any other banking question in recent years.

The Hull amendment, Mr. McFadden said, would grant limited branch-making privileges to national banks in twenty-two States which now authorize branch banking, but would automatically forever bar national banks in the twenty-six States from the same privileges.

"Those who favor the Hull amendment are actuated by a desire to check the extension of branch banking into the twenty-six States that do not authorize it at this time," said Mr. McFadden. "They do not believe that even limited home city branch banking should be permitted. Their theory is that if the Hull amendment becomes a law national banks in States that do not authorize branch banking will not unite with State banks to induce State legislatures to pass branch banking laws, but, on the contrary, will oppose branch-banking laws on the ground that if they cannot have branches they will not help State banks to get them."

Mr. McFadden said the House agreed to the Hull amendment because the American Bankers' Association at its convention in Chicago in 1924 recommended it. The association, however, reversed its position at its meeting in Los Angeles this year, he added. The Hull amendment was rejected by the Senate, and there was a deadlock now.

Mr. McFadden said that if the Hull amendment were passed either one or both of two things might happen:

"First, State banks, finding their national bank competitors are helpless with respect to branch banking, would work for the passage of branch banking laws for the competitive advantage it would give them.

"Second, national banks, being denied relief by Congress, would quickly become State banks in order to take advantage of the State branch banking law."

"The strengthening of the national banking system and the renewal of the charters of the Federal Reserve banks are of infinitely greater importance to the country's welfare," Mr. McFadden said finally, "than the setting up by Congress of the doubtful expedient proposed by the Hull amendment for the prevention of branch banking."

DECREASE IN PROFITS FOR WILLYS-OVERLAND

Due to Price Reductions, Says President—Third Quarter's Estimated Net $1,928,369.

The Willys-Overland Company and its subsidiaries report a net profit of $2,229,329 for the third quarter after ordinary taxes, depreciation, interest, &c., but before Federal taxes. The net was $7,348,126 in the preceding quarter and $3,133,299 in the September quarter last year. After allowing for Federal taxes, estimated on a basis of 13½ per cent., the indicated profit for the quarter was $1,928,369, equal, after preferred dividends, to 63 cents a share, earned on $2,527,051 common shares.

In the preceding quarter the indicated profit was $6,356,128, or $2.39 a share on the common, and in the third quarter of 1925 it was $2,769,470, or $1.05 a share, earned on $2,264,644 common shares.

For the first nine months of this year the profit before Federal taxes reached $10,811,280, as compared with $13,638,881 in the like period of last year. After estimated Federal taxes the profit stood at $9,351,737, equal to $3.32 a share on the common, as against $11,865,826, or $4.72 a share in the first nine months of 1925.

In connection with the report, John N. Willys, President of the company, said:

"The decline in net during the third quarter is attributable to price reductions of September involving smaller profit per car and the usual dealer rebate. The volume of business during Fall months has been encouraging and has justified the price reduction policies."

New Power Rates in Holyoke.

HOLYOKE, Mass., Nov. 10 (AP).—The Holyoke Water Power Company announced today an increased rate of $4 per mill power on surplus water after Jan. 1, and a discount of 20 per cent. on quarterly bills for this surplus water for customers purchasing electricity from the company. City officials regard this is a move to draw users of electricity away from the municipal electric department.

Bank Defers Adding to Stock.

Stockholders of the Bank of America, at a special meeting yesterday, adjourned indefinitely without taking any action on a proposal to increase the capital stock from $6,500,000 to $8,000,000. The meeting was called following a decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, which upheld the voting trust through which the bank is controlled.

BANKERS OF SUFFOLK HOLD FALL MEETING

F. L. Kline Presides at County Association's Session at Country Club.

Special to The New York Times.

BAY SHORE, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The Fall meeting of the Suffolk County Bankers Association was held at the Southward Ho Country Club this afternoon, and with only a couple of exceptions every banking institution of the county was represented.

After a luncheon the session was called to order by Francis L. Kline, President of the association. He spoke of the prosperous banking conditions and other developments in the county and introduced William H. Kniffen Jr., Chairman of Group Seven, which includes the banks on Long Island. Mr. Kniffen advised the bankers to go into the public schools and talk on practical thrift. He also advocated addressing business men's associations, luncheon clubs and other community societies along sound business lines. P. H. Woodward, General Passenger Agent of the Long Island Railroad Company, asked the bankers to join the Long Island Chamber of Commerce, which, he said, was doing great work for the development of Long Island.

Dr. N. L. Hoopingarner, Professor of Psychology in New York University, gave an address on personality and the training of employes through a close relationship. This, he said, made the success of modern industry. He urged that employers give to capable employes the knowledge which they themselves had acquired in the course of years of experience.

Other speakers were Dr. J. Carl Schmuck, President of the Nassau County Bankers Association; Edward J. Gallien, Secretary of the New York State Bankers Association, and Dr. Frank T. DeLano, President of the Rockville Centre National Bank.

It was agreed to omit the midwinter session in January.

B. F. Schlesinger Sales Rise.

Sales of B. F. Schlesinger & Sons, Inc., for October aggregated $1,744,000, as compared with $1,681,000 in October, 1925, or an increase of 3.7 per cent. For the ten months ended Oct. 31 sales were $12,428,000, against $11,247,000 last year, a gain of 10.5 per cent.

German Bank Orders 32 Machines.

The National Cash Register Company announced yesterday that an order had been received from the Hanover (Germany) Bank for thirty-two of the company's new type banking machines, to cost approximately $116,625. This is the largest single order the company has ever received from a bank, according to J. H. Barringer, Vice President and General Manager.

Barco Concession Restored.

A request of the Gulf Company for revocation of the cancellation of the Barco oil concession has been favorably received by the Colombian Government, private dispatches reported yesterday, and formal agreements will be followed by an intensive development campaign by the Gulf interests, which are associated with the Carib Syndicate, Ltd., and the American Maracaibo Company.

SEVERAL BIG ISSUES OF BONDS ARE NEAR

$10,000,000 at 6 Per Cent. Will Be Offered for Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.

$15,000,000 BERLIN POWER

Negotiations for $18,000,000 Loan to Utility Company in Mexico Reported Under Way.

Two important loans—one domestic and the other foreign—are being negotiated by New York bankers, and are expected to reach the market shortly.

It was learned that a syndicate headed by the Bankers Trust Company will offer $10,000,000 of 6 per cent. twenty-year debenture bonds remaining from an issue of $50,000,000 authorized by the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company. Proceeds of the issue will be used to redeem $10,000,000 of Series C 7 per cent. gold bonds due 1951 and callable at 107½, issued by the Steel and Tube Company of America and assumed by Youngstown Sheet and Tube.

Speyer & Co. is negotiating for a $15,000,000 loan to the City of Berlin Electric Company, which is expected to bear a 6½ per cent. interest coupon, the price of which has not yet been determined. The electric company is owned by the municipality of Berlin. Proceeds of the new bond issue will be used for extensions and general improvements to the system. This is one of the largest German issues to be placed in this market in months.

Recent application of the Savannah River Electric Power Company for a Federal license to build a power plant on the Savannah River near Augusta, Ga., is expected to be followed by a $40,000,000 bond offering. When the application was made, officials of the Southeastern Power and Light Company, of which Savannah River Electric is a subsidiary, said that the power project would be financed by the parent company through small issues of securities made over a considerable period.

Discussion over the visit of a party of Northern bankers to the Southeastern properties resulted yesterday in persons close to the situation admitting that a $40,000,000 offering was being considered. The time for the offering is not decided, it was said.

In furtherance of large Mexican irrigation and hydroelectric projects, the Mexican Light and Power Company, Ltd., which is controlled by the Mexico Tramways Company, is understood to be planning the flotation of $18,000,000 of its bonds here. This development follows the acquisition by a group headed by Alfred Lowenstein of Belgium, of control in the parent company. Hitherto Canadian interests have controlled both companies.

Proceeds of the financing under consideration would be used largely to construct a dam across the Lerma River in the State of Michoacan, Mexico, and to install electric generating equipment at the site. The dam would impound 500,000,000 cubic meters of water, which would irrigate 124,000 acres of land. Power from the plant would be distributed through a superpower system to Mexico City and other points. Press dispatches from Mexico City last month announced that a contract providing for this construction had been signed by Mexican Government and Mexican Light and Power.

SUES TO BAR TICKER FROM CONSOLIDATED

Stock Exchange Brings Action for Injunction Against Western Union.

The Consolidated Stock Exchange, object of many external and internal legal dissensions, was attacked again yesterday when papers were filed in the Supreme Court, formally instituting the previously announced suit of the New York Stock Exchange to enjoin the Western Union Telegraph Company from furnishing stock ticker service to the Consolidated. It seeks also to restrain the Consolidated from receiving the quotations.

A motion for a temporary injunction will be made at Special Term of the court on Dec. 6. Papers in the case have already been served on Philip Evans, President of the Consolidated. The suit is brought for the New York Stock Exchange by its President, Edward H. H. Simmons, through its counsel, Carter, Ledyard & Milburn, of 54 Wall Street.

The complaint filed with the motion papers alleges that the Western Union has refused to revoke its three tickers in the new premises of the Consolidated at 14-16 Pearl Street, where they were moved after the old quarters of the Exchange at Broad and Beaver Streets were sold. The Western Union had been instructed by the Stock Exchange to discontinue service with the Consolidated. The telegraph company, however, declared it preferred to have a court ruling first, since the Consolidated claimed its possession of the tickers was protected by an injunction issued many years ago.

The Stock Exchange maintains it had a 1914 contract with the Western Union whereby the latter agreed to supply stock quotations only to persons approved by the Exchange. Under a 1921 contract, the Western Union agreed to terminate service ten days after the Exchange gave notice that it disapproved any one.

ARGUES ON FELT CO. VERDICT

Lawyer Supports $10,500,000 Decision in Willett-Sears Case.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—Beginning his argument in support of a $10,500,000 verdict for the plaintiffs in the Willett-Sears case for the loss of the American Felt Company and the Daniel Green Felt Shoe Company to Robert F. Herrick, F. S. Mosely & Co. and Kidder, Peabody & Co., brokers, Sherman L. Whipple declared before the Supreme Court today that Mr. Herrick conceived the plan of getting the stock, which in 1918, according to Willett, was worth $11,000,000, for $625,000.

"Herrick's position as a member of the Executive Committee, a director or counsel for banks, and his close association with bank officials and financiers, gave him the opportunity fully to inform himself regarding almost any business enterprise that interested him," asserted Mr. Whipple.

"The power of the banks," he declared, "was greater than the power of the Supreme Court, for the Court is governed by the Constitution and can't take any property away on mere whim; but the banks have the power to do it."

The verdict, Mr. Whipple said, took nothing from the defendants that was rightfully theirs; it took at most only what they took from the plaintiffs and nothing that they had built up by their own industry. He said the property still remained with those who the jury found were wrongdoers.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

Small Turnover Brings Few Changes—Franc Dips After Early Rally—Lira Off.

Business in the foreign exchange market yesterday was light in volume and fluctuations limited to a narrow range in all except that for the French franc, which reversed its trend of Tuesday and shot forward 7½ points to 3.24 cents. Liquidation near the close canceled part of this gain at a final of 3.22 cents. That the local market is taking its direction in the franc from abroad was again clearly indicated when covering purchases in London and Paris before our opening, and the source of the preceding day's offerings, brought an overnight rally which was followed up here.

Italian lire appeared to run with the franc and for a time sold at 4.20 cents, a small gain which was later tapered to 4.16½, at the close. Sterling was firm and unchanged at $4.84⅝. Scandinavians gave up some of Tuesday's rally, and the German mark relapsed to its previous low of 23.73 cents. Holland, Swiss and Spanish were higher.

Chinese currencies were easier, although the yen managed to hold steady. Brazilian milreis were offered down ⅛ cent, other South Americans unchanged.

STEEL ORDERS RISE IS ONLY 90,152 TONS

3,683,661 TONS ON BOOKS

An increase of 90,152 tons in the unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation, as of Oct. 30, was revealed in the tonnage statement made public by the corporation at noon yesterday. A total of 3,683,661 tons was on the books at the end of last month, compared with 3,593,509 at the end of September.

This increase was substantially less than that which had been predicted in Wall Street. The forecasts had indicated an increase in unfilled tonnage of 200,000 or more. Wall Street was surprised and disappointed.

United States Steel common, which has been advancing steadily for some time, broke rather sharply yesterday, and the financial district was prompt to attribute the downturn to the unexpectedly small increase in the tonnage figures. The stock closed the day at 146½ for a net loss of 1½ points. Trading was fairly heavy. Professional traders undoubtedly took advantage of the tonnage statement to renew pressure.

	1926.	1925.	1924.
September	3,593,509	3,717,297	3,473,780
August	3,542,335	3,512,806	3,289,577
July	3,602,522	3,539,467	3,187,072
June	3,478,641	3,710,458	3,262,505
May	3,649,250	4,049,800	3,628,089
April	3,867,976	4,446,568	4,208,447
March	4,379,935	4,863,564	4,782,807
February	4,616,822	5,284,771	4,912,901
January	4,882,739	5,037,323	4,798,429
	1925.	1924.	1923.
December	5,033,364	4,816,676	4,445,330
November	4,581,780	4,031,969	4,368,584

October was the second successive month to show an increase in tonnage figures. Last month was the first time since the end of last year that two months in succession reported an increase in unfilled orders.

Shipments from plants of the Steel Corporation in October were estimated at approximately 1,050,000 tons, as contrasted with 1,100,000 tons each in September and August.

It was pointed out yesterday that the total of orders now on the books is the largest in the last six months. Allowing for cancellations of 30,000 to 40,000 tons, incoming business placed on the books in October is calculated to have been from 1,170,000 to 1,180,000 tons. New orders in September were estimated at about 1,100,000 tons, while in August they amounted to 1,050,000 tons.

OCTOBER INGOT RECORD.

Steel Production in Month Totaled 4,092,458 Tons.

Although it had been reported that steel output had fallen off slightly in the last week, official figures as to production of steel ingot show that October's total was the largest on record at 4,092,458 tons. The last week was marked by several orders for various products for first-quarter delivery, and as a whole the industry continues on a basis that has lost little, if anything, in favorable features.

"It is pointed out that October is the month in which producers strive for records," Iron Age reports, "and this year was no exception, in spite of the fact that in all products, except rails, bookings were less last month than in September.

"An event of the week is the opening of books by a large sheet and tin plate company for first-quarter sheet orders and first-half tin plate orders at unchanged prices. Rail mills have had good rollings scheduled for this month and some are already at work on orders for Winter laying."

"Pig iron sales closed for first-quarter delivery exceeded 200,000 tons in the past week," The Iron Trade Review says, "with the strength of the buying movement apparently not spent. Considerable first-quarter tonnage would normally be placed at this time, but rising prices in iron, reflecting recent advances in fuel, proved a spur. Efforts of some consumers to buy beyond first quarter have been repulsed by producers.

"Statistically the present market continues on a sound footing. Steel ingot production in October proves to have set a new high monthly record with a total of 4,092,548 tons, against 3,888,814 tons in October, 1925. Production in the first ten months of 1926 totaled 39,939,398 tons, against 36,266,920 in the corresponding period of 1925."

Pacific Coast Earns $100,468.

For the third quarter of this year the Pacific Coast Company reports a net profit of $100,468, after expenses, as compared with $58,995 in the preceding quarter, and $135,289 in the September quarter of 1925. Net earnings for the first nine months of 1926 aggregated $262,909, after expenses, as against $348,093 in the previous year.

BANK SHARES GAIN OVER THE COUNTER

Several Issues Reach New High Ground for Current Move—Good Tone in Group.

GENERAL ADVANCE IS MADE

Public Utilities, Industrials and Tobacco Stocks Move Upward in Day's Trading.

The over-the-counter market yesterday was featured by impressive buying in the bank stocks group, where several issues scored substantial gains to new high ground on the current move. There was a better tone to the utility section, although these shares showed little variation in prices. Industrial shares generally maintained a firm tone and several issues registered moderate improvement.

Public National, Bank of Commerce, Empire Trust and New York Trust were the featured performers in the bank group, and a decidedly better tone prevailed in Liberty National, Chase, Chatham and Phenix, Guaranty Trust, United States Trust, First National, National City, Equitable and Park.

Fractional improvement appeared in Alabama Power preferred, Pennsylvania Power & Light preferred, Kansas Gas & Electric preferred and Nebraska Power preferred. The rest of the group firmed up considerably.

Bucyrus led the industrial group with a late gain of 10 points, and advances of 2 and 3 points were noted for Chestnut Smith preferred, Woodward Iron, Casein Company of America, United States Finishing and Merck & Co. preferred.

In the tobacco group MacAndrews and Forbes continued strong and was up a point. Universal Leaf and J. S. Young preferred were slightly higher.

CUT IN TIRE PRICES IN VIEW.

Manufacturers Said to Be About to Allow Extra Discounts.

A report that leading rubber manufacturers in the Akron, Ohio, district are planning reductions in tire prices in the form of extra discounts to dealers on certain lines and sizes of cases and inner tubes was current yesterday.

No information was forthcoming as to the size or amounts of the possible discounts, but it was said the manufacturers were returning to the policy of Spring dating, originally made effective in 1924 and partly eliminated last year. Members of the Rubber Association of America have agreed not to return to the policy until Nov. 15.

News of the projected cut in prices caused little surprise in local rubber circles, as such action has been discussed for weeks. As a result of the recent buying policy of dealers, tire inventories have been multiplying in the hands of manufacturers. At the end of last August they were carrying 9,900,000 tires, compared with 7,500,000 a year earlier. Inventories reached their peak in April last, totaling 12,700,000 tires.

TESTIMONY IS ALL IN AT RAIL PAY HEARING

Summing Up of Arguments by Both Sides Is Set for Tomorrow Morning.

BOARD THEN WILL DECIDE

Law Requires Both Carriers and Employes to Accept Ruling—89,000 Workers Involved.

The hearing of testimony in the railroad wage arbitration proceedings came to an end yesterday, when representatives of the 89,000 trainmen and conductors on Eastern roads called their last witnesses in rebuttal. The arbitrators then adjourned until 2 o'clock tomorrow morning, when they will meet in Rumford Hall, 50 East Forty-first Street, to hear the summing up of the case for and against a 15 to 20 per cent. wage increase. John G. Walber, Vice President of the New York Central Lines, will sum up for the carriers. He has been allowed two and one-half hours to present his case. L. E. Sheppard, President of the Order of Railway Conductors, and William N. Doak, Vice President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, will sum up for the employes, dividing four and one-half hours which have been allotted to them.

Hearings in the case have been going on at the Engineering Societies Building, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street, for about two weeks. They constitute the first arbitration proceedings held under the Watson-Parker act, which created a Board of Mediation to be appointed by the President, and then a Board of Arbitration to include representatives of the railroads, the employes and the public.

Little new testimony was brought out by the trainmen's witnesses yesterday, most of them being called to amplify or explain previous testimony. R. A. Knopf, Chairman of the General Committee of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen on the Pennsylvania Lines West, complained that baggagemen were being required to handle increased amounts of mail and parcel post, but were not receiving increased compensation.

This was in line with the general argument of the employes that business had increased but that wages had not. Mr. Knopf asserted that on the Grand Rapids Division of the Pennsylvania Lines baggagemen handled as many as 469 sacks of mail and 215 pieces of parcel post on a single trip. These conditions, Mr. Knopf said, had been somewhat improved within recent months, but were still bad on other lines and other divisions.

Once more the trainmen, through Mr. Doak, complained that their pay was not commensurate with the pay received in other unionized trades and industries, such as the building trades. The employes have used as an argument the fact that earnings on the railroads have increased but the employes have not been permitted to share in them.

Stock Exchange Seat Brings $160,000, a New High Record

The price of membership in the New York Stock Exchange has advanced $18,000 in the last six days, according to reports yesterday, telling of tentative arrangements for the sale of a seat at $160,000. As the details of the sale have not yet been officially confirmed the names of the seller and buyer were not made public.

The new price is a high record for all time, the highest previous mark having been $155,000 on June 17, 1926. The last previous sale was for $142,000 on Nov. 4. It was also reported that negotiations were in progress for the sale of another seat at $158,000.

The New York Cotton Exchange membership held by the estate of Frank A. Kimball has been sold to Paul Schwart, for another, for $26,000. The last previous sale was at $27,000.

FOUR STOCKS TO PAY EXTRA DIVIDENDS

U. S. Gypsum Declares Stock Payment of 35 Per Cent. on Its Common.

Payment of an extra and a stock dividend by one company, extras by three other concerns, a decrease in the rate of one company and three monthly dividends by another featured the dividend announcements yesterday.

The United States Gypsum Company announced a stock dividend of 35 per cent. in common and an extra of $1.40 in cash on the common, in addition to the regular quarterly disbursements of 40 cents on the common and 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stocks. In each of the two previous quarters the company paid $1 extra on the common stock, and on Dec. 15, 1925, a stock dividend of 15 per cent. on the common was paid.

An extra dividend of $1 was declared by the Northern Pipe Line Company, in addition to the regular semi-annual payment of $3 a share on the capital stock. Six months ago an extra of the same amount was announced.

The Eastman Kodak Company declared the usual extra distribution of 75 cents on the common stock, in addition to the regular quarterly payments of $1.25 on common and $1.50 on the preferred.

In addition to three regular monthly dividends of 25 cents each, William Wrigley Jr. declared an extra disbursement of 50 cents.

The Great Northern Iron Ore Properties declared a dividend of 75 cents a share on the certificates of beneficial interest. This makes a total of $1.50 to be paid thus far this year, as compared with $1.75 up to the same date in 1925.

Three regular monthly dividends of 25 cents each on common stock were announced by The Fair, Chicago. The regular quarterly distribution of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred also was declared.

Meeting in Detroit yesterday, the directors of the Packard Motor Car Company declared in advance the monthly dividend of 2 per cent. on common stock for December, January and February.

HARVESTER IN DEAL WITH CAR & FOUNDRY

Heads of Corporations Confer on Connected Interests in Motor Field.

WORKING PLAN IS EXPECTED

Conferences between William H. Woodin, President of the American Car and Foundry Company, and Alexander Legge, President of the International Harvester Company, were regarded in financial circles yesterday as foreshadowing an agreement between these two companies for the distribution of certain of their products. While interests close to the companies denied that a merger of the American Car and Foundry Motors Company, a subsidiary of the American Car and Foundry, and the motor business of the Harvester Company was in prospect, it was admitted that some kind of close arrangement between them was pending.

Mr. Woodin, who returned yesterday from Detroit, where the conferences were held, had no announcement to make regarding the supposed plans, but reports from that city and Chicago indicated that a working arrangement is about to be made. The first report from Detroit was that International Harvester desired to purchase Hall-Scott motors from American Car and Foundry for its own vehicles. This, however, was not credited here, although International Harvester has gone in heavily recently for the manufacture of trucks and buses.

Wall Street expects that whatever agreement is made will have an important bearing on the manufacturing operations of the two organizations, as well as on their systems of distribution.

PARIS RETAIL PRICES RISE.

French Worried by Drop in Buying Power of Franc at Home.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—While the wholesale index for October is 767, against 804 in September and 785 in August, the retail index in the Paris area has continued to rise and is now 624, against 590 in September and 587 in August. The wholesale index largely concerns big business and exporting. Retail prices concern the common people, whether wage earners, small rentiers or pensioners.

Throughout the whole of France retail prices follow approximately those of Paris, so it may be said that the public is fairly alarmed over the decreasing domestic purchasing value of the franc in a month when the foreign value of the currency was rising. The Government isn't inclined to take coercive measures against retailers, who are burdened with the greatest degree of responsibility in public opinion. Various export and import restrictions have shown but little practical usefulness.

In the current month vegetables, bread and a few other products have slightly decreased, while shoes, clothing and other necessities are still rising. This has resulted in the franc reaching a greater worth abroad than at home, for while the dollar is now 6.2 times its pre-war value the retail index is 6.24.

The French retail index is about 104 against about 140 in the United States and 160 in England, showing France still is a cheaper country in which to live than its neighbors, but arousing fears lest French prices rise to the American level. This would necessitate increased wages in public and private enterprises and would be a great danger to the French export trade, in which the majority relies on cheaper production costs than nations competing with them.

Alpine Montan Steel's Output.

Production of the Alpine Montan Steel Corporation in October totaled 219,000 tons of various products, including coal raw iron ore, pig iron, steel ingots, rolled iron and workshop manufactures. Production for the ten months to Oct. 31, 1926 aggregated 2,529,280 tons. Shipments of coal, pig iron and rolled iron aggregated 79,900 tons in October, and 614,100 tons in the t months.

FIGURES 30 YEARS FOR WAR RECOVERY

National Foreign Trade Body Makes Survey of Commerce of Seventy Nations.

$210,000,000,000 SHORTAGE

Export Business, However, Growing Now at Rate of 10 Per Cent a Year Instead of 6½.

In a document labeled "An Armistice Day Accounting of Foreign Trade Recovery From the War," the National Foreign Trade Council asserts that it will require thirty years for world trade to get back to par and that the World War has left a shortage of $210,000,000,000 from the normal growth of the world's merchandise exports.

The pamphlet, which deals with the foreign trade of seventy nations, states that complete figures for 1925 for those nations, which do more than 90 per cent. of the world's export trade, show that for the first time since the World War international exports are again at par. In 1913 the seventy nations had an export trade valued at $19,426,000,000 and last year the figure stood at $19,950,000,000, after reducing the $29,970,000,000 worth of trade actually reported to the 1913 buying power of the dollar. Since 1913 it has taken twelve years to bring a 2¾ per cent. actual increase in the value of exports circulating in the world.

From 1900 to 1913, it is shown, the annual growth in exports was 6½ per cent., and had this growth continued the world last year would have been doing $41,500,000,000 worth of export trade at 1913 values instead of the figure reported. At 1925 values it would have been doing $62,100,000,000 worth, instead of less than $30,000,000,000. The accumulated shortages of the twelve years from 1913 to the present amount to $210,000,000,000 at 1925 gold values, the statement points out, which is ten times the national debt of the United States, or $140,000,000,000 at 1913 gold values. Foreign trade has not filled by half the gap between the normal extent to which it would have satisfied the growing demand for human wants, had there been no war, and the extent to which it has actually met them.

"World trade has now accelerated its pace to fill this gap," the document reads. "Instead of a 6½ per cent. increase, world exports have been gaining more than 10 per cent. annually for the past three years. But the world will have to increase its exports at this rate yearly for more than thirty years to make up for the ground lost during the World War. Even the United States, which gained almost 32 per cent. in real exports since 1913, and has made the greatest gain of all nations in the volume of trade acquired, is still more than $2,000,000,000 behind the export trade it would have had if the pre-war gain had been uninterrupted.

"The moral of these facts is that American foreign traders still have an immense service to the world ahead of them in helping to make up the shortage of necessary goods, which the artificial war-deflation of world needs has caused.

WEATHER FAVORS PICKING OF COTTON

Conditions Good for Drying of Corn Most of the Week, Help Wheat Seeding.

The weekly weather report of the Department of Agriculture, released yesterday at Washington, reads in part as follows:

"The cool weather in the eastern cotton belt checked the opening of bolls in the northern district and there was some local killing of late bolls, but in general the weather was favorable for the crop and for harvest, and picking made satisfactory progress in most sections.

"Picking is well along in most northern districts, but much cotton is still out in the extreme northwestern portions of the belt and considerable is unpicked in other northern sections. Some open cotton in Texas was blown out by high winds on the 8th. Late bolls are opening nicely in the central-northern portions of the belt.

"Good drying weather for corn prevailed during most of the week, but there was rain or snow over much of the belt near the close. In the upper Mississippi Valley and from the Ohio Valley eastward, much of the crop is still too damp to crib, but this work progressed favorably in the Great Plains area. In Iowa there was interruption to husking because of snow or rain, both at the beginning of the week and near its close, and corn in that State is generally too damp to crib, with considerable moulding reported.

"Early sown wheat is generally up to a good stand, but late seeded is small in the eastern half of the belt, where seeding of the intended acreage has been prevented because of unfavorable weather during the sowing season. The week's weather was generally favorable for the crop and seeding was still progressing in the lower Great Plains area. Wheat has a generally good stand in the eastern half of Kansas, but is mostly poor in the west because of insufficient moisture, while it is too dry in parts of the central Rocky Mountain area and locally in the Northwest.

CRUDE RUBBER PRICES FIRM.

Near Months Make Gains, Distant Positions Drop Slightly.

A firm undertone was noticeable in the trading in crude rubber futures in the Rubber Exchange of New York yesterday, the list closing 10 points down to 20 points higher. An appreciable number of buying orders was overhanging the market, traders said, but sellers apparently were reluctant to meet the bids. The turnover amounted to 90 lots, in five positions.

The London market was steady, with business in small volume. Spots, November and December were unchanged, while the January-March and April-June quarters improved ⅛d. each.

Range of prices for the active deliveries traded in here, follow:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. Close
November	41.40	41.30	41.50	41.30
December	41.90	41.80	41.80	41.70
January	42.10	42.00	42.10	42.10
February	42.30	42.20	42.20	42.30
March	42.50	42.50	42.50	42.50

Other months closed: April, 42.70; May, 42.90; June, 43.10; July, 43.20; August, 43.40; September, 43.60; October, 43.80. Spots were quoted at 42.00 nominal.

LIVE STOCK AT CHICAGO.

Hog Market Loses an Early Lead—Little Change in Others.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Hogs were strong to 10 cents higher early, but after urgent orders had been filled prices declined rapidly, and the finish was 15@25 cents lower, with the top of $12.50 and the day's average of $12.05, both off 15 cents from Tuesday.

The bulk of early sales were $12.10@12.50, with a liberal number later at $11.90@12. The bulk of packing sows sold at $10.25@11.

Packers bought 14,700 and shippers 6,500, with 8,000 carried over. Receipts were 19,000, with 32,000 estimated to get here tomorrow.

Fat lambs sold at former prices for choice, while other kinds were weaker. Top Westerners sold at $14.25 and natives at $14.10, with the bulk of the latter at $13.50@13.75. The sheep market was steady, with main sales at $5.50@6.50. Receipts were 10,000.

Cattle prices showed little change, with a top of $12.25 on yearlings and $10.75 on heavy steers, with the bulk of beef steers taken at $8.50@11.25. Receipts were 12,000.

LIVE STOCK AND MEATS.

Ludlum Steel Earns 46 Cents.

The Ludlum Steel Corporation reports a net income for the third quarter of this year of $62,928, after depreciation, interest, Federal taxes, etc., which is equal to 46 cents a share earned on 135,000 shares of no par stock. This compares with $79,349, or 58 cents a share in the preceding quarter, and $100,611, or 74 cents a share in the third quarter of last year. For the first nine months of this year Ludlum's profit was $242,748, after the same charges, equal to $1.79 a share, as against $297,296, or $2.20 a share in the like period of last year.

Zinc Production in October.

Zinc stocks at the end of October totaled 15,909 tons, as compared with 15,699 tons at the beginning of the month, the American Zinc Institute reports. Production in October amounted to 54,979 tons, and shipments 54,769 tons, of which 50,609 tons were for domestic consumers, and 4,160 tons for export.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Guaranty Trust Company has been appointed transfer agent for the preferred stock, 30,000 shares; and common stock, 60,000 shares, of the North American Water Works Corporation, and registrar for the $6 preferred stock of the Adirondack Power & Light Corp., 10,000 shares.

The American-Exchange-Pacific Bank has been appointed trustee under indenture dated Nov. 1, covering an issue of $12,000,000 twelve-year convertible 5½ per cent sinking fund gold debentures, due Nov. 1, 1938, of the California Petroleum Corporation.

The Oregon & California Railroad Company announces that under the provisions of the mortgage, dated July 1, 1887, a number of its first mortgage bonds have been drawn for redemption and cancellation from the proceeds of lands sold under the provisions of that mortgage.

Nehemiah Friedman & Co., Inc., has issued a bulletin dealing with the conditions of some of the largest joint stock land banks.

Hale, Waters & Co. has issued a tabulated analysis of thirty-three water company bonds.

The Tennessee Electric Power Company has issued a booklet entitled "Facts About Tennessee."

Edwin Atkinson Bayles has been elected a director of the City of New York Insurance Company.

Arthur W. Thompson, President of the United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia, has been elected a director of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, to succeed Walton Clark, who resigned.

Newman Brothers & Worms have opened an office at 16 East Fifty-third Street, under management of Claude S. Newman.

Ernest V. Connolly, who was recently elected President of the Central National Bank, was guest of honor at a luncheon yesterday at the Republican Club.

The Chicago & Northwestern Railway plans to equip 120 suburban passenger cars, to be ordered soon, with roller bearings, G. W. Hand, assistant to the President, announced yesterday.

J. D. Jordan has been made manager of the New York branch of the Yellow Truck & Coach Manufacturing Company. He will supervise Yellow Cab and Hertz Drivurself sales, as well as G. M. C. Truck sales.

R. E. Dougherty yesterday was advanced from the position of engineering assistant to R. E. Starbuck, Vice President of the New York Central Railroad, to engineering assistant to P. E. Crowley, President. He lives in White Plains, where he is President of the Board of Education.

CARRIERS AND OTHERS ORDERING EQUIPMENT

Locomotives, Cars and Steel Rails Included—Generator Sets for Navy Gunboats.

A large variety of equipment orders was reported yesterday coming from railroads, the United States Navy, municipalities and industrial concerns.

The American Locomotive Company has received orders for four 4-6-4 type locomotives, weighing 310,000 pounds each, from the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, and for ten Mikado type engines, weighing 312,000 pounds each, from the Père Marquette Railway.

The International Great Northern Railway has ordered 22,000 tons of steel rails from the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company and 2,000 tons from the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company.

Among car orders placed were: Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh, 500 steel hoppers, with the American Car and Foundry Company; Harwick Coal and Coke Company, 225 mine cars, with the Hockensmith Wheel and Mine Car Company, and 100 with the American Car and Foundry Company; E. E. White Coal Company, 100 mine cars, with the Watt Car and Wheel Company; Crystal Coal and Coke Company, 50 mine cars, with the Hockensmith company. Inquiries included ten baggage cars, five combination horse, baggage and automobile cars and two baggage and postal cars for the Union Pacific, and eight baggage cars for the Chicago & Northwestern.

A contract for supplying and laying 1,000 tons of cast iron pipe and 1,000 tons of steel pipe for the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of New York City has been awarded to Peter F. Connelly. The work will be in Queens. It is expected that pipe makers will get contracts for the material soon. Kearny, N. J., opened bids on last Tuesday on round tonnage of cast iron and steel pipe, mostly in large sizes ranging up to 48-inch.

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company has received an order for twelve 25-kilowatt geared turbine generator sets for as many new United States Navy river gunboats. Other Westinghouse orders include electrical switching equipment for the new Pontiac plant of the General Motors Corporation, and supervisory control equipment for the Long Island Railroad, the Connecticut Light and Power Company and the Pennsylvania Public Service Company.

The General Electric Company has closed contracts with various companies for equipment worth $100,000, principally automatic machinery for a proposed refrigerator manufacturing department at Schenectady. Its plans call for an output of 2,000 electric refrigerating machines weekly.

RECESSIONS PREVAIL IN THE CURB MARKET

Prices Drop Slowly Because of Lack of Demand—All Groups Affected Similarly.

An easier undertone prevailed in the Curb Market yesterday. There was not much pressure on the downward trend, but in the absence of demand, prices drifted slowly lower and ended the day from fractions to about a point less than the previous finals. A few of the high-priced specialties gave way more than a point, although movements in these issues failed to attract much attention.

Public utilities, which ruled among the steadiest issues early, dropped back in the afternoon, and the majority of industrials settled at a lower basis after exhibiting irregularity previous to the last hour. Standard Oil securities did not fluctuate much.

Bond trading diminished somewhat, and fluctuations were slight. As usual, the utilities absorbed most of the business in the domestic section, while German obligations were most active in the foreign section.

Dollar Acceptances $302,179,950.

Total dollar acceptances covering exports and imports for twenty-four banks in this country were $302,179,950 on Nov. 4, as compared with $269,658,975 on Oct. 7, and $323,794,503 on Nov. 5, 1925, Export Trade and Finance reports. Acceptances in foreign currencies executed by foreign banks for account of twenty-two banks here totaled $34,598,377 on Nov. 4, as against $32,339,237 on Oct. 7, and $46,264,206 on Nov. 5, 1925.

HINT OF MERGER BASED ON C. & O. SUBSIDIARY

Chesapeake & Hocking Hearing to Be Watched by Followers of Van Sweringen Deal.

The impression exists in Wall Street that something important in connection with the Van Sweringen merger may be disclosed when the application of the new Chesapeake & Hocking Railway, owned by the Chesapeake & Ohio, for authority to issue new securities comes up before Division 4 of the Interstate Commerce Commission for a hearing.

The broad powers contained in the charter of this company, which, on the surface was organized only to build a new line from Gregg to Valley Crossing, Ohio, connecting the Chesapeake & Ohio and Hocking Valley, have appealed to some railroad financial experts as suggesting that it might be used as the holding company in the new Van Sweringen plan. Such a scheme, they feel, would provide a facile and equitable arrangement for placing the Chesapeake & Ohio at the head of the group.

Decision by the Van Sweringens to place the Chesapeake & Ohio at the head of the group involves the working out of a fair exchange for the old Nickel Plate, which is now understood to be the subject of negotiations. The Van Sweringens own a larger percentage of Nickel Plate stock than any of the other roads in the merger and are naturally anxious to get as good terms as possible. The Chesapeake & Ohio minority, on the other hand, is also fighting for a good bargain.

Meanwhile, as a result of the British coal strike, the Chesapeake & Ohio earnings are accumulating rapidly. This has stimulated discussion of the possibility of the directors declaring an extra dividend at their next meeting. The Van Sweringens are said to be in favor of such declaration, feeling that the road's stockholders should receive full benefit of its earnings. They would also share to an appreciable extent in such distribution, due to their ownership of a controlling interest in Chesapeake & Ohio.

CROPS OF THE YEAR ABOVE THE AVERAGE

25,065,000 BELOW 1925

Cotton, Potatoes, Apples and Tobacco Run Ahead of Earlier Expectations.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—With the harvests practically all made, the Department of Agriculture, summing up the season's results today in its November crop report, announced that total production of all crops now appears to be 2.9 per cent. greater than last year, and 7.3 per cent. above the average production during the last five years.

For the country as a whole, October weather was favorable for late crops, and as a result corn, cotton, apples, potatoes and tobacco are all running somewhat above earlier expectations. Corn production this year was placed at 2,693,963,000 bushels. A month ago 2,679,988,000 bushels was forecast. Last year's crop totaled 2,905,053,000 bushels. The carry-over of old corn on farms Nov. 1 was estimated at about 181,000,000 bushels, compared with 58,000,000 bushels last Fall. The carry-over in the 12 North Central States was 168,000,000 bushels, compared with 44,000,000 bushels a year ago.

The quality of corn this year is placed at 72.6 per cent., compared with 82 per cent. last year.

The estimates of production in the principal corn-growing States compare as follows with the estimates of one month ago and with the final harvest of 1925, in bushels:

	Nov. 1, 1926.	Oct. 1, 1926.	Final, 1925.
Penn.	62,524,000	63,363,000	72,471,000

Kansas	62,822,000	63,579,000	104,643,000

The estimates of production of the other principal crops, as forecast by the Government in its report, compare as follows with the estimates of a month ago and with the final report of 1925:

(000 Omitted.)

	Nov. 1, 1926.	Oct. 1, 1926.	Final, 1925.

Minnesota	26,600,000	26,773,000	26,772,000

Acreage and indicated yield for the corn crop, as estimated yesterday by the Government, compare as follows with the estimate of the preceding month and that of the same month last year:

	Nov. 1, 1926.	Oct. 1, 1926.	Nov. 7, 1925.
Acreage	101,074	101,074	706,621
Y'ealed crop, bus.	2,693,963	2,679,988	3,013,390

In the following table comparisons for a series of years are given, the figures of acreage and yield for years prior to 1926 being those of the actual harvest:

Year.	Acreage.	Crop, Bushels.
[illegible]	107,074,000	2,693,963,000

1917	116,730,000	3,065,233,000

The only year prior to 1917 when 3,000,000,000 bushels were exceeded was in 1912, whose crop was 3,124,746,000.

PRICES OF COTTON SLIGHTLY LOWER

Cotton started off at a decline of a few points yesterday and after one of the narrowest sessions of the year closed around opening figures, 2 to 7 points lower on the day. The decline of $1 a bale from the recovery earlier in the week disclosed a quantity of trade buying orders and as the December position approached 12¼ cents the market developed resistance. Comparative inactivity of spot interests in putting out hedges reflected a firmer basis in the South, with limited pressure of better grades. Reports from Georgia stated that the process of withdrawing a quantity of cotton from the market on long term financing had begun.

Following the recovery of 10 English points the previous day, Liverpool prices reacted before the local opening and scattered. Southern selling orders were executed on the opening call at a slight decline both here and in New Orleans. As the session progressed, demand for December contracts absorbed all cotton furnished through commission house liquidation and each point recession disclosed more cotton wanted.

As compared with the closing price of 12.28 for December contracts in New York which will represent spot cotton for another two weeks, middling was quoted at 12 cents at Savannah and 12.13 at Norfolk.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Previous Day.
Dec.	12.28	12.34	12.27	12.28-29	12.35-36
Jan.	12.38	12.48	12.37	12.39-40	12.45-46

Oct.	13.30	13.30	13.25	13.28	13.30

The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 12.70c, 5 points decline for middling upland; sales 3,300 bales.

Southern spot markets were: Galveston, sales 900 bales, 12.35c, 5 points decline; New Orleans, sales 4,021 bales, 12.43c, unchanged; Savannah, sales none, 12c, 7 points decline; Augusta, sales 385 bales, 12.13c, unchanged; Memphis, sales 6,150 bales, 12.50c, unchanged; Houston, sales 9,072 bales, 12.30c, 5 points decline; Little Rock, sales 5,019 bales, 12c, unchanged; Dallas, sales 13,260 bales, 11.35c, 10 points decline.

Yesterday's cotton statistics were:

	Yesterday.	Last Week.	Last Year.

Liverpool cables: Spot cotton, a fair business, 9 points decline, 6.86d for middling. Sales 8,000 bales, American 5,000. Imports 22,000 bales, American 15,000. Futures opened steady, 3 to 7 points decline. Closed steady, 4 points decline. Prices, December, 6.68d; January, 6.74d; March, 6.82d; May, 6.91d; July, 7.01d; October, 7.08d. Manchester: Yarns, a fair business doing. Cloths, quieter.

WHEAT MARKETS IN SHARP DECLINE

Pressure From Eastern Houses Results in Net Losses of 1 to 1⅝ Cents.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Trading in wheat was of a pre-holiday character and confined largely to local operators. There was no enthusiasm shown on the buying side and toward the last a little pressure from houses with Eastern connections caused a sharp decline, with the finish within a fraction of the bottom and net losses of 1@1⅝ cents. The latter was on December, which finished 5 cents under the May. Winnipeg was also easy and 1¼@1⅝ cents lower, while Buenos Aires furnished a surprise by closing 1@1¼ cents higher after being slightly lower earlier in the day. The cause of the bulge in the latter market was not given.

Export sales in all positions were finally estimated at 200,000 bushels, with France taking some red Winters.

Primary arrivals were 1,052,000 bushels; week ago, 2,179,000; last year, holiday. Shipments were 839,000 bushels; week ago, 1,324,000.

Country offerings of old corn today were small, with purchases estimated at 250,000 bushels. Spot basis was steady to 1 cent higher.

Primary arrivals were 1,276,000 bushels; week ago, 2,394,000, and shipments, 686,000 bushels; week ago, 846,000.

The Ohio State Telephone Company

Consolidated and Refunding Mortgage Sinking Fund Bonds

The undersigned as Sinking Fund Trustee under Consolidated and Refunding Mortgage of the Ohio State Telephone Company, dated July 1, 7914, to Bankers Trust Company, as Trustee, pursuant to the provisions of Section 1, Article Five of the above mentioned Mortgage, hereby invites proposals to sell to the Sinking Fund under the above mentioned Mortgage Consolidated and Refunding Mortgage Sinking Fund Gold Bonds, to an amount sufficient to exhaust as nearly as may be the sum of $2,801.37 now available in the Sinking Fund for the purchase of such bonds.

All such proposals must be presented to the undersigned at its Corporate Trust Department in its office, No. 16 Wall Street, New York City, not later than 12 o'clock noon on November 78, 1926, and must be for the sale of such bonds at a price not to exceed the face value thereof plus accrued interest thereon. Preference in such purchase will be given to the proposals made at the lowest price.

In case bonds shall be offered by two or more holders at the same price to an amount in the aggregate exceeding the available fund, acceptance of such offers will be made in the order of the date of the reception of such offers by the undersigned, and if such equal offers of two or more holders shall be received by the undersigned on the same date, then each offer will be accepted to an amount which shall bear to such offer substantially the same proportion as the available fund shall bear to the aggregate of such simultaneous equal offers. All proposals of the sale of such bonds shall be subject to such acceptance of a portion thereof.

THE UNION TRUST COMPANY OF PITTSBURGH, TRUSTEE.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 1, 1926.

NEW YORK SHIPBUILDING CORPORATION

First Mortgage Thirty-Year Five Per Cent. Sinking Fund Gold Bonds.

Dated November 1, 1916—Due November 1, 1946.

Pursuant to Section 1 of Article Four of the Mortgage of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation to The Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh, Trustee, dated November 1, 1916, securing its First Mortgage Thirty-Year Five Per Cent. Sinking Fund Gold Bonds, the undersigned Trustee hereby gives notice that the bonds of such issue will be purchased by the Trustee for the Sinking Fund provided in said mortgage, to an amount sufficient to exhaust One Hundred Eighty-seven Thousand Seven Hundred Fifty and Two Hundredths ($167,750.06) Dollars, being the moneys now held by it in such Sinking Fund. The Trustee hereby invites from the bondholders offers for the sale to it on November 22, 1926, of such bonds. As provided in said mortgage, such offers shall in each case be for all or any part of the bonds so offered. The lowest offers to the aggregate amount not exceeding an amount sufficient as nearly as may be to exhaust such moneys now held in the Sinking Fund will be accepted, provided that the price or prices accepted will in no event exceed, in addition to accrued interest, one hundred two and one-half per centum (102½%).

As soon as may be, on or after November 18, 1926, the undersigned Trustee will notify bondholders whose offers are accepted, so that delivery of the bonds covered by such acceptances may be made to the Trustee at its office in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on November 22, 1926.

All offers must be in writing, be enclosed in sealed envelopes, state the number or numbers of the bonds offered, and name the price or prices at which the same are offered.

All offers must be received at the office of the Trustee on or before noon of November 15, 1926.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday—4½ per cent. for the best names.
Tuesday—4½ per cent. for the best names.
The quotations are for six months' paper.

Napped Goods to Be Priced Late.

From present indications prices on napped goods for both the manufacturing and jobbing trades will not be opened for 1927 any earlier than they were for 1926. There is a possibility that the new season's quotations may be held off even longer than they were then, for there is an indicated disposition on the part of the leading producers to postpone this action as long as possible. The leading 1926 line was priced to the cutters-up about the middle of last December and, although actual figures were not given out, they were from 8 to 10 per cent. lower than the 1925 lines. Late in January the jobbers' lines of the same manufacturer were priced for 1926 at similar reductions in wide goods, and at declines of 10 to 15 per cent. in the narrow cloth. Just what the new season's general quotation will show is problematical at the moment, although there is a general expectation of reductions because of the drop in cotton.

Says South Will "Come Back."

From six months to a year will be required for the South to work out of the buying slump that has resulted from the great cotton crop this year, according to an opinion expressed here yesterday by one of the best-known dry goods wholesalers in that section of the country, but she will "come back." Both wholesale and retail merchants, he said, were stunned when the real size of the crop became apparent, and it will take quite a while to throw off the effects. Other crops were also large in the South this year, the wholesaler in question added and, basically, the region is economically sound. As he concluded, "No country is ever bankrupt if all its crops are large."

To Discuss Distribution.

Improvement in the methods of distributing merchandise will be the keynote of the sixteenth annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, to be held at the Hotel Pennsylvania from Feb. 7 to 11, 1927. The retailers, it was announced yesterday, will tackle the problem of distribution from the angles of lower costs, improved store processes and the recognition and study of basic trends in retailing which will have a marked influence in the future. As was the case last year, the meeting will be of both a group and general nature, with each group giving special attention to its specialized rôle in distribution. The "smoker" of the association will be held on the evening of Feb. 8 and the banquet on Feb. 10.

Coat Trade Continues Quiet.

Not a great deal has happened in the women's coat trade to bring about increased activity in Fall merchandise. Stocks, while not large comparatively, are large enough when retailers send in reorders slowly. If the weather is cold over this week-end, however, manufacturers anticipate considerably more activity next week. Sports coats continue to have the best call and shipments are going forward steadily to retailers. Further production of dressy coats will be only on a limited scale and later on will be mainly to take up the retail demand for "sales purposes." For the early Spring, manufacturers plan to feature sports coats, with those of sheen worsteds to be shown later.

Gray Goods Were Quiet.

Trading in the local gray goods market yesterday did not run into very large volume. All of the printcloth sales reported were for spot delivery, and they included 38½-inch 64-60s at 6⅞ cents, 38½-inch 44-40s at 4¾ cents and 39-inch 68-72s at 7¼ cents. In the sheetings spot business was done on 36-inch 4.70 and 40-inch 3.60-yard goods at 7 and 9 cents, respectively. Prompt deliveries of 30-inch 3.25 drills were sold at 8⅝ cents, but 7⅞ cents was the best that could be done on 37-inch 3.95s. The feature of the business done in broadcloths was the selling of 100-60s for January and February deliveries at 10¼ and 10¾ cents, respectively. Most houses asked 10½ cents for both months. There was also a good inquiry for 90-60 broadcloths.

Dress Stocks Still Available.

Although this has been one of the best Fall seasons the dress trade has had for some time, and competent manufacturers have held down their surpluses by careful cutting, there is still plenty of "clean-up" merchandise apparently to be had. The great bulk of this is low priced, some being offered so cheaply as to permit its being retailed with profit at $3.50, and even less. In the general stocks available for sale at various retail prices are offered garments made of poiretsheens, crêpe satins, weighted flat crêpes, flannels, velveteens, jersey cloths, &c. Both sports and "regular" dress styles are included in the offerings, which also embrace practically all of the leading shades.

Raw Silk Situation.

Trading in raw silk in Yokohama has been very quiet and prices have eased off slightly. Both buyers and sellers are maintaining a waiting attitude to see what may come of the plan to secure Government assistance for the filatures. The market here, according to E. Gerli & Co., has also been featureless. Crack XX was quoted yesterday at $6.05 and XX at $5.90. A nominal market exists in China steam filatures. Canton 14-16s were priced at $4.25 and 20-22s at $4. Buying interest in Italian silks is restricted.

Confident About Resort Wear.

Early offerings of dresses and coats for the Winter resort season are being made and are meeting with a good reception, according to manufacturers here. It will be a couple of weeks yet, however, before general showings of this type of merchandise are made. Confidence is expressed by both retailers and manufacturers that the resort season this year will be as good as last, despite the violent storms which have upset the most prominent Southern gathering-place. Buyers for leading retail stores which particularly cater to this trade are said to have indicated their plans to place orders for a normal quota of the merchandise. Sports wear dominates in it, particularly garments of novelty woolens and lightweight worsteds, with white outstanding in the color range.

Metal Cloth Is Outstanding.

While there is usually considerable interest shown in metallic fabrics during the Fall, this season is said to have set new records for the use of these goods. In evening wear, in millinery, in dressing and lounging robes, in floral trimmings, laces and other accessories, the use of metal weaves, particularly gold cloth, has been very great. The mills have been taking care of reorders on the goods for weeks past, and at present the demand is still strong. Silver or copper effects have not had anywhere near the interest that the fabric simulating the yellow metal has achieved.

Wholesalers Seek Cooperation.

A plea for greater cooperation between makers of textile merchandise and its wholesale distributers and a protest on the part of the latter against revising prices in the middle of a season were the outstanding features of a luncheon-meeting of the Advisory Board, Executive Committee and officers of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association that was held yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria, after having been adjourned from Tuesday. Spring prices, it was urged, should not be made before Jan. 2. During the meeting the general situation in the textiles trades was thoroughly discussed, and it was the sense of the meeting that, with the present vogue of hand-to-mouth buying, the dry goods wholesaler is more indispensable than ever to the manufacturer. About forty prominent wholesalers and commission house executives attended the meeting, at which President W. M. G. Howse of Wichita, Kan., presided.

Quits Old Boston Church.

BOSTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—The resignation of the Rev. Dr. William H. Dewart, sixty-three-year-old rector of Christ Church, formerly the famous Old North Church, has been accepted by the vestry, and Dr. Dewart has been elected pastor emeritus. He is now in England. In their letter of acceptance, the vestry expressed the hope that "freedom from a rector's daily round of duties may fully restore you to health and strength in abundance."

ADVOCATES GRAIN BOYCOTT.

Iowa Commission Secretary Denounces Some Market Practices.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 10.—Boycotting of the Chicago grain market and shipping of grain to Iowa market centres was advocated today by J. G. Mitchell, Secretary of the Iowa Agricultural and Industrial Commission, named by Governor John Hammill as a means whereby grain growers might protect themselves against allegedly unfair grain marketing practices of the Chicago Board of Trade.

Mr. Mitchell said that apparently the Secretary of Agriculture had obtained information which neither the Directors of the Board of Trade nor the Illinois Commerce Commission had been able to reach, adding:

"He has filed charges which involve the violation of almost every important law affecting the grain trade, but has been checked by suit in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia seeking to enjoin hearing upon his complaint."

SEES DRY LAW FOR ENGLAND

Wheeler, Quoting American's Letter, Says Conditions Will Force It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Prohibition is coming in England, said Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, today, in discussing a communication which he said an American business man with offices abroad had written from his London office.

"Not even the most violent slanderers of American youth, American womanhood and virtue and American cities in general," Mr. Wheeler declared "have ever drawn so dark a picture of conditions here as the American of the conditions obtaining in England under the saloon today."

Drunken autoists, the letter said, are arrested in London in such large numbers every day that the same ratio would mean 531 motorists in court daily in New York, and, quoting from the letter, Mr. Wheeler said that "drunkenness is so common on the streets that it is as unnoticed as the streets themselves."

BUSINESS NOTES.

A meeting for the election of officers of the Hosiery, Underwear and Dry Goods League will be held this evening at 29 East Thirty-second Street. Although the league was organized last May, this will be its first election of officers. Credit topics will also be discussed.

Barney Flynn, formerly assistant to the President of the Simmons Bed Company, Kenosha, Wis., and later with the Berkey & Gay Furniture Company, Grand Rapids, has purchased a substantial interest in the Luce Furniture Company of the latter city. He will be associated in the company with J. H. Hoult, M. J. Dreggs, W. A. Bowen, E. J. Gamble and others.

Judge Leopold Prince of the Municipal Court of this city will be the principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the Associated Retail Credit Men of New York City, Inc., which is to be held next Tuesday evening at the Hotel Pennsylvania. His topic will be the relation of the Municipal Court to the retail credit interests of the city.

Giles & Hirsch, Inc., 350 Broadway, have been appointed sole selling agents for the Clarke & Holsapple Manufacturing Company, Cohoes, N. Y., makers of sleeping garments, men's and boys' bathing suits and flat underwear. They are also sole agents for the Mohnton Knitting Mills, Mohnton, Pa., makers of men's and women's knit underwear.

THE MORTGAGE MARKET.

Loans Placed on Bronx and Manhattan Properties.

Eugene J. Busher Company, Inc., has placed for the Siekram Building and Construction Company, Inc., a $54,000 loan on the six two-story brick buildings with stores on the southwest corner of Waldo Avenue and West 238th Street, and for Jacob M. Stern a $30,000 loan on the six-story building with stores at 217 East Eighty-fifth Street.

Jacob & Emil Leitner, Inc., have placed for the Honora Building Corporation a first mortgage of $20,000 on the one-story taxpayer on the east side of Vyse Avenue, 28.2 feet south of ... Street; for Billingsley & Armour, Inc., a first mortgage of $22,500 on the one-story taxpayer recently completed at the northwest corner of Allerton and Holland Avenue, and for George ... Shapiro a loan of $20,000 on the two three-family houses being erected at the southeast corner of Pelham Parkway and Continental Avenue.

Murray Hill Residence Sold.

The Murray Hill residence of the late Katherine T. Moore has been sold to a client of G. F. Allison. The property consists of a four-story dwelling on a lot 20x98.9, at 108 East Thirty-sixth Street, near Park Avenue. It adjoins the residence of William H. Wheelock, at No. 110.

East Side Cooperative House Financed by Building Loan

William Henry Barnum & Co., Inc., have made the building loan on the new cooperative apartment house to be built at 36 East Seventy-second Street, in which Harrison Williams, Paul D. Cravath and Walter J. Damrosch have already bought apartments for their personal occupancy. The building will be fourteen stories high, with a penthouse, and will cost $1,400,000.

The Rhoades-Kennedy Security Corporation will be the owner of this building, which will be the second apartment house in New York to make extensive use of the "stagger" system, an ingenious plan of building devised by the architects, which makes it possible to have 11-foot ceilings in the living room and 9-foot ceilings in the bedrooms. The architects of both are Pleasants Pennington and Albert W. Lewis.

The house will be finished and ready for occupancy for October of 1927. Douglas L. Elliman & Co. are the agents.

92D ST. SITE IS SOLD FOR ELEVATOR HOUSE

Leon Weinstein Construction Company to Improve Plot—Other Manhattan Sales.

Samuel Kronsky, Inc., sold to the Leon Weinstein Construction Company, Inc., for the Liberty Place Holding Corporation, 164-168 East Ninety-second Street, a plot 75 by 100 feet, upon which is to be erected an elevator apartment. The property was held at $115,000.

Joseph T. Riordan sold for John Stelzl 25 by 100 feet on the south side of 218th Street between Park Terrace East and Broadway to the H. & J. Building Corporation. This completes a plot of five lots with a Broadway frontage which will be improved with a five-story apartment, stores and taxpayer. Operations to be started immediately.

Cleary & Glynn with Fried-Lowenthal Company have sold for Ann McCarthy the two five-story tenements on plot 70 by 100 feet at 105-107 East 123d Street to an investing client of Thomas M. O'Connell.

Thayer, Saunders & Co., Inc., resold for Mercedes Garcia and Rosa Garcia to Nathan Marks the five-story apartment at 306 West Fourth Street, adjoining the northwest corner of Bank Street. The property was held at $45,000.

The Houghton Company sold for the Carney Realty Company the four-story American basement dwelling at 454 West 141st Street on a lot 20 by 99 feet just off Convent Avenue. The Metropolitan Tabernacle Church, the buyer, will occupy the premises.

NEW SCHRAFFT STORE IN OLD ART GALLERY

The Former Knoedler Building, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, Rebuilt.

During the past year shoppers and residents in the vicinity of Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street have watched with interest the progress of the reconstruction of the former Knoedler Art Gallery, which for many years was one of the notable classic architectural landmarks on the Avenue.

At the time this building was leased by the Frank G. Shattuck Company from the Loring estate it was five stories in height, but extending in depth only fifty feet, except the first floor, which was the full depth of the lot, 100 feet.

The building as it stands today is seven stories in height, covering a plot 50 feet on the Avenue and 100 feet deep.

The Italian Renaissance effect of the outside of the building has been carried out also in the first and mezzanine floors by Charles E. Birge, the architect.

Preceding the formal opening today of this addition to the chain of Schrafft stores Frank G. Shattuck, President of the company, gave a Colonial dinner last evening to about 150 guests in the Alexandria room, after which there was an inspection of the building, which contains many innovations.

MONTAUK BEACH PURCHASE.

Long Island Realtors Are Told of Recent Deals.

Special to The New York Times.

RIVERHEAD, N. Y., Nov. 10.—At the bi-monthly dinner of the Eastern Long Island Real Estate Board held at the Riverhead Country Club here a representative of Carl G. Fisher's Montauk Beach Development stated that nearly $1,000,000 worth of property there had been bought or contracted for, although no effort has been made to sell any parcels in the residential or business sections. Among the prominent men who have made purchases there are Walter Chrysler and Howard Coffin, automobile manufacturers, and Vice President Le Boutillier of the Long Island Railroad Company.

Great progress is being made at Montauk Beach, which is to be the "Miami of the North." The first of the three big hotels to be erected and the seven-story office building are being enclosed; the hotel which has 187 guest rooms will cost about $1,000,000. A golf course and a polo field are completed and about fifty miles of roads have been built on the first 3,000 acres of the 10,000-acre tract that is being developed. It is planned to establish a ferry service between Montauk Beach and New England. The corporation's budget for permanent improvements extending over a five-year period is $16,000,000.

Buy Madison Avenue Corner.

Charles Steinberg and associates have purchased the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and 103d Street, known as 1,514 Madison Avenue, from Charles J. and John Fallon. The property has a frontage of 100 feet on Madison Avenue and 20 feet on the street. It is a five story tenement with four stores on the avenue, and rents for $9,000. This is the first time in thirty-five years that the property has changed hands. It is free and clear and was bought on an all-cash basis. Leo S. Friedman negotiated the sale. The same broker recently sold the two adjoining houses at 22 and 24 East 103d Street.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

Irving I. Lewine Is Buyer of Car-Barn Interest.

Irving I. Lewine is the purchaser of the one-sixth interest of Harris and Maurice Mandelbaum in the old car-barn property occupying the block front on the west side of Sixth Avenue between Fiftieth and Fifty-first Streets.

Incorporation of the new 373 Park Avenue Corporation does not affect the ownership of the realty at that location, according to Sidney B. Cardozo, attorney, who formed the new company. The property, a twelve-story apartment house, occupying the entire easterly block front on Park Avenue from Fifty-second to Fifty-third Street, is owned by the Mordecai-Potter interests.

F. M. Buermann, attorney, has formed the 12 Waverly Place Corporation to take over the realty at that location, owned by Nathan Glasheim. The realty consists of a six-story loft building on lot 25 by 82.7 feet.

Bassett to Build on Long Island.

William Bassett has purchased a three-acre plot in the highest section of the Vincent Astor property at Port Washington, L. I., and has commissioned Aymar Embury 2d. to draw plans for an English type, hollow tile and stucco residence at once. The site overlooks Hempstead Harbor, Manhasset Bay and Long Island Sound.

Women Lease Broadway Offices.

Esther Boulotchnick, under the trade name of Maison Esther, has leased a suite of offices in 2,061 Broadway for a term of five years from the 2,061 Broadway Corporation. Coughlan & Co., Inc., were the brokers.

25 Far Rockaway Dwellings In Deal Involving $300,000

In a deal involving $300,000 the Lanett Realty Corporation purchased from the builders, through William B. Fischberg, President of the Wilsonia Realty Corporation, twenty-five one-family brick dwellings in Far Rockaway.

The houses are of individual architecture and contain eight rooms. Each is built on a lot 23 by 100 feet, with a garage in the rear. They are located on Lanett and Meehan Avenues and are known as 864 to 880 and 886 to 890 Lanett Avenue and 871, 873 to 886, 883 to 889 and 893 Meehan Avenue.

They are within eight minutes' walk of the Long Island Railroad station in the vicinity of the bridge, being built between Long Beach and Atlantic Beach. The buyers have retained the Wilsonia Realty Corporation as broker in the sale of the houses to homeseekers.

COMMERCIAL SPACE CONTINUES IN DEMAND

Brokers Report a Quite Active Market for Floors, Lofts, Offices and Stores.

Williams & Co., Inc., have leased the eleventh floor in 34-36 West Thirty-second Street to the Bagcraft Manufacturing Company; the ninth floor in 535 Eighth Avenue to Potash Brothers; the third floor in 462 Seventh Avenue to Joseph J. Keyser, and the twelfth floor in 29 West Thirty-fifth Street, for Horace S. Ely, to Stone & Gropper.

Bastine & Co., Inc., have leased the fifth floor at 653 First Avenue to Philip Albert, and also the fifth floor at 42 West Fifteenth Street to Hygrade Hand Drawn Works.

Stone & Co. have leased space in the building at 232 Madison Avenue for a long term of years to Schmidt & Seidel, Inc., wholesalers of optical supplies, at present located at 126 East Twenty-third Street.

Cross and Brown Company leased the fourth loft in 113-15 Mercer Street to Eagle Doll and Toy Company, Inc., and the store and basement in 469 Greenwich Street to Hudson Motor Freight Service, Inc.

The same brokers also leased space in 300 Madison Avenue to Henry O. Kahan; in the King's Tower building, at 678 Eighth Avenue, to Schroeder & Barber, and space in 33 West Sixtieth Street to William McAdoo and Frederick F. Watson.

The Empire Properties Corporation has leased for a term of years the second floor in 15-17 West Thirty-sixth Street to the Cornell Headwear Company, Inc., and additional space to Krauss & Levy and Morris Furman Company.

Pease & Elliman, Inc., have leased offices in the twenty-story Rafel Building at 67-73 West Forty-fourth Street, to Herman E. Woalcatch.

BUILDING FULLY RENTED.

Printers Take Remaining Space in Hudson-Chariton Building.

Reed, Birge & Grandbois, printers, leased through Thoens & Flannlacher, Inc., from the Hudson-Chariton Corporation, the entire sixth floor with approximately 10,000 square feet, in the new Hudson-Chariton Building, 333 to 339 Hudson Street. The lease is for a long term of years. This lease makes the building now 100 per cent. rented.

The same brokers also leased to Maurice B. Keller Corporation for Ida C. Gevirtz, a suite of offices on the third floor at 1 West Thirty-fourth Street; also to Mme. Nanna Pera for the Bilvristel Realty Company, space on the third floor at 18 West Thirty-seventh Street to be used as a school for singing.

NEW BAUMANN STORE.

Nine-Story Building on Sixth Avenue Leased by Furniture Firm.

The nine-story building at 782, 784 and 786 Sixth Avenue, located between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets, has been leased for a term of years by S. Baumann & Brother, furniture dealers, for a retail store.

Extensive alterations will be made to the structure and it is expected that this, the fourth store in the Baumann chain, will be opened for business next month.

Brown, Wheelock: Harris, Vought Co. as brokers negotiated the lease. The structure is known as the Cowperthwaite Building and was held at a net rental of $65,000 a year. The lease taken by the Baumann firm is for twenty-one years.

Seventh Avenue Site for Automat.

Tankoos, Smith & Co. have leased to the Horn & Hardart Company for a term of twenty-one years, at a rental aggregating approximately $500,000, the entire property at 754-6 Seventh Avenue on the west side, 41 feet south of Fiftieth Street, comprising a six-story store and hotel building on a plot 33 by 90, located diagonally opposite the new Manger Hotel and the new Roxy Theatre. From plans of Frederick Putnam, Platt & Brother, architects, extensive alterations will be made and upon the completion the lessees will occupy the entire ground floor and basement for a branch establishment of their business. Negotiations are pending to lease the entire upper portion of the building to a hotel operator.

Change of Control Indicated.

Change of control in the lease of the twelve-story Hotel Marseilles at the southwest corner of Broadway and 103d Street is indicated by the formation of the 103d Street and Broadway Hotel Corporation by Jacob I. Goodstein, attorney, with I. Weiner, S. Sapier and himself as directors. Last February the hotel was leased for twenty-one years to the Marseilles Operating Corporation, headed by Harry Tannenbaum.

Sorrento (Me.) Tract in Deal.

A deal has just been closed whereby the United States Building Corporation, headed by Benard Dorf, has purchased approximately 1,000 acres of land, including several hotels and buildings, as well as Seward Island, located at Sorrento, Me.

Another Thomson Hill Sale.

Fred G. Randall announced yesterday the sale of another parcel in the Thomson Hill District of Queens Borough containing twenty lots located on the west side of Van Buren Street between Queens Boulevard and Nelson Avenue. The purchaser is Morris F. Jones.

J. D. LYON PURCHASES PIPING ROCK ESTATE

International Mercantile Marine Head Sells Home at Locust Valley.

OPERATORS BUY IN PELHAM

Meyer Brothers Plan Elevator House for Second Avenue—Other Suburban Sales.

P. A. S. Franklin, President of the International Mercantile Marine Corporation, has sold his property at Locust Valley to J. Denniston Lyon. Hamilton Iselin & Co., Inc., were the brokers.

The estate consists of twenty-five acres and dwelling, situated on the north side of the Piping Rock Road and directly opposite the property of Paul D. Cravath and Welles Bosworth. The property immediately adjoins that of Charles A. Coffin, H. Nelson Slater and Anton G. Hodenpyl.

On the corner of this property, a little back from the road, is located the rock that gave the entire section its name, being the highest point on the ridge and used by the Indians as a meeting place for their conferences. Hence its name, the Pipe-on-Rock or Piping Rock. The property will be reconditioned as a permanent residence for the purchaser.

A lot on Park Street, near Washington Boulevard, Long Beach, has been sold through Fred P. Cody, Inc., for Mary E. Williams to a New York investor.

Dooley & Stapleton sold a plot 280 by 100 feet on the south side of Eighty-fifth Avenue, between 244th Street and Commonwealth Boulevard, Bellerose Grove. The purchaser is George Meyer. The brokers were Siebert & Wood.

The same sellers also sold in the same development a plot 380 by 100 feet on the west side of 244th Street, 100 feet north of Hillside Avenue, to Charles Lang, through M. P. Schuman as brokers.

Meyers Brothers, operators and builders, have purchased the southeast corner of Fourth Street and Second Avenue, Pelham, a plot 100 by 100 feet. The purchasers will erect a seven-story elevator apartment house on this plot.

The Second National Bank of Hoboken sold its brick and stucco house on Corona Avenue, Pelham Heights, consisting of ten rooms, three baths and garage, on a wooded plot, to James F. Chaffee. Chauncey B. Griffen was the broker.

The Biltmore Hills Real Estate Corporation has sold fifteen one-half-acre plots in their Sterling Ridge development in Harrison to the Fenimore Park Corporation, who have started the construction of English type brick and stucco homes of seven and eight rooms.

Operator in Astoria Purchase.

Hub Realty Company sold for William Klee, a plot 40 by 100 feet on the north side of Astoria Place, 160 feet east of Van Alst Avenue, Astoria, to a Queens operator. Frank Capek cooperated as broker.

Investors Buy Bronx Flats.

The Alfieri Realty Company sold three four-family houses on 223d Street between White Plains and Carpenter Avenues, for the Wakefield Realty Company to clients for investment.

BUILDERS BUY PLOTS FOR FLATS IN BRONX

Active Demand Is Reported for Vacant Parcels—Investors in Several Deals.

Bronx builders were active yesterday acquiring vacant parcels for apartment house improvements. Brokers also reported considerable movement in the sale of improved properties to investors.

Rappenport & Goldenruth sold the plot 100 by 114 feet on the north side of 224th Street, about 265 feet east of White Plains Avenue, to a builder, who will erect four seven-family apartment houses. Arthur C. Sullivan was the broker.

The same broker also sold for Lesser & Lesser the plot 114 by 80 feet on the southwest corner of 232d Street and Bronxwood Avenue to J. Heymen.

Jacob Goodman resold a plot 100 by 80 feet on the east side of Valentine Avenue, between 196th Street and Kingsbridge Road. The purchaser was the Besoer-Feder Corporation. The brokers in the transaction were H. H. Neuberger and Charles Michael. The buyers plan to erect a six-story elevator apartment.

The Eugene J. Busher Company, Inc., has sold for Isadore Friesler a plot of eleven lots on the southwest corner of Waldo Avenue and 242d Street, running through to Dash Place. Leo Levinson, the buyer, will erect a large apartment house on the plot.

Albert B. Ashforth, Inc., and William Haperin as brokers sold for Mrs. Mary Kitson of Annapolis, Md., to Jacob J. Gloster the vacant plot, 191 by 142 by irregular, at the intersection of University and Lawrence Avenues. The purchaser plans the erection of an apartment house on this site.

Benjamin Benenson has sold to an investing client of H. Keckheissen the five-story and basement walk-up at 2,454 Webb Avenue, near Fordham Road. The property is on a plot 100 by 100 by 60 feet and rents for about $27,000.

In part payment for this property Mr. Benenson took in trade 10 West Street, consisting of a three-story building on plot 90 by 44.8 by 78.1 by 44.3 feet.

G. Lloyd Baylies sold for Stephen D. Sink the apartment house on the southeast corner of 201st Street and Bainbridge Avenue. George Rall, the buyer, bought this property as a permanent investment. The same broker has sold the one-family private residence at 2,548 Bailey Avenue to O. C. Boden Jr.

The Harwell Realty and Construction Corporation, Nat Harris, President, sold a plot 100 by 100 feet on the corner of 174th Street and Harrod Avenue to Max Block. John J. Reynolds was the broker in the deal.

A. Jaffe, Inc., has sold through Louis M. Weiss & Co. to the L. S. L. Realty Corporation two vacant Bronx plots as follows: A plot 175 by 100 feet on the south side of Stratford Avenue, 150 feet south of 174th Street, and a plot 50 by 100 feet on the east side of Manor Avenue, 150 feet south of 174th Street.

New Jersey Tract Is Sold.

The Frank Hughes Company sold for a holding company a large tract of over thirty acres having a frontage on one of the main Caldwell and Paterson highways of over 1,000 feet, and improved with several buildings, in North Caldwell, N. J. The purchaser is a Montclair investor who has bought the property for investment. The property is close to the Green Brook Golf and Country Club and also near the Green Brook Gardens development.

SALESMAN.

My present employers, for whom I sell several hundred thousand dollars annually by mail, take only part of my time; I can therefore take on mail sales work of another manufacturer on part-time basis at $50 per week, less than one-third of what I now earn.

I write the kind of sales letters that sell merchandise to dealers at less than salesman's cost; have successful record selling by mail in men's and women's apparel, floor coverings, jewelry, textiles; can apply this successful experience to any line that can be sold by salesmen.

Will take over or organize complete mail-sales and advertising department, build up well-rated mailing list, secure new accounts by mail, revive inactive accounts, get present accounts to buy more frequently; in short, I will considerably increase your business at less than salesmen's commission.

Can open new virgin territory and at same time cover salesmen's territory, increasing their business and yours; I am a mail salesman and at $50 a week I will prove the lowest priced salesman you have.

In responding, give definite appointment day or evening, weekday or Sunday; I will confirm by telephone. P 346 Times.

SALESMEN!

READ THIS THEN ACT!

Are you seeking a permanent connection with a big return?

Would you like to become a manager of a given territory, developing wholesale connections—at a great profit to you?

Are you desirous of building a clientele of your own to whom you can feel you are rendering the highest form of investment service?

Would you like to be assured that your commission is so liberal that it gives you a distinct remuneratory advantage over competitors—and that, if you prove yourself, you will be helped financially through the first stages?

Would you like to become associated with a sales force whose members are earning large returns?

Can you see a future for yourself in a corporation which has constructed several millions in buildings all of which are operating profitably and paying dividends regularly?

And finally, would you like to get an ownership interest in these big buildings earning large returns?

Our business is one that any man can master almost immediately. It is extensively advertised in the Financial Sections of the leading newspapers. Our method is based on more than 25 years' experience. Our training is simple and effective. Any one with intelligence; willing to enter this lucrative field, can be taught to become one of the big producers in a very short time.

People want to own land, buildings, real estate. Our method combines all of these in a big way. Your clients have opportunity to own valuable income-producing property, have their money returned to them, and still continue to own and share in the profits of these buildings.

With these facts before you, can you afford not to investigate this exceptional opportunity to earn a substantial income and to become associated in a dignified banking business?

11 A. M. or 3 P. M. Thursday are the hours set for your interview—we wish to talk to all men whose references will stand investigation—please be prompt. 7th floor, 52 Vanderbilt Av., New York City.

MEN!

Who want to make big money.

If you are afraid of big money, if you think it cannot be made, this is not your place. You never will make big money, while you think that way, and neither we, nor any one else, can help you to do so. But if you are timber for earnings worth while, you know there are salesmen who do make $25,000 per year and a lot more. There are three things necessary to make this kind of money.

First, the right deal; second, the right management; third, salesmen who will put $25,000 worth of effort into their work.

Right now, $350,000 in actual cash is being spent to make this deal salable. It has really been salable now only about ten days; $220,000 in actual cash has already been spent and $120,000 more is being spent at the rate of $2,000 per day. This is in addition to an original investment of over half a million dollars. And this is only one part of the enterprise we are handling.

We want clean-cut men who have made at least from $4,000 to $10,000 per year. Ambition, good appearance, willingness to work, intelligence, determination to make big money, counts for more than experience. We will take accountants, office men, well-educated men from any line, with or without selling experience, who can meet the above qualifications. Sales experience is valuable if you have had the kind that makes you expect to do a real day's work in order to make real money. We will not consider floaters or fly-by-nights.

We are spending thousands of dollars a week right now to help men make sales, although we are just starting to organize a sales force. The men who answer this ad will be in charge of sales managers who have made large incomes. If you mean business, are willing to put in a real day's work, six days a week, to make real money, on commission basis, call at once.

Room 503, 12 East 41st St.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 10.—The northern disturbance has moved to the Gulf of St. Lawrence with greatly increased intensity (Harrington 28.98 inches), and it has been attended by precipitation and strong shifting winds and gales in the lake region, the upper Ohio Valley and the Middle Atlantic and North Atlantic States.

Another disturbance of wide extent and considerable intensity is approaching the North Pacific Coast, where rains have already set in. High pressure prevails over Manitoba, Ontario and the greater part of the United States (highest Keokuk, Iowa, 30.48 inches).

Fair weather will prevail almost generally east of the Mississippi River Thursday and Friday. The temperature will rise slowly in Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and the East Gulf States Thursday, and the weather will become warmer throughout the Washington forecast district except Northern New England during Friday.

COUNTRY-WIDE WEATHER CONDITIONS.

In the following record of observations at United States Weather Bureau stations yesterday, the temperatures given are the highest during the twelve hours from 8 A. M. to 8 P. M. and the lowest during the preceding twelve hours from 8 P. M. to 8 A. M.; the barometer reading and condition of weather are those recorded at 8 P. M., and the rainfall is for the twenty-four hours ended at 8 P. M.

ATTACK NEW YORKER'S WILL

Relatives Say Isaac Hagaman Was of Unsound Mind.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—In the fight to break the will of Isaac Hagaman, former owner of the Albemarle Hotel in New York City, who died leaving $100,000 in trust for the Town of East Haven for the erection of a library, contestants today tried to prove that Mr. Hagaman was not in complete possession of his faculties when he signed it on his death-bed. Relatives seeking to break the will are: Samuel M. Swartout, John J. Swartout and Caroline Nagengast of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., his first cousins.

Mr. Hagaman left his property, $248,000 in all, to the First National Bank of New Haven, as trustee.

Several nurses in Grace Hospital testified to the alleged incapacity of Mr. Hagaman. They said that when he was an inmate of that hospital he was mentally unbalanced, because he refused to obey instructions.

Gloria Gray Receives Divorce.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 10.—Mrs. Lilly M. Grandmother Knew

there was nothing so good for congestion and colds as mustard. But the old-fashioned mustard plaster burned and blistered.

Musterole gives the relief and help that mustard plasters gave, without the plaster and without the blister.

It is a clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. Gently rub it in.

Try Musterole for sore throat, bronchitis, tonsilitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

At the first sign of a cold in the head take Musterole Cold Tablets. They usually give prompt relief.

MUSTEROLE
WILL NOT BLISTER

Better than a mustard plaster

New York in the Early 60s

What New York was like in Civil War days and after portrayed in interesting pictures in the 75th anniversary rotogravure supplement issued with the September 19th edition of The New York Times. It tells the story of The Times from its founding in 1851, and recounts the progress of the world during the last three-quarters of a century. Copies may be obtained at any office of The New York Times at 10 cents; orders taken for the section bound in stiff cloth, lettered in gold, 50 cents, or address 75th Anniversary Department, The New York Times.

Varsity Shop Will Open Saturday

NEW DEPARTMENT FOR COLLEGE MEN

5th Floor Corner Remodelled in Quiet Old English Style to Show Smart Clothes and Haberdashery

Next Saturday the Varsity Shop, that new college men's department on the fifth floor at Macy's, will formally open. It offers a standing invitation to the students of schools and universities about New York, and also underclassmen elsewhere who happen to be in town for a weekend or a holiday.

At all times college men will find in the Varsity Shop many attractive interpretations of the prevailing campus modes at prices below those they are usually asked to pay. They will concede, on visiting the new department, that it has stocked up intelligently, for weeks have been spent in observing seniors, juniors, sophomores and—aye, even freshmen!—in their academic habitat.

In consequence the Varsity Shop knows what they want to wear, and it has acted accordingly. As an example, one may cite the following articles obtainable in the shop, which occupies the Broadway-and-Thirty-fourth-street corner of the fifth floor:

Three-piece suits at forty-six dollars and fifty cents, four-piece suits for eight dollars more, and some characteristic three-button double-breasted blue suits—all of a cut appealing to the college man.

Slickers with strong buckles, full length, at six-fifty-four.

A "Tux," correct and well built in every detail, for fifty-four-fifty.

Soft-collared shirts, with decently long points and many good ones, collars buttoning or plain, of Oxford, imported broadcloth or madras, and whits or colored in lines and figures, at one-ninety-four to three-seventy-four.

The Varsity Shop will exhibit neat and clever ties; half-hose of French lisle, wool or three weights of black silk; scarves; dressing gowns, windproof leather jackets; hats with raw welt or fancy edged brims; tobacco pouches in college colors; dress shirts, English wing collars; gloves of mocha, goatskin and buckskin; athletic underwear; belts and braces, and many other typical college incidentals and accessories.

Are Tailored Really to Fit!

Examine the coat of a Sackville suit. You will find that it has a pure linen canvas foundation. That means it will keep its shape. You will further find that the collar is hand-felled—top and bottom. That makes it fit properly—no ugly gaping in back. Look at the hand-made buttonholes on coats and vests, the secure "staying" of the pockets, the silk piping on all the seams. These are details that count in the tailoring of a fine suit.

Do you wonder we say that Sackville suits are tailored really to fit?

MRS. GIBSON HAS RELAPSE; BLOOD TRANSFUSION TODAY FOR HALL CASE WITNESS

SHE HAD BEEN IMPROVING

State Expected to Call Her to Stand Early Next Week.

DEFENSE'S CASE IS READY

It Will Contend Fingerprints on Rector's Card Are Not Those of Willie Stevens.

GIRL CHANGES HER STORY

Schneider's Companion Now Swears He Led Her Directly to Bodies—Maids Testify Today.

Mrs. Jane Gibson, star witness for the State in the Hall-Mills trial, who was reported yesterday to be well enough to testify in the trial next week, suffered a serious relapse last night at the Jersey City Hospital and attending physicians determined that a blood transfusion would be necessary this morning to save her life.

Thomas Kent, a fireman attached to Engine Company 21 of the Jersey City Fire Department, was selected to give the blood. The transfusion will be made in the operating room of the hospital at 9 A. M. Kent is one of the members of the Jersey City police and fire departments who have submitted to blood tests for the determination of healthiness and type of blood and who are called upon to volunteer for transfusions when they are needed. He was notified last night that it was his turn and he agreed to submit to the transfusion.

Later Fireman Walter Graulick and Patrick Scott of Engine Company 14 were also asked to appear at the hospital this morning, prepared to undergo blood transfusion.

Earlier Bulletin Favorable.

Mrs. Gibson was believed yesterday to be improving and the news of her relapse was a surprise. Dr. Charles Eilly and Dr. Charles Snyder, two of her physician, said that her condition the last night was so grave that it was doubtful if she would be able to testify next week even if the blood transfusion was entirely successful.

Alexander Simpson, Assistant Attorney General, counted yesterday on Mrs. Gibson taking the stand next week. He insisted that only the approach of death would check his plans to have her testify. The following bulletin on Mrs. Gibson's condition was issued early last evening prior to the commencement of the relapse:

Mrs. Gibson is showing some improvement. Her temperature was lower this morning and the physicians are of the opinion that if the improvement continues it will be possible to produce her as a witness before the State rests its case.

Dr. CHARLES B. KELLEY,
Dr. JAMES J. DUFFY,
Dr. JOSEPH COMMORATO,
Dr. EDWARD DALY,
Dr. CHARLES SNYDER.

The defense in the Hall-Mills trial, it was learned yesterday, has planned a smashing offensive as soon as the State's case is completed. Counsel for Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her brothers, Willie and Henry Stevens, all accused of the murder of Mrs. Hall's husband, the Rev. Edward W. Hall, and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, will attack all the prosecution's evidences. They will contend with fingerprint experts that the print identified by other experts as that of Willie Stevens is not his. This contemplated move came during the recess taken for Armistice Day, prior to the resumption of the hearing at Somerville today and followed the prediction of Senator Simpson that his case would be completed by Wednesday.

Another "Eyewitness" Reported.

Another "eyewitness" loomed on the horizon of the Hall-Mills case. She was a "Mrs. S," who was reported, in an anonymous letter to an evening newspaper, to have been in De Russey's Lane on the night of the crime.

Senator Simpson said that he had conferred yesterday in this city with police officials regarding "Mrs. S." He said that the police had information that she and a New Brunswick man had been in De Russey's Lane and that at one point the man had observed two figures in the darkness and had exclaimed, "There is Mrs. Hall and Willie." Senator Simpson said that the New York detectives had promised to communicate the identity of "Mrs. S." to him this afternoon at 2 o'clock and that he would then ask Inspector John J. Underwood to assign a man to see what there was in the story.

The next point of the defense's attack will be on the story told on the stand by William Garvin, a former employe of the Burns International Detective Agency of New York. Garvin told of a visit he said had been made to the Burns office by Ralph V. Gorsline, vestryman of the slain rector's church. Garvin said that Gorsline had called on Oct. 1, 1922. This date

Girl in Diamond Rush of 5,000 Stakes a Claim in Transvaal

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Nov. 11 (AP).—In a diamond rush at Licntenburg, Transvaal, in which 5,000 runners participated, a young girl raced well to the front to peg a claim for her aged father.

Later, as news of the find spread, the rush developed into a motor car race.

FAITH IN RAIL SHARES NETS BAKER MILLIONS

He Bought New York Central Stock Anticipating Rise After Federal Control.

NOW OWNS 121,230 SHARES

George F. Baker, dean of Wall Street and one of the largest railroad stockholders in the country, has taken advantage of the rise in railroad securities which he felt would follow the resumption of private control and increased his stock holdings of the New York Central Railroad from 29,800 to 121,230 shares in the three years that ended with the beginning of 1926, according to a compilation issued yesterday by Dow, Jones & Co. Purchases were made while the stock was advancing from a low of 78⅝ in 1922 to a high of 137½ in 1925, giving Mr. Baker a profit of several million dollars.

Mr. Baker, however, is not the largest individual stockholder of the road. That place goes to Harold S. Vanderbilt, holder of 122,000 shares, while the largest owner, including companies as well as individuals, is the Oregon Short Line Railroad, subsidiary of the Union Pacific, which increased its holdings from 200,000 to 227,000 shares in the three-year period.

Vanderbilt Holdings Drop.

The Vanderbilt family, long known as the builders and owners of the New York Central, now hold altogether only 236,189 shares, or a little more than 5 per cent. of the total number outstanding. John D. Rockefeller Jr. joined the list of the twenty largest stockholders of the company in 1924 with the purchase of 43,500 shares, which he transferred the following year to the International Board of Education.

The holdings of Mr. Baker in the New York Central and the holdings of 16,500 shares by his son, George F. Baker Jr., are said to be the largest in any individual corporation except the First National Bank. In aggregate the Baker holdings in the Erie Railroad are understood to exceed slightly those in the New York Central, but have much less market value.

The twenty largest holders of the stock hold only 26.3 per cent., compared with 27.9 per cent. in 1916 and 21.8 per cent. in 1923. About 74,000 shares are held by the Securities Corporation of the New York Central Railroad for the employes.

Road's Leading Stockholders.

The following table shows the extent of ownership:

Between 1916 and 1925 the outstanding stock of the New York Central was increased from $249,560,400 to $383,254,000, but in the same period the average holding of stockholders dropped from 117 shares to 94 shares. At the beginning of this year the number of stockholders was 40,660, compared with 38,282 at the beginning of 1925.

HARVARD ALUMNI TELL WISH TO HEAL PRINCETON BREACH

PRINCETON SETS CONDITIONS

Seeks Evidence of Crimson Good-Will—Would Be Placed on Parity With Elis.

YALE IN PEACEMAKER ROLE

New Policy at Cambridge Called for Only Occasional Games With Princeton, Says Bingham.

Howard Elliott, Chairman of the Northern Pacific Railroad and President of the Board of Overseers of Harvard University, issued a statement yesterday urging that immediate overtures be made by Harvard toward a resumption of relations with Princeton. "For these two national institutions," he said, "to show the world that they cannot engage in manly sports without friction and bad feeling weakens their influence in the nation and does not help the general cause of wise education."

Mr. Elliott said that complete apologies should be tendered to Princeton by Harvard on behalf of all the official bodies concerned.

At the same time a movement was started at Yale to intervene in the rôle of peacemaker again to better relations between Princeton and Harvard and enable the Big Three to maintain its historic position in American college athletics.

Alumni for Peace Moves.

Influential members of the Harvard alumni favored an immediate effort to placate Princeton and restore the Yale-Harvard-Princeton combination. It was asserted that the alumni were almost unanimously opposed to the new Harvard policy of changing the annual Harvard-Princeton football classic to an occasional event and that strong pressure would be brought to bear by graduates against the advocates of this innovation.

Princeton should receive overtures for a renewal of relations with Harvard in a calm but critical spirit, according to a high athletic authority at Princeton, who said that a reconciliation would have to be preceded by these two conditions:

"1. Princeton would have to be convinced that the great majority of the Harvard undergraduates want the Princeton sentiments of respect and goodwill.

"2. Princeton would have to be assured that the authorities in charge of athletics at Harvard would wish competition with Princeton on a basis of equality with Yale."

The undergraduates have added, through the Princeton Senior Council, another condition without which no overtures from Harvard would be considered. This is that Harvard, Princeton and Yale play on a rotating schedule. Up to the present they have been on a fixed schedule under which Princeton first plays Harvard and then plays Yale, while the finale of the Big Three season is the Yale-Harvard game.

Want Evidence of Respect.

To interest Princeton in closing the breach with Harvard, it will be necessary, it was said, to show strong evidence of respect and friendship toward Princeton on the part of both the Harvard undergraduates and the Harvard athletic authorities. It was pointed out that these things were difficult of proof. Disavowals of the Lampoon and Crimson attacks on Princeton will not help the situation. It was said, because these things are not considered important in themselves, although they are regarded as having evidential value of a strong current of dislike and ill-will on the part of Harvard toward Princeton. Princeton officials and undergraduates are not interested in the punishment or repudiation of the comic journalists of Harvard, but must have some exhibit of a change of spirit striking enough to counteract the many evidences that the two institutions cannot get along well together.

Statement From Harvard.

The letter of the Princeton Board of Athletic Control containing the announcement of the severance of relations was received at Harvard yesterday by William J. Bingham, Director of Athletics there. A meeting of the Harvard Committee on Athletics was called, at the conclusion of which the following statement was issued:

"A meeting of the Committee on the Regulation of Athletic Sport at Harvard was held at noon today to discuss the telegram from the Chairman

Edison, at Telegraph Key, Excels Other Veterans

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 11.—Thomas A. Edison excelled today in a speed and accuracy contest in sending telegraph messages and received a gold telegraph sending key from the Lackawanna Railroad as a reward.

The test was held on board a special train taking Edison Company officials and officials of the Lackawanna Railroad from South Orange to New Village, N. J., to inspect the Edison Portland Cement Plant there and the new siding developments installed by the Lackawanna. The wires were rigged between the cars.

E. M. Rine, Secretary and Vice President of the Lackawanna, and P. J. Flynn in charge of traffic for the road, both veteran telegraphers, took turns conversing over the wires with the aged inventor, who as a young man was employed as railroad telegraph operator and showed today that he still retained much of his skill and speed.

LONDON HEARS ASIA IS FORMING LEAGUE

China, Soviet, Turkey, Persia and Afghanistan Reported Organizing to Combat West.

RUSHDI MEETS TCHITCHERIN

Persian Foreign Minister and Dr. Sze of China Conferred With Turks in Angora.

By T. R. YBARRA.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—That a formidable "Asiatic League of Nations" is being formed as a hostile counterpoise to the League of Nations centred at Geneva and that it is aimed primarily against Great Britain is the belief held in quarters here which may well be described as those least susceptible to swallowing merely sensational rumors.

The basis for this belief comes from two Eastern lands, both of which are seething with unrest and hatred of the Occident—Turkey and China. The reports which are current in London tonight are such as to make even people far from credulous believe that there is a new coalition in process of formation between Soviet Russia, China, Persia, Afghanistan and Turkey with the avowed aim of combating the Western World and especially the principles fixed by the Washington Conference.

What lends special seriousness in British eyes to the possibility that such a coalition is forming is the news emanating from Constantinople tonight that the "Asiatic League" is intended as a reply to the recent meeting between Sir Austen Chamberlain, the British Foreign Secretary, and Premier Mussolini of Italy, which is interpreted in the East as possibly foreshadowing a friendly alliance between Britain and Italy supplementing the Italian-Greek-Bulgarian understanding.

The London Times stated here tonight on excellent authority that Tewfik Rushdi Bey, the Turkish Foreign Minister, left Constantinople yesterday for Odessa, where he proposes to meet the Soviet Foreign Minister, Georges Tchitcherin. Elaborate precautions have been taken at Constantinople, it is stated, to keep the meeting between the two Foreign Ministers secret to the last moment.

Hears Treaty Will Be Signed Today.

Coupled with the recent visits to Angora of Mirza Abdul Hussein Khan Timurtash, the Persian Minister, it is felt that the forthcoming meeting between the Soviet and the Turkish Foreign Ministers lends substance to the view that some kind of Asiatic league, treaty or compact is under consideration. According to The London Times correspondent in Constantinople, a report is current in that city—which he gives under reserve—that Tchitcherin and Tewfik Rushdi Bey will sign tomorrow at Odessa a Turco-Russian treaty of alliance. Persia's adherence to this is considered uncertain. It is stated in Constantinople that the alliance is directed against a possible Italian-Greek-Bulgarian compact regarding Anatolia and Eastern Thrace.

The Constantinople press considers the forthcoming Odessa meeting especially significant, since it follows close upon Mustapha Kemal Pasha's speech at the opening of the Turkish Parliament, when he stressed the friendliness existing between Turkey, Soviet Russia, Persia and Afghanistan.

Dr. Sze Recently in Angora.

News from China reaching London reminds the English that Dr. Alfred Sze, the Chinese Ambassador to the United States, who was a fellow-mission her with Wellington Koo in the Chinese delegation to the Washington Conference, has been recently at Angora in connection with the plan fostered by Soviet Russia to form an Asiatic League of Nations composed of Russia, China, Persia, Afghanistan and Turkey, intended to compete against the League at Geneva.

These various reports tend to intensify the feeling here that the time has come for Great Britain to take more severe measures—if not against Turkey, at least against China. It is felt that it is no longer conceivable that the British Government should pursue a conciliatory policy toward China, since the latter has exhausted British patience.

The impression is growing in influential circles here that Britain has played with fictions long enough and must now deal with realties. The bulk of Chinese opinion, it is felt, is acutely hostile toward the British, and danger exists that the principles enunciated at the Washington Conference will be wrecked unless firm action is taken.

It must not be assumed that forcible intervention is being advocated here,

AGREEMENT TO END LONG CLOAK STRIKE SIGNED BY LEADERS

Terms Indicate a Defeat for Union in 19-Week Struggle Affecting 40,000 Workers.

$30,000,000 IN WAGES LOST

Employes Give Up 'Right to Job' Held Since 1910 and Their Demand for 36-Week Year.

BREAK IN TEXTILE STRIKE

The Passaic Worsted Spinning Company Reaches Agreement With Its Employes.

The leaders of the Garment Workers' Union and of the Industrial Council of Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers, Inc., agreed to end the nineteen-week strike at a meeting, which broke up at 12:45 this morning, in the office of Impartial Chairman Raymond V. Ingersoll, 132 West Thirty-first Street.

As the settlement of the "inside manufacturers" will be the basis of agreements with the two other employers' associations, the jobbers and contractors, the strike of 40,000 cloakmakers may virtually be said to be over. Formal agreements with the jobbers and contractors will be drawn within two weeks.

The formal agreement drawn up by the conferences, will be signed tomorrow, and meetings of the manufacturers and union members to ratify the pact will be held Tuesday. Both sides were confident early this morning that the agreement would be ratified promptly and the employes of the inside manufacturers would return to work next Wednesday.

See Satisfactory Solution.

In a joint statement issued when the meeting ended it was said that a satisfactory solution was reached which it was hoped would bring peace and prosperity to the industry. The meeting was held with A. E. Rothstein of 35 East Eleventh Street in the chair. Present also was Dr. Henry Moskowitz, who with Mr. Rothstein acted as mediator in the strike.

The agreement reached this morning affects the 7,500 employes of the inside manufacturers, who were led by Henry H. Finder, President of their association. A meeting of the General Strike Committee will be held this morning at Beethoven Hall to approve the new contract.

Agreements for the rest of the industry, represented by the jobbers and the submanufacturers, probably will be drawn up in a week or two, but the wheels of the industry will not be running normally until January, when mass production begins. Fifteen thousand cloakmakers are at work in the shops of the independents and contractors who settled with the union some time ago, 10,000 are still on strike and 7,500 are unemployed.

Strike One of Bitterest.

The strike was one of the bitterest ever fought in the industry whose annual output in this city is said to be $316,000,000. The wage loss to the workers as a result of the strike has been estimated at $30,000,000. The loss to the manufacturers cannot be estimated, but it was said to run into the scores of millions.

The strike, conducted by the left wing of the union, including a group of communists, followed the rejection of the report of the Governor's special commission. The report was favored by the more conservative right wing leaders as a basis for negotiation but their advice was not heeded.

The terms of the tentative agreement, which became known last night, indicated a severe defeat for the union, which surrendered the two cardinal points of its program, "the right to ths job" and the demand for a guarantee of thirty-six weeks of employment.

For a generation prior to 1900 the cloakmakers fought for and finally won "the right to the job," that is, permanent tenure of employment after a trial period of two weeks. Except for one year since then this right has been retained for the last fifteen years as the strongest weapon in the union armory. Under the new agreement the union surrenders this right and permits the manufacturers to reorganize their shops and discharge, if they wish, up to 10 per cent. of their employes every year. "Reorganization" has been bitterly fought by the union in every wage negotiation for fifteen years on the ground that to give the employers the right of "indiscriminate hire and fire" would mean "a return to the old slave psychology that existed when the worker was sweated

WORLD COURT ENTRY ONLY ON OUR TERMS, COOLIDGE SAYS IN KANSAS CITY SPEECH; WITHDRAWAL SEEN HERE AND ABROAD

Coolidge Speech Stirs Senators at Capitol; Move to Withdraw from World Court Forecast

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—President Coolidge's declaration in his Kansas City speech of the Government's position in regard to adhesion to the World Court protocol occasioned much comment in Senate circles this afternoon, although members of the Senate now in Washington, would make no statements for publication.

Senator Borah, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, simply said:

"It is all right as far as it goes," and added that that was all he would say.

In some circles the speech was interpreted as an indication that the Administration was confident now that the signatories of the Protocol would accept the reservations which the Senate voted into the resolution of adhesion and which were approved by the President.

Some were inclined to take the view that the Presidential utterance might lead to serious consideration of the proposition—which is certain to come up in the Senate—to vote the United States out of the Court.

Such a resolution is to be offered in the Senate by Senator Trammell of Florida, while Representative George H. Tinkham has announced he will submit a similar resolution in the House of Representatives.

As today was an unofficial holiday there were few Senators in the city.

MOVES TO RESTORE FRAZIER TO PARTY

Borah Writes Watson Asking That Posts Be Given Radical, Ousted by Senate Majority.

MOVE LIKELY TO SUCCEED

North Dakota Man's Vote Will Be Needed After March 4 Because of Party Losses.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Restoration of Senator Frazier of North Dakota to the committees from which he was ousted by the Republican Senate conference following his support of the La Follette Presidential candidacy in 1924 was proposed today by Senator Borah in a letter to Senator Watson of Indiana, Chairman of the Republican Committee of Committees of the Senate, in which he asserts that a mistake was made when Senator Frazier was read out of the party, and urges that action be taken to remedy it at the beginning of the coming session.

Inasmuch as the Republicans will be unable to organize the Senate after March 4 without the aid of every insurgent Republican, the expectation is that Senator Frazier not only will get such committee assignments as he desires but also will be restored to the rank which he would have held. Such action will place Senator Frazier in line for the Chairmanship of the Committee on Indian Affairs, which is now held by Senator Harreld, who was defeated in last week's election and will retire from the Senate on March 4.

While Senator Frazier's vote may not be needed on organization during the coming short session, Senator Borah proposes that he be restored to good standing as a Republican at once, and prospects are that this will be done.

Senator Frazier was one of four La Follette Senators who were ousted by the Republican Senate conference at the beginning of the present Congress. Two others, Senators La Follette and Ladd, have since died. The fourth is Senator-elect Brookhart, who was afterward ousted from the Senate and was elected last week to fill the Cummins seat.

Mr. Brookhart upon returning to the Senate after March 4 is certain to demand good committee assignments, and other insurgents, including the present Senator La Follette and Senator-elect Blaine, also of Wisconsin, will be in a position to dictate terms involving their support of the Republican committee slate.

WEST BADEN, Ind., Nov. 11 (AP).—Senator James F. Watson of Indiana said tonight he had not been informed of a movemsnt to bring about reinstatement of Senator Frazer on the standing committees of the Senate.

PERSHING ATTACKS BUYING OF OFFICES

In Armistice Day Speech at Chicago He Warns of Danger of Nation's Downfall.

WASHINGTON IS AROUSED

Utterance Is Declared General's First in Politics and Talk of His Candidacy Starts.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—"If the time ever comes when public offices can be virtually bought and sold, then the downfall of the Republic is not far off," declared General John J. Pershing today in an Armistice Day speech at the Kiwanis Club.

"In the light of recent events in certain States, some of our citizens would modify the methods of selecting candidates for office," he said. "If the present system encourages or permits the contribution of inordinate sums by wealthy candidates or their supporters, it should receive the most careful scrutiny by honest citizens.

"The presumption that large expenditures for campaign purposes may be made without ulterior motive does not appear to be warranted."

Lays Lawlessness to Lax Citizens.

Pleading for good government, General Pershing declared that "the spirit of lawlessness seems to be threatening the very foundation of our Government."

"Who are to blame for this disregard for law?" he asked, referring to conditions in Chicago.

"Who are responsible for this shameful condition? The only answer is that the citizens of Chicago are to blame. They alone are responsible. The Government can be no better than the average of its citizens.

"We can raise the standards of citizenship or we can allow them to decline. We can have exactly the kind of a government we want if, with firm resolve, we constantly exert ourselves to get it. If that statement is not true, then the system of government under which we live is a failure."

Sees Weakening of Moral Fiber.

General Pershing declared the whole situation regarding law and order in America indicated a weakening of the moral fiber of the citizens, the virility that prompts the citizenry to stand aggressively and fearlessly in the battle against ignorance, corruption and crime having disappeared. He emphasized the copartnership of all citizens, and pointed out that if they failed to shoulder their responsibilities they were inexcusably guilty of neglect.

When the honest and intelligent citizen evades his duty, he said, the self-seeking politician seizes the opportunity to ride into office with the support of the least intelligent, to whom sophistry and misrepresentation make strong appeal.

Denounces 'Trickery of Politicians.'

"The business of Government cannot thus be left to chance," he continued. "If the individual citizen does not let his voice be heard among his fellows, or does not give expression to his conviction at the polls, he is unworthy of his high mission. Timid citizens are quite useless as far as their influence in Government is concerned.

"It is too often the case that men of standing and ability shun public offices because of the difficulties they are likely to encounter through the trickery of cheap politicians," the General said in conclusion.

General Pershing also made a strong appeal for adequate preparedness in the course of his address, stating his opinion that if America had been ade-

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 11.—Declaring that the United States will not enter the World Court except under the conditions laid down by the Senate, President Coolidge, this forenoon delivered his Armistice Day address at the dedication of the $2,000,000 Liberty Memorial for World War heroes before an audience of 175,000 people, probably the greatest assemblage ever faced by a Chief Executive of the nation.

"While no final decision can be made by our Government until final answers are received, the situation has been sufficiently developed so that I feel warranted in saying that I do not intend to ask the Senate to modify its position," the President said.

"I don't believe that the Senate would take favorable action on any such proposal and unless the requirements of the Senate resolutions are met by other interested nations, I can see no prospect of this country adhering to the court."

Heard by Hundreds of Thousands.

A ripple of applause started in the vast throng that stretched for a quarter of a mile in all directions from the base of the tall memorial shaft where the President stood on a platform. The ripple grew to a wave, then merged into a roar of cheers. A few moments later when the President had ended the applause again surged up and became a mighty ovation.

The words were carried by amplifiers to those on the furthest edges of the thousands who had come here from all over the Southwest for today's ceremony and as well as to hundreds of thousands more by radio broadcast.

President Coolidge's answer to the country and Europe that the United States declines to agree to the counter World Court proposals of the Geneva Conference was the outstanding feature of his speech, which dealt mainly with post-war problems affecting America.

"Our main responsibility is for America," he said. "We want understanding, good-will, and friendly relations between ourselves and all other people. The first requisite for the purpose is a friendly attitude on our own part. They tell us that we are not liked in Europe. Such reports are undoubtedly exaggerated and can be given altogether too much importance.

Wants to Help Europe.

"We are a creditor nation. We are more prosperous than some others. This means that our interests have come within the European circles where distrust and suspicion, if nothing more, have been altogether too common.

Referring to the oft-repeated assertion by Europeans that the United States profited by the World War, the President said:

"We did not profit from it, but lost from it in common with all countries engaged in it. Some individuals made gains, but the nation suffered great losses. Merely in the matter of our national debt it will require heavy sacrifices extended over a period of about thirty years to recoup those losses."

The President reassured the world that the United States did not desire competitive military building and favored further limitation of armaments.

"We expect to provide ourselves with reasonable protection, but we do not desire to enter into competition with any other country in the maintenance of land and sea forces," he said.

Should occasion arise for conscription in the future, he declared, "it should be all-inclusive, applicable in its terms to the entire personnel and entire wealth of the nation."

Guns Salute the President.

Five years ago today Calvin Coolidge, then Vice President, arrived in this city accompanied by his friend, Frank W. Stearns of Boston. They rode in a Pullman compartment from Washington unheralded and unsung by their millions of American fellow-citizens along the line of the railroad. There was no sound of trumpet or military escort to receive them on their arrival at Kansas City. Mr. Coolidge came to lay the cornerstone of the war memorial dedicated today and was then assisted by General Pershing and Marshal Foch of France and other representatives of the Allies.

Today his reception was marked by all the dignity accorded to the nation's chief. Citizens of three States, numbering many thousands, welcomed him at the railroad station, and as his train entered the city at 8:30 A. M. a salute of twenty-one guns, trench 75s, was fired. Airplanes flew over the throng that had gathered to witness his arrival and to participate in

France Plans to Cut Army to 400,000 Men And Reduce Conscription Term to One Year

PARIS, Nov. 11 (AP).—Reduction of the total number of men under arms in France from 650,000 to 400,000 is called for in three bills which will be introduced in the Chamber of Deputies on the reopening of Parliament tomorrow. The measures also call for a reduction in the period of compulsory military service from eighteen to twelve months.

The bills, which will be introduced by Minister of War Painlevé, provide for the calling of conscripts at the age of 21 instead of at 20 and for the recruiting of volunteers numbering more than 100,000. The volunteers will relieve the conscripts from "fatigue details." Under this system the young soldiers will devote their entire year's training to purely military instruction.

The contingents of conscripts will be called up in half-yearly sections in order to insure the presence under the flag of half the entire army with at least six months' training.

M. Painlevé estimates that the new law will increase the expenditures of the War Department at its beginning, but he proposes to make up the additional sums needed from the sale and rental of idle property of the Department of War.

First Autoist to Get Ticket in Round-Up Of Speeders Dies Later in Day in Crash

Special to The New York Times.

ROCKVILLE CENTER, L. I., Nov. 11.—For two months automobiles have whizzed through this place without a single summons being issued, so Chief of Police Tyree E. Bacon decided it was time to take action. He added two motorcycle policemen to duty and began yesterday a drive against speeders and reckless drivers. By nightfall tonight forty-one persons had been summoned for speeding or for reckless driving. The lawful speed limit within the corporate bounds is twenty miles an hour and the police say that no car had been halted unless it was going at least five miles an hour faster.

The summons served, however, did not represent the number of motorists who had been stopped for questioning or warned to "go slow." The men on duty have had to listen to all sorts of excuses, from poverty to escape possible fines to burrying to sick relatives or friends.

In trying to avoid a signal light in the road at Valley Stream early this morning William R. Reis of 44 Union Avenue, Lynbrook, swerved his car so sharply that it was overturned. Mr. Reis, who was 64 years old, was killed. His companion, Mrs. Grace Loser of Valley Stream, was uninjured.

In the pocket of Mr. Reis's coat was found a summons issued by a member of the Rockville Center force for speeding. It was timed 7:10 o'clock yesterday morning and investigation showed that Mr. Reis was the first man to be served with a "ticket" when the drive began.

the dedicatory ceremonies of the memorial.

A reception committee of citizens headed by John T. Harding met the Presidential party as it left the train and guided them to automobiles. Preceded by an escort of regular cavalry from Fort Leavenworth, they proceeded two miles to the Hotel Muehlepach.

On both sides the street along the route was lined by crowds who gave welcoming applause, to which the President responded by lifting his silk hat, bowing and smiling. Mrs. Coolidge too was liberal with her smiles and signs of appreciation.

After breakfast and a rest for an hour the committee again took the Presidential party in charge and escorted their automobiles through the chief streets of the city, lined with cheering crowds, to the site of the memorial.

As the distinguished visitors approached the memorial the crowds became denser. Fully 150,000 people had gathered on the hill overlooking the spot where the memorial rose. So dense was the gathering that the massed tiers of color stretched beyond the range of vision at the monument.

The approach to the memorial was through an avenue of flags formed by the banners of all the States and of the allied nations. Dominating these as they floated in the breeze for a quarter of a mile was a large American flag and banked against the emblems in serried masses were thousands more of spectators, the citizens of the States. As the President and his companions drove through this lane of flags and faces he saw a sight, the like of which was never seen by any of his predecessors.

At the base of the memorial where a canopy had been erected over the platform stood veterans of the World War who had served in the 35th and 89th Divisions and members of civic organizations.

On the platform were seated many military and civil officers and religious dignitaries, including Governor Sam A. Baker of Missouri, Governor Ben S. Paulen of Kansas and Governor Harry S. Johnson of Oklahoma. Senator Capper of Kansas, and the heads of educational institutions. The arrival of the President was the signal for a salute of trumpets and the beginning of the exercises. A bugle sounded the call to worship after President Coolidge had taken his seat on the platform. The religious exercises were conducted by the Rev. I. N. V. McKay and Bishop Thomas F. Lillis. Mayor Bates introduced R. A. Long, who told the story of the building of the memorial. Then an ode in which a thousand voices joined was played by the band of the 110th Engineers. The dedicatory prayer was made by Dr. James B. Swinney.

At 11 A. M. the bells of the city tolled eleven times in memory of the signing of the armistice on Nov. 11, 1918. It was a signal for silence, not alone in Kansas City but throughout the United States, for each stroke of the tolling bells was broadcast.

As the bells were silenced the President arose and delivered his speech, braving the cold wind bareheaded and without an overcoat. He spoke for forty-five minutes.

Lent Her Shawl to President.

The President was probably saved from catching a severe cold by a war mother, Mrs. Catherine Brew, who sent her wool blanket to him so that he might be protected from the cold blasts as he sat on the platform. Richard Jarvis, Chief of the White House Secret Service force, carried an automobile blanket with him and put it around Mr. Coolidge. But the piercing air struck through the robe and the President asked for more protection. Mrs. Brew heard his request and braved the cold so that she might conserve the health of the President.

"I was too much aroused to mind the cold," she said, "and did not mind the weather. I am all right and I will doubly enjoy the blanket after it has been used by the President."

The President's speech was followed by brief addresses by the Secretary of War, Dwight F. Davis, and by Howard P. Savege, National Commander of the American Legion. "America" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" were sung by the great throng, and the benediction was delivered by Rabbi Harry H. Mayer.

Then to crown it all, a pillar of fire 217 feet high shot up from the memorial, bringing the ceremonies to a close.

After luncheon at one of the leading hotels, at which 600 persons sat down, the President and Mrs. Coolidge were taken on a sightseeing tour of Kansas City, Kan., across the river, where they were greeted by the biggest crowd ever assembled in that town.

At 3:30 the President and Mrs. Coolidge started in their special train for Washington, which they are scheduled to reach at midnight on Friday.

This West was overjoyed with Mrs. Coolidge. During her stay of six hours here and along the route of the parade, wherever she went, men and women gave an ovation for her. A corsage of her favorite roses and lilies-of-the-valley was presented to her on her arrival, and the management of the President Hotel, where she and the President had luncheon, presented her with a gold toilet service of fourteen pieces. This was displayed on the dresser of the suite assigned to the President and his wife. The gift was a complete surprise to Mrs. Coolidge. Mrs. Coolidge, on her return to Washington, will formally thank the donors.

ON BOARD THE PRESIDENTIAL TRAIN, SEDALIA, Mo., Nov. 11.—After leaving Kansas City the President's train traveled across Missouri at twilight and few persons were on the station platforms. Here, where the first stop was made, more than 500 persons greeted the President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Mrs. Coolidge tonight saw her own handiwork as a moving picture camera operator shown in her private car, along with several films made by professionals.

Last Summer she made pictures with a hand machine while at White Pine Camp and these were among those shown tonight. Other films were of scenes taken in Kansas City today in which the President and Mrs. Coolidge were prominent figures and scenes in the White House were also thrown on the screen.

SAYS COOLIDGE ENDS HOPE OF ADHERENCE

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Newspapers here lost no time in replying to President Coolidge's Kansas City speech. Although it had only a few hours to consider the President's words, The London Times tomorrow will print the following editorial:

"The speech which President Coolidge delivered yesterday must virtually destroy the expectation which was confidently held a few months ago that the United States would adhere to the Permanent Court of International Justice. The general regret which this prospect must inspire will only be sharpened by the reflection that the United States has always professed devotion to the principle of international arbitration and that President Coolidge was himself the principal advocate of American adherence. Detachment from the Court, which stands for peaceful settlement of international disputes, if it become definitive must chiefly be attributed to misunderstandings and will be a symptom of the wide difference of outlook which still separates the New World from the Old.

"The first misunderstanding arose when the United States was invited by the League Council to send delegates to Geneva at a time when the Assembly was meeting in order to discuss the Senate's reservations with representatives of the countries which had already signed the Court statute. The argument most commonly used in America by opponents of adherence had been that the Court was an integral part of the League and that acceptance of its statute would involve the United States in all the messes of League politics. The invitation to Geneva seemed to confirm these forebodings; and it was refused. The other States had therefore to discuss the reservations without participation of their author and were unable to accept them as they stood.

"The reservations made by the Senate were five in number. Adherence was not to imply assumption of any of the ordinary obligations of League membership. The United States was to have equal participation in the election of Judges. Congress was to determine the share of the United States in its expenses. The statute of the Court was not to be amended without the consent of the United States. Over acceptance of these four stipulations no difficulty arose. The fifth was the stumbling block. It posed the condition that the Court should not without the consent of the United States entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question 'in which the United States has or claims an interest.'

"This demand raised many obvious difficulties. It was calculated to put the United States in a special and privileged position in regard to the Court. The Council is accustomed on its own authority to refer numerous questions to The Hague without reference to members of the League who are not members of the Council. There seemed no reason why the United States, not being a member of the League, should alone be granted a veto of an arbitrary character.

"The members of the committee which considered the matter in September were careful to point out that the United States would be granted a position of perfect equality. They were ready to concede as an independent right that in cases where the United States was itself involved no reference should be made to the Court without its concurrence. But that this machinery of arbitration might be held up because the United States merely claimed an interest in the dispute was not conceded.

"No joint negative communication was made to the United States, but each Government was left to reply separately after the common consultation. A covering letter to the five stipulation was sent to each one of the members of the Court. The Washington Government had demanded this mode of reply; and the signature by the United States of The Hague statutes was made dependant upon this written acceptance by each individual state of the five stipulations without reserve.

"From the remarks of President Coolidge it appears that unanimous and reserved acceptance of the reservations is no longer to be expected, and The Hague Court, which of course has an American Judge upon the bench, must continue its excellent work without official American participation."

The Westminster Gazette thinks that some of those who read President Coolidge's speech at the unveiling of a war memorial may be tempted to recall Premier Poincaré's Sunday orations at similar ceremonies in France when his country occupied the Ruhr. The Gazette thinks that if the Americans are unpopular in Europe, as President Coolidge states, "it is not because they are prosperous, not because they are a creditor nation, but because they are creditors who insist upon their pound of flesh from debtors who, in the case of France, have persuaded themselves that this pound of flesh means their life blood.

"We agree that America has the right to present her bill to France as to us," the Gazette continues, "and we do not believe that France will be broken by paying it. But Coolidge will never persuade the French that America is merely motived by respect for 'the sanctity of obligations.' It is far more convincing to say at once, 'We need the money.' President Coolidge does, in fact, go on to admit that, for he adds that while the debt is not paid, 'it constitutes tremendous impediments against the ability of America to defend herself by military operations.' This appeal to the military needs of America, however, does not strike us as very happy, for there is no country in Europe which might not claim that its military needs are greater than those of the great Republic across the ocean.

"President Coolidge has a perfect right to be firm about the payment of debts. But nothing is to be gained by debating the ethics of the matter. The sooner these business matters can be settled and the talk dropped the sooner will mutual respect between the nations be restored."

Full Text of President's Armistice Day Speech

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 11.—Following is the text of President Coolidge's speech delivered today at the dedication of the Liberty Memorial for World War heroes:

Fellow Countrymen:

It is with a mingling of sentiments that we come to dedicate this memorial. Erected in memory of those who defended their homes and their freedom in the World War, it stands for service and all that service implies. Reverence for our dead, respect for our living, loyalty to our country, devotion to humanity, consecration to religion, all of these and much more is represented in this towering monument and its massive supports. It has not been raised to commemorate war and victory, but rather the results of war and victory which are embodied in peace and liberty. In its impressive symbolism it pictures the story of that one increasing purpose declared by the poet to mark all the forces of the past which finally converge in the spirit of America in order that our country as the heir of all the ages, in the foremost files of time may forever hold aloft the glowing hope of progress and peace to all humanity.

Five years ago it was my fortune to take part in a public service held on this very site, when General Pershing, Admiral Beatty, Marshal Foch, General Diaz and General Jacques, representing several of the allied countries in the war, in the presence of the American Legion convention, assisted in a formal beginning of this work which is now reaching its completion.

Today I return at the special request of the distinguished Senators from Missouri and Kansas, and on the invitation of your committee on arrangements, in order that I may place the official sanction of the National Government upon one of the most elaborate and impressive memorials that adorn our country. It comes as a fitting observance of this eighth anniversary of the signing of the armistice on Nov. 11, 1918. In each recurring year this day will be set aside to revive memories and renew ideals. While it did not mark the end of the war, for the end is not yet, it marked a general subsidence of the armed conflict which for more than four years ebook the very foundations of Western civilization.

Missouri and Kansas in the War.

We have little need to inquire how that war began. Its day of carnage is done. Nothing is to be gained from criminations and recriminations. We are attempting to restore the world to a state of better understanding and amity. We can even leave to others the discussion of who won the war. It is enough for us to know that the side on which we fought was victorious. But we should never forget that we were asserting our rights and maintaining our ideals. That, at least, we shall demand as our place in history.

The energy and success with which our country conducted its military operations after it had once entered the war has now become a closed record of fame. The experience of this thriving city and these two adjoining States was representative of that of the country. Soon came the marshaling of the National Guard. From its existing units in Missouri and Kansas the foundation of the Thirty-fifth Division was laid. The Eighty-ninth Division was raised almost entirely in these two States. A portion of the Forty-second, known as the Rainbow Division, came from this city. The whole martial spirit of this neighborhood, which within a radius of 200 miles had furnished the famous regiment of Missouri Volunteers, commanded by Col. John W. Doniphan when he made one of the most celebrated of marches to the conquest of Chihuahua in the Mexican War, reasserted itself as it had done in '61 and '98.

While these divisions were serving with so much distinction on the battlefields of France their fellow-citizens were supporting them with scarcely less distinction in patriotic efforts at home. They were furnishing money for Liberty loans, subscribing to the relief associations headed by the Red Cross, turning out munitions from the factories and rations from the fields. The whole community was inspired with devotion to the cause of liberty. Returning at the end of the war, these divisions have increased their distinction by being represented in high places in civil life. From the Eighty-ninth came the great administrator and Colonial Governor, Major Gen. Leonard Wood, and from the Thirty-fifth Division came a distinguished son of Missouri, the present Secretary of War, Col. Dwight F. Davis.

Expenditures for Veterans.

Under no other flag are those who have served their country held in such high appreciation. It is, of course, impossible for the eyes of the Government to detect all individual cases of veterans requiring relief in every part of our land. But the Veterans' Bureau is organized into departments and subdivisions, so that if any worthy person escapes their observation it is because the utmost care and attention could do no more. In the last eight years about $3,500,000,000 have been expended by the National Government for restoration, education and relief. Nearly $3,200,000,000 have been pledged to accrue in future benefits to all veterans.

Whenever they may be suffering from illness, whatever may be the cause, the doors of our hospitals are open to them without charge until they are restored to health. This is an indication of praise and reward which our country bestows upon its veterans. Our admiration is boundless. It is no mere idle form; it is no shadow without reality, but a solid and substantial effort rising into the dignity of a sacrifice made by all the people that they might in some degree recognize and recompense those who have served in time of national peril. All veterans should know this and be proud of it, and they are.

Considering the inspiring record of your soldiers in the field and the general attitude of appreciation which has been constantly reiterated by the whole nation, it would be but natural to suppose that this mid-western country would give appropriate expression to the honor and devotion in which it holds those who served their country and the ideals for which they were contending. But the magnitude of this memorial, and the broad basis of popular support on which it rests, can scarcely fail to excite national wonder and admiration.

More than one person out of four in the entire population of this city responded to an appeal for funds, which gave pledges in excess of $2,000,000. It represents the high aspirations of this locality for ideals expressed in forms of beauty. We cannot look upon it without seeing a reflection of all the freshness and vigor that marks the life of the broad expanse of the open country and the love of the sciences and the arts and the graces as expressed in the life of her growing towns. These results are not achieved without real sacrifice. They supply their own overpowering answer to those who charge our countrymen with a lack of appreciation for the finer things of life. Those who have observed such criticism cannot fail to discover that it results in large part from misunderstanding.

No Apology for Prosperity.

But assuming it to be correct, I am of the firm conviction that there is more hope for the progress of true ideals in the modern world even from a nation newly rich than there is from a nation of chronically poor. Honest poverty is one thing, but lack of industry and character is quite another. While we do not need to boast of our prosperity or vaunt our ability to accumulate wealth, I see no occasion to apologize for it. It is the expression of a commendable American spirit to live a life not merely devoted to luxurious ease, but to practical accomplishment. Nowhere is this better exemplified than in our great midcontinental basin. It is the spirit which dares, which has faith and which succeeds. It is not confined to materialism, but lays hold on a higher life.

No one can doubt that our country was exalted and inspired by its war experience. It attained a conscious national unity which it never before possessed. That unity ought always to be cherished as one of our choicest possessions. In this broad land of ours there is enough for everybody. We ought not to regret our diversification, but rather rejoice in it. The seashore should not be distressed because it is not the inlands, and the fertile plains ought not to be distracted because they are not the mountain tops. These differences which seem to separate us are not real. The products of the shore, the inlands, the plain and the mountain reach into every home. This is all one country. It all belongs to us. It is all our America.

We had revealed to us in our time of peril not only the geographical unity of our country, but, what was of even more importance, the unity of the spirit of our people. They might speak with different tongues, come from most divergent quarters of the globe, but in the essentials of the hour they were moved by a common purpose, devoted to a common cause and loyal to a common country. We should not permit that spirit which was such a source of strength in our time of trial to be dissipated in the more easy days of peace. We needed it then and we need it now. But we ought to maintain it, not so much because it is to our advantage as because it is just and human and right.

Our population is a composite of many different racial strains. All of them have their points of weakness; all of them have their points of strength. We shall not make the most progress by undertaking to rely upon the sufficiency of any one of them, but rather by using the combination of the power which can be derived from all of them. The policy which was adopted during the war of selective service through the compulsory Government intervention is the same policy which we should carry out in peace through voluntary personal action. Our armies could not be said to partake of any distinct racial characteristic. Many of our soldiers were foreigners by birth, but they were all Americans in the defense of our common interests. There was ample opportunity for every nationality and every talent.

War a Lesson in Democracy.

The same condition should prevail in our peacetime social and economic organization. We recognize no artificial distinctions, no hereditary titles, but leave each individual free to assume and enjoy the rank to which his own service to society entitles him. This great lesson in democracy, this great example of equality which came to us as the experience of the war, ought never to be forgotten. It was a resurgence of the true American spirit which combined our people through a common purpose into one harmonious whole. When Armistice Day came in 1918, America had reached a higher and truer national spirit than it ever before possessed. We at last realized in a new vision that we were all one people.

Our country has never sought to be a military power. It cherishes no imperialistic designs. It is not infatuated with any vision of empire. It is content within its own territory, to prosper through its development of its own resources. But we realize thoroughly that no one will protect us unless we protect ourselves. Domestic peace and international security are among the first objects to be sought by any government. Without order under the protection of law there could be no liberty. To insure these necessary conditions we maintain a very moderate military establishment in proportion to our numbers and extent of territory. It is a menace to no one except the evildoer. It is a notice to everybody that the authority of our Government will be maintained and that we recognize that it is the first duty of American to look after America and maintain the supremacy of American rights. To adopt any other policy would be to invite disorder and aggression which must either be borne with humiliating submission or result in a declaration of war.

While, of course, our Government is thoroughly committed to a policy of permanent international peace and has made and will continue to make every reasonable effort in that direction, it is therefore also committed to a policy of adequate national defense. Like everything that has any value, the army and navy cost something. In the last half dozen years we have appropriated for their support about $4,000,000,000. Taken as a whole, there is no better navy than our own in the world. If our army is not as large as that of some other countries, it is not outmatched by any other like number of troops. Our entire military and naval forces represent a strength of about 550,000 men, altogether the largest which we have ever maintained in time of peace. We have recently laid out a five-year program for improving our aviation service. It is a mistake to suppose that our country is lagging behind in this modern art. Both in the excellence and speed of its planes it holds high records, while in number of miles covered in commercial and postal aviation it exceeds that of any other countries.

Reasonable Protection, Not Competition.

Although I have spoken of our national defenses somewhat in relation to other countries, I have done so entirely for the purpose of measurement, and not for comparison, for our Government stands also thoroughly committed to the policy of avoiding competition in armaments. We expect to provide ourselves with reasonable protection, but we do not desire to enter into competition with any other country in the maintenance of land or sea forces. Such a course is always productive of suspicion and distrust, which usually results in inflicting upon the people an unnecessary burden of expense, and when carried to its logical conclusion ends in armed conflict. We have at last entered into treaties with the great powers eliminating to a large degree competition in naval armaments. We are engaged in negotiations to broaden and extend this humane and enlightened policy and are willing to make reasonable sacrifices to secure its further adoption.

It is doubtful if in the present circumstances of our country the subject of economy and the reduction of the war debt has ever been given sufficient prominence in considering the problem of national defense. For the conduct of military operations either by land or sea three elements are necessary. One is a question of personnel. We have a population which surpasses that of any of the great powers. Not only that, it is of a vigorous and prolific type, intelligent and courageous, capable of supplying many millions of men for active duty. Another relates to supplies. In our agriculture and our industry we could be not only well-nigh self-sustaining, but our production could be stimulated to reach an enormous amount. The last requirement, which is also of supreme importance, is a supply of money.

It is difficult to estimate in figures the entire resources of our country and impossible to comprehend them. It is estimated to be approaching in value $400,000,000,000. No one could say in advance how large a sum could be secured from a system of war taxation, but every one knows it would be insufficient to meet the cost of war. It would be necessary for the Treasury to resort to the use of the national credit. Great as that might be, it is not limitless. To carry on the last conflict we borrowed in excess of $26,000,000,000. This great debt has been reduced to about $19,000,000,000. So long as that is unpaid it stands as a tremendous impediment against the ability of America to defend itself by military operations. Until this obligation is discharged it is the one insuperable obstacle to the possibility of developing our full national strength. Every time a Liberty bond is retired preparedness is advanced.

It is more and more becoming the conviction of students of adequate defense that in time of national peril the Government should be clothed with authority to call into its service all of its man power and all of its property under such terms and conditions that it may completely avoid making a sacrifice of one and a profiteer of another. To expose some men to the perils of the battlefield while others are left to reap large gains from the distress of their country is not in harmony with our ideal of equality. Any future policy of conscription should be all inclusive, applicable in its terms to the entire personnel and the entire wealth of the whole nation.

Loss, Not Profit, in War.

It is often said that we profited from the World War. We did not profit from it, but lost from it in common with all countries engaged in it. Some individuals made gains, but the nation suffered great losses. Merely in the matter of our national debt it will require heavy sacrifices extended over a period of about thirty years to recoup those losses. What we suffered indirectly in the diminution of our commerce and through the deflation which occurred when we had to terminate the expenditure of our capital and begin to live on our income is a vast sum which can never be estimated. The war left us with debts and mortgages, without counting our obligations to our veterans, which it will take a generation to discharge. High taxes, insolvent banks, ruined industry, distressed agriculture, all followed in its train.

While the period of liquidation appears to have been passed, long years of laborious toil on the part of the people will be necessary to repair our loss. It was not because our resources had not been impaired, but because they were so great that we could meantime finance these losses while they are being restored, that we have been able so early to revive our prosperity. But the money which we are making today has to be used in part to replace that which we expended during the war.

In time the damage can be repaired, but there are irreparable losses which will go on forever. We see them in the vacant home, in the orphaned children, in the widowed women, in the bereaved parents. To the thousands of the youth who are gone forever must be added other thousands of maimed and disabled. It is these things that bring to us more emphatically than anything else the bitterness, the suffering and the devastation of armed conflict.

Spiritual Power Found in Peace.

It is not only because of these enormous losses suffered alike by ourselves and the rest of the world that we desire peace, but because we look to the arts of peace rather than war as the means by which mankind will finally develop its greatest spiritual power. We know that disciplins comes only from effort and sacrifice. We know that character can result only from toil and suffering. We recognize the courage, the loyalty and the devotion that are displayed in war, and we realize that we must hold many things more precious than life itself.

"Tis man's perdition to be safe
When for the truth he ought to die.

But it cannot be that the final development of all these fine qualities is dependent upon slaughter and carnage and death. There must be a better, purer process within the realm of peace where humanity can disciplins itself, develop its courage, replenish its faith and perfect its character. In the true service of that ideal, which is even more difficult to maintain than our present standards, it cannot be that there would be any lack of opportunity for the revelation of the highest form of spiritual life.

We shall not be able to cultivate the arts of peace by constant appeal to primal instincts. To the people of the jungle the stranger was always the enemy. As the race grew up through the family, the tribe, the clan and the nation, this sentiment always survived. The foreigner was subject to suspicion, without rights and without friends. This spirit prevailed even under the Roman Empire. It would not have been sufficient for St. Paul to claim protection because he was a human being, or even an inhabitant of a peaceful province. It was only when he asserted that he was a Roman citizen that he could claim any rights or the protection of any laws.

Old World Distrust a Warning.

We do not easily emancipate ourselves from these age-old traditions. When we come in contact with people differing from ourselves in dress and appearance, in speech and accent, the inherited habits of our physical being naturally react unfavorably. Nothing is easier than an appeal to suspicion and distrust. It is always certain that the unthinking will respond to such efforts. But such reaction is of the flesh, not of the spirit. It represents the opportunist, not the idealist. It serves the imperialistic cause of conquest, but it is not found in the lesson of the Sermon on the Mount. It may flourish as the impulse of the day, but it is not the standard which will finally prevail in the world. It is necessary that the statesmanship of peace should lead in some other direction.

If we are to have peace, therefore, we are to live in accordance with the dictates of a higher life. We shall avoid any national spirit of suspicion, distrust and hatred toward other nations. The Old World has for generations indulged itself in this form of luxury. The results have been ruinous. It is not for us who are more fortunately circumstanced to pass judgment upon those who are less favored. In their place we might have done worse. But it is our duty to be warned by their example and to take full advantage of our own position. We want understanding, good-will and friendly relations between ourselves and all other peoples. The first requisite for this purpose is a friendly attitude on our own part.

They tell us that we are not liked in Europe. Such reports are undoubtedly exaggerated and can be given altogether too much importance. We are a creditor nation. We are more prosperous than some others. This means that our interests have come within the European circle where distrust and suspicion, if nothing more, have been altogether too common. To turn such attention to us indicates at least that we are not ignored.

Attitude Toward Other Nations.

While we can assume no responsibility for the opinions of others, we are responsible for our own sentiments. We ought to be wise enough to know that in the sober and informed thought of other countries we probably hold the place of a favored nation. We ought not to fail to appreciate the trials and difficulties, the suffering and the sacrifices of the people of our sister nations, and to extend to them at all times our patience, our sympathy and such help as we believe will enable them to be restored to a sound and prosperous condition. I want to be sure that the attitude and acts of the American Government are right. I am willing to intrust to others the full responsibility for the results of their own behavior.

Our Government has steadily maintained the policy of the recognition and sanctity of international obligations and the performance of international covenants. It has not believed that the world, economically, financially or morally, could rest upon any other secure foundation. But such a policy does not include extortion or oppression. Moderation is a mutual international obligation. We have therefore undertaken to deal with other countries in accordance with these principles, believing that their application is for the welfare of the world and the advancement of civilization.

In our prosperity and financial resources we have seen not only our own advantage but an increasing advantage to other people who have needed our assistance. The fact that our position is strong, our finance stable, our trade large, has stendied and supported the economic condition of the whole world. Those who need credit ought not to complain but rather rejoice that there is a bank able to serve their needs. We have maintained our detached and independent position in order that we might be better prepared in our own way to serve those who need our help. We have not desired or sought to intrude, but to give our counsel and assistance when it has been asked. Our influence is none the less valuable because we have insisted that it should not be used by one country against another, but for the fair and disinterested service of all. We have signified our willingness to cooperate with other countries to secure a method for the settlement of disputes according to the dictates of reason.

Stands by Senate on World Court.

Justice is an ideal, whether it be applied between man and man or between nation and nation. Ideals are not secured without corresponding sacrifice. Justice cannot be secured without the maintenance and support of institutions for its administration. We have provided courts through which it might be administered in the case of our individual citizens. A permanent court of international justice has been established to which nations may voluntarily resort for an adjudication of their differences. It has been subject to much misrepresentation, which has resulted in much misconception of its principles and objects among our people. I have advocated adherence to such a court by this nation on condition that the statute or treaty creating it be amended to meet our views. The Senate has adopted a resolution for that purpose.

While the nations involved cannot yet be said to have made a final determination, and from most of them no answer has been received, many of them have indicated that they are unwilling to concur in the conditions adopted by the resolution of the Senate. While no final decision can be made by our Government until final answers are received, the situation has been sufficiently developed so that I feel warranted in saying that I do not intend to ask the Senate to modify its position. I do not believe the Senate would take favorable action on any such proposal, and unless the requirements of the Senate resolution are met by the other interested nations I can see no prospect of this country adhering to the court.

While we recognize the obligations arising from the war and the common dictates of humanity which ever bind us to a friendly consideration for other people, our main responsibility is for America. In the present state of the world that responsibility is more grave than it ever was at any other time. We have to face the facts. The margin of safety in human affairs is never very broad, as we have seen from the experience of the last dozen years. If the American spirit fails, what hope has the world? In the hour of our triumph and power we cannot escape the need for sober thought and consecrated action. These dead whom we here commemorate have placed their trust in us. Their living comrades have made their sacrifice in the belief that we would not fail. In the consciousness of that trust and that belief this memorial stands as our pledge to their faith, a holy testament that our country will continue to do its duty under the guidance of a Divine Providence.

Armistice Day Is Widely Celebrated by Many Nations

WHOLE CITY PAUSES ON ARMISTICE DAY

Two-Minute Period of Silence Observed as All Activities Are Suspended.

MANY CELEBRATIONS HELD

PARADE IN FIFTH AVENUE

With prayers and solemn services, and again with music and merrymaking, New York celebrated Armistice Day yesterday, commemorating the anniversary of the ending of the World War. In all parts of the city celebrations were held all through the day and until an early hour this morning, when the music of several of the Armistice Day dances was still to be heard.

Silent throngs stood with bared heads in a hundred places about the city in the morning at 11 o'clock, when the one great general observance of the day, the two minutes of silence, was participated in by many more persons than took part either in the parading, the unveilings, meetings, luncheons, dinners or dances. For one brief space the minds of the multitudes went back to the day, eight years ago, when fighting ceased and the world was at peace again.

Transit at Standstill.

Though the day was not generally observed as a holiday, the period of silence in the morning did extend to nearly every phase of activity. The subway trains stood still and street traffic halted, the machine-gun rattle of the pneumatic hammers on new structures was stilled, elevators stopped running in office buildings and crowds, at one ceremony or another, paused in silence.

A great throng had gathered at the City Hall. There two buglers from Police Headquarters sounded "Roll-Call." On the Cotton Exchange and the Coffee and Sugar Exchange trading stopped. In the Grand Central Station, scene of haste at all times, the rolling of the crowd was suspended while the old bell, long antedating even that used to signal the departure of trains, tolled at ten-second intervals as it has each Armistice Day for the last five years. No tickets were sold and the train gates were closed.

Many Couples Married.

Meanwhile, young couples had flocked to the Marriage License Bureau in the Municipal Building, where eighty-seven licenses were issued, as against sixty-four last Armistice Day, and where thirty-nine couples were married in the course of the day. In Traffic Court, Magistrate Andrew McCleary, observing the day in an odd manner, called first before him all veterans of the war and suspended sentence, so that they might be in time to participate in one or another of the parades. In the Brooklyn Navy Yard, as elsewhere, all activity ceased, and in the United States Naval Hospital, near by, all patients who were physically able to do so stood at attention during the two-minute interval.

The afternoon saw the greatest holiday activity. Perhaps the outstanding feature was the Armistice Day parade up Fifth Avenue, in which veterans of many armies participated, to the number of about 6,000. The parade, of which Brig. Gen. George Albert Wingate was the Marshal, left Twenty-sixth Street at 2 o'clock.

In the line of march were detachments from the near-by army posts, headed by the band of the Sixteenth Infantry. Sailors from ships of the Atlantic Fleet followed with the band from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, then several companies of marines, three companies of National Guard and a section of the Naval Militia. There was a thin line of the G. A. R. and Spanish War veterans. Then came members of the American Legion, the veterans of Foreign Wars, Boy Scouts and disabled veterans, representatives of various military orders, including the New York Chapter of the Rainbow Division and the Veterans of Allied Nations. Behind these was a substantial contingent of the Salvation Army, the Overseas Nurses' League, the American Red Cross and the Women's Overseas League, the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus and the Jewish Welfare Board War Workers.

It was a colorful though somewhat short parade. The wind blew coldly, yet Fifth Avenue, which was jammed, paused and watched. For nearly an hour the avenue, between Twenty-sixth and Fifty-ninth Street, was impassable because of the crowd.

Central Park Staff Dedicated.

This parade was a prelude to the unveiling in Centarl Park of a flagstaff given to the city by Mrs. Charlee Augustine Robinson, National Flag Lady of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. The staff, ninety feet high and mounted on a base of granite and bronze of extreme beauty, surmounts the little knoll, sometimes known as Music Hill, across the Mall, opposite the new bandstand.

Partly because of the bitterly cold wind, the ceremonies were somewhat shortened. General Wingate presented Mrs. Robinson, who spoke of the significance of the day and of the flag, and particularly of the city employes who had gone to the war and in whose memory she was giving the staff. Then Aldermanic President Joseph V. McKee, representing Mayor Walker, accepted the gift from Mrs. Robinson. In his speech he said that man was a creature of symbols and that this gift was but another symbol that the people would never forget the idealism and heroism of those who had gone into the war. Theodore V. Stitt, National Commander-in-Chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, offered, for Mrs. Robinson, a large new flag, which was run up to the top of the staff as the band played the national anthem.

Then a salute of twenty-one guns was fired and Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall spoke very briefly. Commander Stitt talked on the significance of Armistice Day and touched briefly on the World Court and the League of Nations.

Summerall Addresses Workers.

General Summerall had spoken earlier at the Armistice Day exercises of the Building Trades Council, where he had praised "that spirit of cooperation between labor and capital that has so noticeably increased since the war."

Hugh Frayne, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, also spoke.

From noon until 2 o'clock ceremonies were in progress on the steps of the Sub-Treasury in Wall Street, with Mrs. Edward Thomas in charge and Bishop Paul Jones, Secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, and Dr. Mary Halton of Gonverneur Hospital among the speakers. There were other meetings at the headquarters of the Women's Peace Society in Union Square and in the Community Church, and special ceremonies in the Hotel Roosevelt, to which the guests were called, by previous arrangement, by the fire alarm.

In Wadleigh High School Mrs. Winter Russell of the Women's Peace Society spoke to some 500 pupils on the significance of Armistice Day.

In the Knights of Columbus Hotel Cinh at Eighth Avenue and Fifty-first Street, the employes were gathered on the promenade roof and addressed by the manager, Lawrence Duling, on the significance of the day.

A special Armistice Day meeting was held by the Daniel Webster Lodge of the Independent Order, Free Sons of Israel. Maurice B. Blumenthal, former Deputy Attorney General, spoke.

The Woman's National Woodrow Wilson League gathered at the residence of Miss M. Cecelia Gaffney, 987 Madison Avenue, and listened to speeches by Mrs. Gaffney and others.

Brig. Gen. C. H. Mitchell, C. B., C. M. G., D. S. O., Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and Major Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, U. S. A., retired, were the principal speakers at the Armistice Day luncheon of the Canadian Club of New York, where Sir Harry Gloster Armstrong, K. B. E., British Consul General, was toastmaster.

Other Celebrations.

Brooklyn celebrated the day much as Manhattan did. A memorial flagstaff, in memory of the men and women of Pratt Institute who served in the war was dedicated in Institution Park at Ryerson Street and De Kalb Avenue, with appropriate ceremonies. Frederick B. Pratt, President of the Inetitute, was the principal speaker.

On the streets there was the interval of silence at 11 o'clock, and all vehicles came to a stop. In several of the high schools, appropriate exercises were held and in the courts and elsewhere, all activities were suspended during the two minutes set for the period of silence.

In Astoria Park, Astoria, Queens, a memorial monument was unveiled in the presence of delegations from military, civic and other organizations.

Last night there were several small dinners and many dances. The Federation of French Veterans of the Great War gave a ball at the Bronx Lyceum, with the Consul General of France, Maxime Mongendre attending. At the Hotel Plaza the British Great War Veterans held an elaborate and colorful ball. The Brooklyn Council of the Veterans of Foreign Wars held an Armistice Day ball at the Knights of Columbus Hall, Prospect Park West.

MANNING DECRIES PACIFISM.

Bishop Rebukes Critics of Army—"Taps" at Trinity Services.

Church services played a large part in the observance of Armistice Day, one of the most important being the memorial service for the 107th Infantry, the old Seventh Regiment, held in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Morningside Heights, at which Bishop Manning made the address. The Bishop said at one point:

"There is today in certain quarters a disposition to disparage and belittle our army and navy and to decry all measures of preparedness as tending toward militarism, and to condemn our participation in the World War as mistaken and as having accomplished nothing. Such a view is as harmful as it is false and foolish. The people who take that position were themselves defended and protected by those who gave their lives at the front. Our army and navy deserve our gratitude, our support and our appreciation and I am proud that one of the great bays of the nave of this cathedral is to be the army and navy bay and is to stand as a striking symbol and reminder of the place which they hold and of the noble service that they rendered."

The Bishop went on to speak particularly of the regiment and its service in the war, paying a high tribute to it and holding that the service of the regiment imposed an obligation on all to carry on in the same spirit its members displayed.

Trinity Church Services.

There were two services in Trinity Church, Broadway at Wall Street. The "church call" was sounded from the steps a little before eleven in the morning by a bugler from Governors Island. The straine of "Taps" brought the Broadway crowd to a standstill. Holy Communion was then celebrated in the church and at noon the Rev. Roland Cotton Smith, formerly of Washington, D. C., delivered an Armistice Day sermon.

Under the auspices of the Gold Star Association two services were held, a high requiem mass in the Roman Catholic Church of the Paulist Fathers, at Columbus Avenue and Sixtieth Street, at 10 o'clock, and a Holy Communion service in the Episcopal Church of St. Thomas's Fifth Avenue at Fifty-third Street, at 11 o'clock. At the former the Gold Star mothers occupied the front pews and the sermon was delivered by Father Peter E. Hoey. At the service at St. Thomas's, also, Gold Star mothers filled the front pews. The Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, the new rector of St. Thomas's, officiated.

An armistice service was held at noon in St. Petrick's Cathedral. Jacques Ungerer, the organist, played "The Star-Spangled Banner" and other patriotic airs. Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle was called suddenly out of town and his place as preacher was taken by the Rev. Bernard F. McQuade, the assistant rector.

Father McQuade based his sermon on an editorial in yesterday's NEW YORK TIMES, which was headed "Eight Years After." The priest commended the editorial and said it agreed with his sentimente.

SUGGESTS AIR PILGRIMAGES.

Julius Hyman Calls for Easier Access to Unknown Soldier's Tomb.

Airplane pilgrimages to the tomh of the Unknown Soldier in the Arlington National Cemetery from various cities in the East on Armistice Day was proposed last night hy Julius Hyman of the National Security League in an address at the Armistice Day service in the West Side Branch of the Y. M. C. A., 318 West Fifty-seventh Street.

Mr. Hyman deplored the fact that unlike the unknown soldiere of France and England the American soldier rests in a place not readily accessible to the average American citizen. He referred to the Unknown Soldier as the greatest common denominator of 4,000,000 men, privates and officers of the A. E. F., and the great symbol of democracy that came out of the war. "The average American," he said, "finds it inconvenient to visit his grave. Therefore I have suggested this pilgrimage through the air."

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Assisted hy the relatives of eight White Plains men who lost their lives in the World War, Mayor F. C. McLaughlin and city officials unveiled today four bronze tablets containing the names of men and women from this city who served in the war. They are in the rotunda of the City Hall.

This morning a two-minute tribute of silence was observed while traffic was halted in the streets. Ceremonies in connection with the dedication of a new flagpole at the City Hall and the acceptance hy the city of a flag given hy the Chamher of Commerce were also held.

After the silent tribute the call to the colors was sounded, twelve aerial bombs were set off.

DR. FOSDICK SCORES OUR STAND ON PEACE

Sees Us as Indifferent, Due to Failure to Aid in Solving the Problems of War.

HITS AT MILITARY TRAINING

G. W. Wickersham Criticizes Our Staying Out of League of Nations and World Court.

The Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick and former United States Attorney General George W. Wickersham took this country to task last night for failing to make her contribution to world peace.

Dr. Fosdick, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, emphasized the progrese the War Department has made in enforcing compulsory military training in high schools and colleges. He condemned the department strongly, ending with the warning that the department "keep its hands off our civil institutione." Both speakers spoke at the Armistice Dey service of the Greater New York Federation of Churches at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street.

The idea that the enforcement of compulsory military training in the schools of the country le necessary for defense purpoees is "aheurd," Dr. Fosdick said. The War Department in saying that, he declared, "is pulling the wool over your eyes."

"What has that got to do with turning our high schools for the first time in the history of our country into military academies and our universities into miniature West Points?" he asked. "There is no need of it. The strongest and richest country in the world need not take that hackward step to the jungle that other countries are trying to step out of."

Dr. Fosdick declared it was now necessary that all, especially the Church, work ardently for peace. He said it must be the "American temperament" that made it possible for the people here to lose the intereet in the question of war that it had even five years ago.

Mr. Wickersham criticized the country for remaining out of the League of Natione and the World Court. He bespoke the need for our heing friendly with the other nations of the world and added: "Our public men, epeaking in national assemblies, muet guard their tongues and not unnecessarily and gratuitouely insult other nations." He asked also whether it was necessary for Japan to be treated "with contumely and ecorn and insulted in the legislative halle of the United States."

The Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, who presided, said that if the nations had departmente of peace, as they have departments of war, and expended the same energy in such departments, "we might have the world without international strife."

SEES AMERICA UNITED BY THE WORLD WAR

General Summerall Describes 1918 Armistic Day in France at Military Order Dinner.

The unification of the American people is the greatest thing that has come to us from tho World War, Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, Commander of the Second Corps Area, who will become Chief of Staff later thie month, said last night at an Armistice Day dinner dance of the Military Order of the World War at the Hotel Astor.

General Summerall told how the Fifth Corps, which he commanded at the time of the armistice, had established itself behind the German lines expecting in forty-eight hours to he in Luxemburg on the way to the Rhine, when at 8:30 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 11, 1918, the order came to cease firing at 11 that morning.

It was difficult to get word to all commands along the eight-mile front, the General said, and later a radio message was received from General Headquarters to the effect that the Germans had complained "one American regiment would not cease firing until noon."

SAYS EUROPE HATES US.

Ex-Ambassador Gerard Urges Caution in Foreign Relations.

James W. Gerard, former United States Ambaseador to Germany, told an audience last night at the Richmond Hill High School during an Armistice Day celebration of American Legion Post 212 that all Europe hated the United States.

"All Europe," he said, "united at The Hague against America. Europe considers America as a Shylock demanding his pound of flesh at all times. America should prepare herself against the economic advantages Europe might hold and should be cautious in all its dealings with it."

FRENCH ARMISTICE DAY IS MEMORIAL TO DEAD

American Tribute Is Placed on Tomb of Unknown Soldier at Ceremonies in Paris.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Armistice Day was observed in France with almost religious fervor. It was celebrated less as the commemmoration of the victory of democratic nations over imperialist Central Europe and more as a memorial service for the 10,000,000 whose livee were forfeited in the great struggle.

These dead seemed present in spirit at the ceremonies at the Arc de Triomphe in Paris today. Soldiers who paraded before the tomh of the Unknown Soldier and the battle flags of 250 disbanded French regiments gave a salute to the President of the republic, members of the Government and diplomatic corps. But their salute appeared to reach out beyond the living of today and render a touching tribute to the countless dead of yesterday.

Nov. 11 in France has already a tradition—although it has been celebrated only eight times since the wild pandemonium and the joyful release from horror manifested on that first Armistice Day in 1918. Tradition has made it a day of meditation and prayer. This was strikingly evidenced throughout the memorial services of the entire nation—by the march past of disabled veterans, the hlind led by their wives or friends, the legless pushed in wheelchairs—by tributes laid on the Unknown Soldier's tomh and by rituals in every church and cathedral.

Americans here shared fully in the French ceremonies. A color guard of the American Legion attended the special service in the American pro-cathedral and escorted Admiral Burrage to the Unknown Soldier's tomb, where a wreath was placed in the name of our nation.

Speaking at Holy Trinity, Ambassador Herrick evoked the solemnity of the occasion. He said: "Was it not precisely that fiery ordeal through which we passed thet has changed the character of observance of thie Armistice Day? For now we come not with blares of trumpets to glorify the great victory hut rather in a spirit chastened by the moet etupendous tragedy that ever descended upon mankind and tempered by these yeare of toil, anxiety and struggle toward the victory of peace."

PARIS, Nov. 11 (AP).—At the sunset hour the ceremony of relighting the "perpetnal flame" above the Unknown Soldier's resting place was carried out. Thia year the honor fell to General Gouraud, "the lion of the Argonne," the one-armed Military Governor of the Paris district.

Delegations from the American Legion and the auxiliary visited the principal A. E. F. battlefield cemeteries, holding brief services and decorating the gravee, while a similar commemoration took place at Suresnes Cemetery, outside Paris.

'DOWN WITH KING,' CRY DUBLIN REPUBLICANS

Youthful Band Is Clubbed by Police Following Armistice Day Celebration.

DUBLIN, Nov. 11 (AP).—Excitable soldiers returning thls afternoon from Phoenix Park, where Armistice Day celebrations were held, got out of hand in the streets of the city, and the police were obliged to resort to baton charges to stop the disorders. Several persone were injured and required hoepital treatment.

One body of youthful Republicans marched along Grafton Street shouting "Down with King George." The police clubbed them severely, causing a wild stampede.

The day ended with a series of riotous demonstrations and the police were again called upon to disperse the fighting crowds with their batons.

Nine persons were eent to the hospital and many others were hurt in the various mêlées throughout the day. Some of them were women who were caught in the clashes between the demonstrators and police.

The worst disturbance was in the evening in O'Connell Street, where a party of poppy wearers was intercepted by Republican rowdies. A wild scene followed, and civic guards clubbed the disturhers, felling several of them.

It was to avoid the blocking of street traffic by crowds, with possible chances of disordere eimilar to those which characterized former celebrations on Armistice Day, that the authorities eelected Phoenix Park. This park was the scene of the assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish, Chief Secretary for Ireland, and Thomas H. Burke, Under Secretary, in 1882.

A wooden cross which had stood at Guillemont was erected near the Wellington Monument and guarded by Saoretat police. General Hickie, who commanded the Irish Division in the war, was the leading figure in the celebration.

Thousands of former service men paraded, and there was a great gathering of people wearing poppiee "for remembrance."

PERSHING ATTACKS BUYING OF OFFICES

quately prepared the war would have been ended many months sooner, with much less lose of life.

Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan of New York, who commanded the Twenty-seventh Division, addressing a meeting of thirty organizations devoted to world peace, declared that war-time unity and discipline would solve the problem of ending war in this generation.

Contrasting the methods of those who make war and those who seek peace, he said:

"War is a highly organized business, supported by Governments. It does its thinking without prejudice. It is disciplined.

"Peace? We have fifty-two organizations in the United States working separately and independently to attain it."

Pershing Speech Stirs Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The speech of General John J. Pershing at Chicago, in which he indirectly criticized the expenditure of large campaign funds in the Pennsylvania and Illinois primaries, and directly criticized the tendency to pour out great sums of money in primaries, created great interest in Washington today, hecauee this was the first occasion on which the General has invaded the realm of politics.

Some political leaders asked if the speech indicated that the Commander-in-Chief of the A. E. F. was developing political aspirations of his own, or if his expression was merely that of a nrivate citizen. Four years ago, Nebraska friends started a Presidential boom for the General.

Pinchot Pleads for Clean Elections.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11 (AP).—Declaring that the States of Pennsylvania and Illinois today "carry a blot whose blackness is far better recognized ontside of Pennsylvania than in this Commonwealth," Governor Pinchot in an Armistice Day address said that corruption of elections ranks among the most dangerous of all attacks on free government.

The Governor spoke on "Education for Citizeneship" in the Pennsylvania Building at the Sesquicentennial Exposition.

"No more dangeroue attack was ever made upon the self-government which our fathers won, and no greater cauee calls for the backing of the men who fought the great war than the cause of the purity of the hallot," said Mr. Pinchot.

"And until a new generation can be educated to regard any tampering with the ballot as what it truly is—the most contemptible and most dangerous of all crimes—there is no fight better worth making anywhere by an American citizen than the fight for clean elections.

"In the eyes of their sister States, Pennsylvenia and Illinois carry today a blot whose blackness is far better recognized outside of Pennsylvania than it is in the Commonwealth, and Pennsylvania and Illinois are, unfortunately, not alone. There has been a vast increase in the purchase and theft of elections in America in the last few years."

WILSON IS EULOGIZED BY PROFESSOR FISHER

His Foes Will Learn to Revere Him, He Says, Calling Armistice Day His Day.

Professor Irving Fisher of Yale University, speaking last night at the fourth annual dinner of the Woodrow Wilson Association of Hudson County held at the Carteret Club in Jersey City, declared that if war were abolished the historians would date the new peace epoch from Armistice Day, which, he added, was Woodrow Wilson's day.

Profeseor Fisher said that the League of Nations was the greatest monument to Wilson and that those who had misunderstood him would learn to revere him through it. He declared that Poland, Austria and Germany had been put on their feet by the League of Nations. It was no exaggeration, he said, to say that Wilson, intellectually, was the best President the country ever had.

It was certain that the United States would join the League of Nations and the World Court, for, Professor Fisher added, it was a natural step in evolution.

Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under Wilson, said there was no alternative except for the United States to join the League.

Governor Moore of New Jersey made a brief speech in which he said that Wilson was a sacrifice to the war just ae was the soldier who fell on the field of hattle. He said he believed he was a better Governor and a better citizen because of the inepiration of Wilson's career.

The Rev. Dr. John Howard Melish also eulogized the late President. Judge George G. Pennant of Jereey City presided. Another speaker was Joseph P. Tumulty, former secretary to President Wilson. There were about 200 members of the association present.

LAUDS US AS FRIEND OF THE DOMINIONS

Premier Bruce of Australia Sees Hope of World's Peace in Anglo-American Amity.

URGES CLOSER SOLIDARITY

Speaking as Page Lecturer in London He Offers His Aid to Mutual Understanding.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—"While America and the British Empire continue to work together there is still hope for mankind," was one of the most striking sentences from a remarkable speech delivered today by Premier Bruce of Australia, one of the most prominent statesmen now here for the Imperial Conference.

The friendship between the United States and the British Empire is the best guarantee for world peace and disarmament, he believes. He has touched upon this pet theory of his before, but never in such telling words as in his speech of today which he delivered, as the Walter Page memorial lecturer of this year, under the auspices of the English Speaking Union.

Premier Bruce made one thing particularly clear—Anglo-American friendship, as he conceives it, is not just friendship between Americans and the English but friendship between the Americans and Britons of the entire British Empire. Since the British Dominions are peopled by folk akin to the Americans, with problems similar to those of the Americans, they therefore understand the Americans better than the English do.

Moreover, since the people in the Dominions also understand the English better than the Americans ever can, they should interpret the Americans to the English, and vice versa, thus doing the best possible work toward world peace. That, in a nutshell, is the Bruce idea.

Sees Hope of Disarmament.

"With that mutual understanding and respect which I am convinced can be brought about between the peoples of the great American nation and the British Empire the world's peace can be assured in the future and the way paved for progressive alleviation of the hideous burden of armaments, which today is pressing so heavily upon all nations."

In that sentence, Premier Bruce struck the keynote of his remarkable plea for solidarity. Throughout his speech he consistently hammered at this same idea and sought to impress his hearers with the essential similarity in ideals between the Americans and the peoples of the British Dominions.

"Our relations with the United States always have been most cordial and we have had repeated evidences of the enthusiastic friendship which exists between our respective peoples," he said. "It is not too much to say that the Dominions have, in their general relations with the United States, contributed more than a little towards the friendship which now exists between America and the empire. To us in Australia this friendship is of vital concern.

"We feel that when America struck the blow for her freedom at the end of the eighteenth century she struck a blow for all British Dominions of today. Her success has found expression in our full measure of empire citizenship. If English-speaking nations are to continue to grow in amity and mutual knowledge both Americans and Englishmen must understand that it is not simply a question of relations between their respective countries but one of contacts between the United States and the great commonwealth of nations known as the British Empire.

Steadying Force in World.

"We look to America to join with us as a steadying force in the affairs of the world."

Then, as if to show that his remarks were based on a real desire to help toward the Anglo-American friendship which he visualizes, Premier Bruce offered his own personal services toward achieving it in these words:

"It seems to me that possibly an outsider—free from the complexities and perplexities of the European outlook but who as a Dominion Prime Minister and a member of the Imperial Conference has been enabled to gain light and understanding of them and who at the same time is able to understand the attitude of the people of the United States through natural affinities between it and his own country—might do some small thing to help."

Concerning the great work coming in future years, he said:

"These great tasks can only be accomplished by cooperation between the great English-speaking nations of the world—the United States of America and the British Empire. Surely, when two great democratic peoples set out with the same objective only the most colossal stupidity and ignorant bungling can prevent the attainment of their ideals.

"Let us not drift aimlessly toward the future, but endeavor to shape our destiny by wise far-seeing action. Together we can ensure the world's peace. Acting in cooperation we can promote the great principles of liberty and justice for which the war was fought and ensure a standard of international honor among nations."

The Australian Premier paid a sincere tribute to the work of Walter Hines Page, who as the American Ambassador to Great Britain, he said, did excellent work toward promoting friendship between the English-speaking nations.

Before Premier Bruce's speech a cablegram of greeting from ex-Ambassador John W. Davis, President of the American branch of the English Speaking Union, was read.

Poet Skeptical of Bruce Aims.

The Morning Post, commenting on Premier Bruce's proposal that the United States and the British Empire might cooperate, remarks that when an attempt is made to apply this principle of cooperation nothing seems to result. The newspaper says it was a very great pity that Great Britain's alliance with Japan to secure the interests of the two nations in the Far East was allowed to lapse.

Increased friendship with the United States had offered no compensating advantages in the Far East. "On the contrary," says The Post, "the Chinaman contrives very easily to work on the commercial rivalry of the two nations and by ostentatiously concentrating his attack on British interests contrives to blind Uncle Sam to the fairly obvious consideration that his turn will certainly come."

The Post also finds Secretary Hoover's condemnation of Great Britain's restriction on rubber production "trifling," in view of his latest plan to restrict next year's cotton acreage.

ALL LONDON BOWS IN SILENT HOMAGE

Poppies of Remembrance Redden City as Great Concourse Honors Britain's Million War Dead.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Britain's million war dead received a tribute of two minutes' silence throughout the Empire at 11 o'clock this morning, eight years after the granting of the Armistice to Germany.

London itself was a city of sadness and of red poppies. For in the swarming streets one could see hardly a man, woman or child who did not wear the scarlet passion flower, native to the battlefields of France and Belgium, in memory of father, brother or friend.

The Cenotaph to the dead in Whitehall and the Unknown Warrior's Tomb in Westminster Abbey were banked with flowers, carried thence all day long by a steady, reverent stream of people.

As 11 o'clock neared, the approaches to the Cenotaph and the Abbey were packed. Besides the populace, guards of honor from England's most famous regiments and battleships had come to pay the Army's and the Navy's tribute.

Just before the hour of 11 struck, the King, who, accompanied by the Queen, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York, arrived at the Cenotaph with wreaths.

Then the "great silence" began. At the Cenotaph not even a cough broke the two sacred minutes of silence. Except in a few instances, the same silence obtained throughout the metropolis and in the few instances in which it was broken, those who broke it suffered at the hands of those who had observed it.

The ceremony at the Cenotaph was made all the more impressive by the presence of the Dominion Premiers, together here on an Armistice Day for the first time.

LONDON, Nov. 11 (AP).—When "Big Ben" struck the hour of 11 this morning and a gun boomed on the Horse Guards' parade ground, London offered its two-minute silent homage to Britain's war dead.

The hush came so suddenly that it seemed to vibrate up the entire length of Whitehall and left the spectators in a medley of bewildered feelings.

Some prayed silently, but openly, for the repose of the warrior dead; some women sobbed; some—veterans with flapping sleeves or crutches—only looked with steely eyes straight ahead. For them eight years were but a brief span which had failed to heal the scars and wounds of war.

Women were predominant in the vast crowd. One mother, Mrs. George Gratten of Hereford, who lost three sons, walked the entire 145 miles to attend the service, carrying a home-made wreath.

Another service was held at the Unknown Warrior's grave in Westminster Abbey, in which the Dean broke his own rule and permitted a tiny girl to place six roses on the grave.

INTERNATIONAL MIND HELD NEW NEED HERE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 11.—Training for citizenship that would teach Americans to think nationally and internationally instead of sectionally was declared to be a necessity in an Armistice Day address delivered here by Rabbi Jonah B. Wise of New York in Woolsey Hall, Yale University.

"Whether we wish it or not, we are in fact aed in hener boued to consider ourselves as parties to ths program of international affairs. Te meet thie obligation henestly and in the American epirit we must begin a new politieal training for our citizenship," Rabbi Wise asserted.

"We Americans are our own Government," he said. "The policies of eur nation can be shaped definitely by the will of its citizens.

"World affairs have changed so that we are profoundly affected by and intimately responsible for the welfare of all humanity.

"We cannot, as we presumed to do in 1914, continue to act as the umpire of European battles. Both as an outstanding creditor and as a sharer in international welfare we are forced to consider ourselves bound to the policy of active interest in and influence upee the affairs ef natiens. Officially and unefficially the werld eenenlite us.

"World peace and werld prosperity rest upon the intelligent and heneet opieion of the American electorate. The American must know the world in order properly to fulfill the responsibility which new developments have placed upon him."

PILSUDSKI IS HAILED AT WARSAW PARADE

Dictator Wins Personal Triumph in Polish Armistice Day Festivities.

STRENGTHENS HIS HAND

And He Is Now Expected to Win in the Battle Which Opens in the Sejm Tomorrow.

WARSAW, Nov. 11.—Marshal Pilsudski tested his popularity in Poland at the Armistice Day celebrations today, also the anniversary of his return from a German prison in 1918, and won.

Seated astride his twenty-five-year-old sorrel mare in a drizzling rain he remained nearly motionless for two hours while thousands of troops passed in review in his honor amid the cheering of multitudes packed in the square where the old Russian Church had been demolished. Waves of feeling surged through the crowds as the Marshal, diverting attention from the crack battalions, lowered his head and spoke words in the ear of the veteran animal and doffed his white gloves by caressing the neck and ears of the docile steed which bore him in the first dash against the foe at the head of the Polish legionnaires in 1914.

Despite the fact that he was plain target from the scores of windows surrounding the square from which shots might have been fired the Marshal remained like a statue throughout the review, one of the greatest military gatherings in Poland since the war.

Typifying the sentimeet with which he was received, the Marshal as he dismounted after the review and approached the diplomats of the foreign countries was interrupted by a rabbi of Ostrolenka, in the Vilna district, who presented him with a huge bouquet with a message. The flowers came from Jews who appreciated the interest he had taken in them as citizens of Poland. This was the only tribute offered and left the crowd gasping, as it was a symbol that the Marshal had succeeded in welding the last Polish minorities into his organization.

Greets American Minister.

The American Minister, J. B. Stetsen Jr.; the American Military Attaché, Colonel Richard L. McKenny, and Third Secretary, Stanley Hawks, were with the diplomatic corps, receiving cordial handshakes from the dictator, who has reached his highest point of power on this anniversary of his return in 1918 to become the first Chief of State.

The military demonstration, during which fully 30,000 soldiers marched in the city, was pretentious and impressive, while the civilian tribute was scarcely less enthusiastic among the thousands packed on roofs, in windows and on the streets.

The slowly marching infantry, the trotting machine gunners, the galloping artillery and cavalry were a sight to watch as the gray Marshal, clad in the horizon blue uniform of the First Legionnaires, bearing a breastful of decorations, sat on his old horse, long pensioned in Southern clover fields.

No salute was fired and no airplane circled above because of the low clouds, but a thousand pigeons unloosed from army cages circled three times above the galloping cavalry.

Battle Starts Tomorrow in Sejm.

The military parade is the most elaborate event of the week of festivities in Warsaw, but it will be exceeded in importance by the meeting of the National Diet on Saturday, in which a battle to the death will begin between that unsympathetic body and the Marshal. With his popularity notably demonstrated in today's rain and mud, there is little hope of the opposition putting anything over, and it is believed in many quarters that the Sejm meeting was delayed until after today's enthusiastic public demonstration by the confident Dictator, who is running the Polish show much as he pleases.

Marshal Pilsudski bestowed honor on the Japanese this week when he named Mlle. Teiko Kiwa, the first Japanese girl to sing Butterfly in the National Opera here, as aide to President Mosciski at the unveiling of the statue to Chopin on Sunday. Work on the statue has been in preparation for twenty-two years, but it was not completed until the popular subscriptions of the last eight years made it possible. The statue shows the composer seated under a bronze weeping willow and it will be placed in front of Pilsudski's palace in Lazienki Park. It was executed by the Polish sculptor, M. Szynanowski, in Paris.

WOULD CANCEL DEBTS FOR PEACE ERA ONLY

Dr. Poling Tells Religious Leaders We Should Act to Outlaw War.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 11 (AP).—Any movement to cancel European war debts due the United States should be based upon assurances that the world would disarm and outlaw war, thus perfecting a lasting and world-wide peace, Dr. Daniel A. Poling of New York today told religious leaders and others gathered here for the International Good-Will Congress of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches.

The congress heard Dr. Poling after receiving a draft treaty of disarmament under which the nations of the world would pledge themselves eventually to reduce armamente to a minimum necessary for domestic protection only. As the peace advocates received the treaty and listened to the good-will addresses, the roll of drums, the tramp of marching feet and the rumble of engines of war could be heard in the streets, for thousands of Pittsburgh boys, clad in the khaki they were overseas during the World War, were celebrating the signing of the armistice.

The good-will delegates likewise celebrated the ending of the great war. The Armistice Day program brought frequent mention of the momentous struggle and expressions of hope that it marked the ending of war for all time.

Dr. Poling urged that America take advantage of her position as a creditor nation to promote international disarmament. He proposed an economic conference that would decide upon a program of debt cancellation, disarmament and the outlawry of war. There was a feeling in Europe, he said, that "we are deliberately holding Europe to ransom, taking advantage of European weakness to establish American financial and economic supremacy. * * * Were it not for the fact that we have the present means of coercion, Continental Europe would refuse our debt claims. * * * Shall we be led by fear to cancel the debt? No. Unless it is the fear of not being worthy, the fear of being wrong. But it has become a settled conviction with the speaker that if we do not find a practical solution for this stupendous problem, a constructive answer for this destroying question, then we must build super fleets, raise armies in excess of all possible combinations against us, for war, sooner or later, is inevitable. * * * As I see it, the United States has no moral obligation to cancel debts, unless by so doing the cancellation would promote peace. Thus we would move forward toward protecting peace, toward keeping our covenant with the dead, toward saving civilization."

SHAKY FRANC IS STEADIED

Talk of Passing Budget Within 5 Weeks Will Absorb the Chamber's Entire Attention.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Subdned and so docile as to be scarcely recognizable as the wild men who last Spring carelessly and joyously threw Government after Government out of office, the Deputies of France will tomorrow meet again in solemn session to take up their task of legislation.

When they went on vacation everything was still in a state of hazard and uncertainty. The franc hung perilously near disaster and the Treasury was exposed to the greatest danger. There had been hurried, almost breathless, legislation in a last-minute effort at safety. A sinking fund was created in solemn assembly at Versailles and new taxes were voted.

But these measures everybody knew would mean nothing unless that imponderable, unlegislatable, all-important thing called confidence was given to the Government and to the country. There were more people, prophesying failure than success in those days. Premier Poincaré did not encourage the optimists when he discarded the experts' plan and was purposely vague about the possibility of ratifying the interallied debt agreements and about stabilization. He seemed to have no very clear intentions about anything, though his determination to get the franc back as near normal by every means possible was clear enough.

Unexpected Transformation Wrought.

Somehow the unexpected happened. Confidence rallied to his determination far more than it would have done to any expert plan or any wizardry of manipulation. The franc climbed back out of the depths and the Treasury has been able with ease to meet all demands on it. The French people themselves have shown such optimism that they have been insisting on investing their money in national defense bonds to an extent which is almost embarassing, as their investments, though welcome enough, tend to increase the floating debt, which has always been the greatest source of danger.

Step by step, too, as the franc has improved, the Bank of France has sold buying dollars and sterling. That was another illustration of how apparently contrary all ordinary rules of confidence work. With each purchase of foreign moneys the franc has improved. There has therefore been a loss in francs on these purchases, a loss which has been gain to the bull speculators at Amsterdam and elsewhere who during these three months has been buying francs on a rising market. Yet, though the French Treasury has lost money on buying foreign moneys, the franc has kept steadily improving, and these purchases instead of being a financial loss must be regarded as a most important psychological asset.

Thus against nearly all expectations and against almost all rules the Government has won through to a position which last July seemed utterly unobtainable. There are corners to be turned yet, but they are nothing to what has been done. M. Poincaré has killed prophets and politicians, and now during the next three months they will have to sit at his feet and do as he says.

There is no other course open. He has called the Chamber back as late as possible and set it a task which will take every possible minute. Before December 20 the budget must be voted. There will not be time for anything else, not even for oratory. Economy in all things is the Premier's motto. All necessary taxes have been already voted, so there is no danger of either too long or too passionate discussion.

To Shelve Controversial Matters.

Almost everything controversial, such as some of the Government's economy decrees, will be postponed if the Premier can have his way, though even he cannot impose complete oratorical restraint on all parties. He will, however, probably manage to get fifty-eight scheduled interpellations postponed until next year and keep everything else off the program except the hard, unexciting work of voting necessary appropriations.

This manner of handling the Chamber has of course, also its disadvantages. It will prevent any discussion of the American debt settlement until next year and will prevent, unless it is forced, any discussion of such important matters as the Thoiry negotiations and the Franco-Italian situation. On these subjects there is a good score of deputies most anxious for information and for an opportunity to air their views and show their merit.

Any too severe repression of their ambitions may just possibly lead to a revolt, but it will be a revolt which M. Poincaré with his present authority, with his skill in avoiding direct issues and his unique situation as holder of the entirely uncoveted position of Premier will easily suppress.

On the horizon there is only one little cloud. The State functionaries are again clamoring for a further share of the State revenue. Last week the Premier stated that there could be nothing further for them. But their fixed salaries are considerably below the amount of increase in the cost of living which followed the fall of the franc and has never receded. In their decision there is the threat of a strike unless their demands are met. Last month the record figure of 5,740,000,000 francs was collected in taxation and it is going to be difficult to persuade the civil servants that they cannot get a share therein.

ARCTIC EXPLORERS HONOR AMERICAN

Prof. Louis Bauer Is Named to Committee After Paper at International Congress.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—Professor Louis Bauer of the Carnegie Institute of Washington was today elected a member of the executive committee of the International Society for Studying the Arctic Regions, which is holding its first congress in Berlin. This honor was conferred upon Professor Bauer after his able paper on the relations of the polar regions to earth magnetism was read to the delegates of eight nations.

Dr. Bauer heralded in his paper the society's plan to investigate the secrets of the ends of the earth, believing the observations will greatly aid in solving the problems of solar activity and that the time is particularly opportune since obeervations will show that the next two or three years will mark a period of high solar activity, causing magnetic storms, frequent aurora and diversified earth currents. Professor Bauer said that science needs much data from the polar regions, observations on the diurnal variation of the atmospheric potential gradient and the earth's magnetism and declared that until such research is carried on extensively no laws can be fixed or accurate predictions made. These studies which were formerly considered pure science, he asserted, are now considered applied science, since successful operation of radio over long distances cannot be dependable until more is known about magnetic inclination and intensity.

The newest isogonic charts now in course of preparation lack, he said, the accuracy which will be possible after the northern icefields are conquered and their secrets revealed.

Professor Sverdrup, Director of Scientific Research on the Maud Expedition, said that, aside from the value of polar explorations for weather predictions and magnetic currents, the same human urge which causes the chemist to spend his life investigating an atom will compel men to suffer the cold of the silent icefields until they open the book of the Arctic. Before the mysteries can be solved, he declared, it will be necessary for parties to remain the year round in a number of stations, which, since the advent of radio and airships, no longer represents the hardships which Peary endured dragging his sleds to the world's top.

Captain Bruns, General Secretary of the society, believes now that the world realizes the importance of getting exhaustive data on weather and magnetic conditions in the Arctic it will be an easy matter to raise sufficient funds to carry out explorations. The society now is represented in eighteen lands by influential men in the scientific world and it is the hope of these men that the idea of international cooperation can be developed to the point where the various Governments will finance a project which would mutually benefit all nations.

ROME KNOWS NOTHING OF MARLBOROUGH PLEA

Vatican Has Not Received Request for Annulment—Duke Silent on His Plans.

ROME, Nov. 11 (AP).—Vatican authorities declare that nothing has been received here regarding the reported desire of the Duke of Marlborough to join the Catholic Church or to seek annulment by the Pope of his first marriage.

It was asserted that if the Duke of Marlborough desires to obtain annulment of his first marriage, he must not appeal to the Vatican, but must first have recourse to the Diocesan Court at the place of his residence or where his marriage was celebrated.

In case the verdict of the court was rejection of annulment, the Duke might apply to the Holy Rota Tribunal, which is the Roman court handling such cases, after which, if the verdict of the Rota also was unfavorable, he could appeal to the Pope, who might appoint a special commission of Cardinals to re-examine the case.

There has even been a report current that the Duke of Marlborough came to Rome under an assumed name, but thus far he has not visited the Vatican.

LONDON, Nov. 11 (AP).—The Duke of Marlborough, who is reported to have made application for the issuance by the Pope of a decree nullifying his marriage with Consuelo Vanderbilt, who divorced him several years ago, declined today to make any statement concerning his religion. It had been said that he was anxious to embrace the Catholic faith and that he had been attending services at the Catholic Church at St. Aloysius at Oxford.

The Westminster Gazette affirms that the Duke has not yet actually been received into the Catholic Church. It says what has happened is that the Jesuit Fathers of St. Aloysius have been acting in the Duke's behalf, putting matters in form for his reception, but that the ecclesiastical decision concerning the Duke's divorce must first be awaited.

Refers to Black Reichswehr's Tribunal as Though It Were a Myth.

LANDSBERG, Prussia, Nov. 11.—Despite an eleventh hour attempt on the part of the Prussian Government itself to prevent an obscuration of justice, the Court which has been trying three members of the Black Reichswehr for conspiring to inflict Feme vengeance on Sergeant Gaedicke in Germany's "secret army" today acquitted two and sentenced the third to only one year's imprisonment.

Thus Lieutenant Schulz, organizer of the illegal military formations sponsored by the German High Command up to three years ago and the direct superior of the "murder triumvirate" against whom a score of assassinations have been chalked up, goes free. Lieutenant Hayn, one of his lesser tools, also escapes punishment.

Although he boastfully avowed having committed the brutal assault on Sergeant Gaedicke, which was the basis for this particular trial, he a self-confessed slayer in other Feme cases, and faces fifteen years at hard labor for one of his many crimes, Sergeant Klapproth, known as Lieutenant Schulz's bloodhound, got off with the sentence of one year's imprisonment, in imposing which the Presiding Judge observed: "Gaedicke, who had sold munitions to his enemies, the Communists, was so despicable a being that it is no wonder that Sergeant Klapproth, who had done so much for the Fatherland, became so infuriated at this traitor that he beat him down regardless of the consequences."

Typical of Conduct of Trial.

This astonishing defense of the savage criminal, who through his own bragging is known as the leading instrument of the atrociously cruel "discipline" meted out by the Black Reichswehr, is characteristic of the conduct of the Landsberg Feme cases by Judge Wessling, President of the local criminal court and an enrolled member of the German Nationalist Party.

In his summing up, Judge Wessling referred to the Feme as though it were simply a newspaper myth, altogether disregarding the immense volume of evidence clearly proving its sinister activities.

This morning a high official of the Prussian Ministry of Justice arrived here from Berlin and conferred at length with the prosecutor. Thereupon that functionary demanded of the Court not only the maximum penalties for the defendants—seven years at hard labor for Lieutenant Schulz, five for Sergeant Klapproth and one and a half for Lieutenant Hayn—but also requested that numerous witnesses, whom the Court previously had refused to call, be summoned forthwith.

The witnesses in question would testify about the general character of the Black Reichswehr, its Feme and its relation to the regular army. Judge Wessling's refusal to permit testimony of this character yesterday caused two attorneys for Sergeant Gaedicke, the Feme's victim, to retire from the case. The Judge maintained his ruling today in the face of the request which came directly from the Prussian Government. He also refused to adjourn the present trial and have it resumed later in Berlin simultaneously with three Feme murder cases now awaiting hearing there.

Judge Objects to Witness.

One of Judge Wessling's chief reasons for acquitting Lieutenant Schulz was that a certain witness first had declared himself to be in possession of incriminating documents against the accused and then had failed to produce the documents. The witness concerned is Karl Schmidt, a former member of the Black Reichswehr, who issued a public statement this evening to the effect that he deemed the Landsberg Court so prejudiced in the defendants' favor as to make his testimony useless. He said he was willing and eager to produce the evidence he holds under more favorable circumstances. To that end Herr Schmidt demands that charges he brought against him so that he can summon Judge Wessling as a witness and demonstrate how prejudiced the Judge was in Lieutenant Schulz's favor.

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—Commenting on the Landsberg trials, the Berliner Tageblatt observes:

"Intervention by the Ministry of Justice is the sharpest possible criticism of the fashion in which the hearings were conducted. Judge Wessling regards himself as an old officer and emphasizes this when he refers to the defendants and witnesses as officers. The conduct of the case was wholly incompatible with research into the true facts."

The socialist Vorwaerts says that the Landsberg court set up the "Gessler hat"—a play on the coincidence that the German Defense Minister bears the same name as the tyrant in "William Tell"—to which everybody was compelled to bow and which represented its resolve to conceal the truth about the Black Reichswehr and its bloodthirsty Feme.

ROME DENIES REPORTS OF MUSSOLINI'S DEATH

ROME, Nov. 11 (AP).—Reports from abroad that another attempt had been made against the life of Premier Mussolini were characterized tonight by the Stefani News Agency, the semi-official news organization, as "absolutely false."

Mussolini, says the Stefani statement, is in "perfect health."

Greeting Sent Here by Mussolini.

A report that Mussolini had died was circulated yesterday in New York, particularly in the Italian districts. At the offices of Il Nuovo Mundo, an Italian newspaper here, it was said that a report of Mussolini's death had been received and that efforts were being made to determine whether or not it was true.

General Umberto Nobile, Commander of the dirigible Norge on the flight across the North Pole last Spring, gave out yesterday a message from Premier Mussolini to the Italians of America, calling on them to conduct themselves so as to win respect for their mother country. The message follows:

"To General Nobile, one of that sturdy race of Italians who have inscribed immortal pages in the history of the world, I entrust the task of bringing to the Italians in America my own greeting and that of New Italy. This voice could in no better way reach the other side of the ocean than through General Nobile, who, inspired by it, has raised even over the North Pole the banner of Italy.

"To the Italians in America I send, therefore, the warmest memories of our country and my heartiest salute. I wish to offer them my praise for their untiring labors, for their energy, for their sobriety, for the esteem and consideration they have succeeded in acquiring in the great nation of which they are guests.

"While I praise them I urge them firmly to persevere in their praiseworthy conduct.

"Often foreign people judge us by the Italians living outside their own country. The Italians in America must always be mindful of this in every act of theirs and in every day of their life.

"By winning for themselves respect and admiration, the Italians in America will always exalt the Italian name to an ever loftier state and will thus contribute even from across the ocean to the prestige of the Fatherland.

"MUSSOLINI."

NEW COUP BY CHANG IN PEKING FEARED

Manchurian Dictator Is Expected to Oust Politicians and Take Important Post Himself.

HE ENTERS TIENTSIN

Defeat of Sun and Wu by Canton and Feng's Activities Force Northern Reorganization.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, Nov. 11.—The arrival at Tientsin today of Marshal Chang Tso-lin, Manchurian War Lord, has let loose floods of conjecture. Ostensibly he has come to confer with various military leaders on the subject of the situation on the Yangtse, but public opinion insists that he intends to make a clean sweep of politicians here in the capital and reform the Government with himself in an important rôle.

The defeat of Marshal Sun Chuan-fang in Kiangsi and the apparent inability of Marshal Wu Pei-fu to make progress are, however, sufficient matters for the serious consideration of the Northern militarists. The success of the Cantonese in inducing mutiny in the ranks of their opponents, and thereby securing military victories, causes much uneasiness here in the North.

General Feng Yu-hiang's original army (Kuominchun) is still to be reckoned with, and the forces once again directed by him in the Northwest have already made themselves felt in Shensi Province, where they have compelled Wu Pei-fu's Commander, who had been besieging Sian-fu, to fall back to the Honan border.

Sun Chuan-fang announces his determination to avenge his defeat, but the possibility that he may lose in Kiangsu and Chekiang provinces cannot be overlooked, nor the possibility that the Cantonese may soon be masters of the entire lower Yangtse basin.

In this more or less debatable area between the North and the South the Cantonese may well be able to establish themselves and before long be in a position to press their campaign northward.

Chang Tso-lin and all his associates, therefore, are compelled to reconsider the situation and align themselves compactly to face future contingencies.

It is too early as yet, however, to assume that the Cantonese will gain an effective mastery of North China. Nanking, the junction for the Shanghai-Nanking and Tientsin-Pukow railways, is the strategic point of supreme importance, control of which northern militarists are not likely to relinquish without a struggle.

Also, it remains to be seen whether the Cantonese are animated by patriotic sentiments, and, although professing nationalist motives, are less liable to dissensions and rivalries than those which affect their opponents, and which have hitherto prevented any great united effort from being made to put the affairs of the country in order.

Japan Answers Peking's Demand.

The Japanese reply to the Chinese request for a revision of their 1896 treaty, the decennial period of which expired on Oct. 20, was delivered at the Wai Chiao-pu (the Foreign Office) yesterday.

The Chinese note of that date expressed the wish for a fundamental revision, based on the principles of equality and reciprocity, as being of great importance to the future relations of the two countries, and to be effected within a prescribed period of six months. On this point of a time limit China's note said that "if at the expiration of the said period no treaty is completed, the Chinese Government will be confronted with the necessity of determining and declaring its attitude vis-à-vis the existing treaties."

It added that the Chinese Government reserves all rights in this respect.

The first six paragraphs of the Japanese reply are worded with extreme moderation, but the seventh is sharp. In consenting to a revision, the reply points out that Article 26 of the treaty limits revision to the articles relating to tariffs and commerce, and that the Chinese presumption that the entire group of treaties shall be subject to revision is neither contemplated nor sanctioned in any existing stipulations between Japan and China.

While disclaiming, however, any desire to limit the scope of the negotiations, the Japanese Government, without prejudice to its legal position, is willing to consider sympathetically the wishes of the Chinese Government, confident, it adds, that a sense of moderation will actuate the Chinese.

The note concludes by intimating that the attention of the Japanese Government has been arrested by the Chinese declaration on the subject of a time limit for the conclusion of a new treaty.

Urges Mutual Confidence.

On this point Tokio says:

"The Japanese Government is unable to conceal its sense of disappointment at such terms. The reservation and implications involved in this paragraph do not seem entirely to be in accord with the spirit of mutual confidence and helpfulness which alone can ensure the success of the proposed negotiations. At all events, the Japanese Government feels it is due to frankness to state that its acceptance of the proposal of a revision of treaties is not to be construed as an acquiescence in any rights asserted in the Wai Chiao-pu's communication."

CANTON SEEKS RECOGNITION.

Rebuff on Taxes Says National Centre Is No Longer in Peking.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HONGKONG, Nov. 11.—The Nationalist Government of Canton is apparently trying to force the recognition issue. Last week the Portuguese Consul at Shameen, Canton, as senior Consul, forwarded by post an intimation from the Diplomatic Corps in Peking to the effect that the new customs taxes were illegal and could not be recognized.

The Foreign Minister of Canton has now returned the Consul's letter and says that the Canton Nationalist Government does not recognize his existence or that of "the Senior Minister of the interested powers represented in Peking; nor are the status and relations of the same powers with my Government regulated on the basis of permitting them to raise the question of a violation of treaties."

This communication then asserts the readiness of Canton to discuss this and other questions as soon as all or any of the powers realize that the national authority has shifted from Peking to Canton.

HALES CHINA TO THE HAGUE

Belgium Seeks Ruling on Treaty Which Peking Has Abrogated.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 11.—Belgium has decided, after the failure of her efforts to arrive at a modus vivendi with China, to appeal to the Permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague. Her reason for this step is that the jurisdiction of The Hague Court is recognized by both parties.

Belgium requests the Court to interpret Article 46 of the treaty of 1865, which China has abrogated.

In informing China of her action Belgium has expressed her amicable feelings and the desire to find a conciliatory solution.

China has replied that from now on the provisions of the treaty of 1865 cease to apply to Belgian subjects in China, and thus confronts Belgium and The Hague Court with a fait accompli.

Belgium considers that her recourse to The Hague does not remove the possibility of reaching an agreement provided she is not treated less favorably than are the powers principally interested.

By the wording of the forty-sixth article the treaty could only have been denounced by Belgium.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Details of the announcement of the discovery by Dr. Casimir Funk of a method of decomposing insulin and isolating its constituents are given in a Daily Express Warsaw dispatch.

Insulin, stated Dr. Funk, is now proved to consist of two components. One is useful and the other is distinctly harmful.

Blood tests were carried out today with rabbits into which had been injected the newly discovered substances.

One component, which constitutes 10 or 15 per cent. insulin, strikingly increases the quantity of blood sugar, while the other has an exactly opposite effect.

Dr. Funk's object is now to find the amount of each substance required to produce the greatest curative effect. He hopes to complete his experiments in a few days.

Further Returns Show Drop in Republican Seats to 145.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Nov. 11.—Further official returns today from the recent election show a decrease in the number of seats won by the Republican parties.

The Liberal Unionists are now said to have gained 106 seats, the Democratic Unionists 17 and the Independent Republicans 22 of the total of seats for the supporters of the republic.

The Popular Royalists are credited with 61 seats, the Metaxists (Moderate Royalists) with 52 and the Anti-Venizelist Independents with 16, giving the Anti-Venizelists a total of 129. The Communists have 9 seats and the Agrarians 3.

The election was held on the proportional representation basis. As the Metaxists have resolved not to support a monarchy, it is believed that the republic will be continued. It is generally considered that a coalition Government will be formed.

COAL PEACE LOOMS; MINERS GET TERMS

British Unions' Executives Get Government Proposals in All-Night Session.

YIELD ON PAY AND HOURS

But Ask Creation of Tribunal to Co-ordinate District Accords With National Principle.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 12.—The coal strike seemed closer to an end than ever before since it began, exactly twenty-eight weeks ago, when a conference between strike leaders and the Cabinet Coal Committee ended at 3:30 o'clock this morning, after several hours' discussion.

At that time a "memorandum of settlement" had been drafted which will be submitted today by the leaders participating in the discussions to the miners' national delegate conference. If the latter accepts the conditions of the memorandum the longest coal strike in British history will finally terminate.

Chief Points of Memorandum.

The principal points in the memorandum include an undertaking on the part of the Miners' Federation to do all in its power to promote an immediate resumption of work in the coal fields by means of district settlements embodying a n understood national principle—the hours to be worked not being excluded from the district negotiations—and a promise by the Government that as soon as it is satisfied that the above condition has been complied with it will introduce legislation by which district agreements not conforming to the national principle may be the subject or appeal by either party to a national arbitral authority.

Further clauses in the memorandum take up the question of wages, reinstatement of workers, permanent terms of employment, &c., in terms too technical for the layman's comprehension.

There is a strong feeling that the "memorandum of settlement" will be the actual basis of the strike settlement, though the miners' delegates have still to be heard from and the mine owners may still have something to say.

The miners' delegate conference yesterday gave the executive of the Miners' Federation power to continue negotiations with the Government for the settlement of the coal dispute.

This decision, which was unanimous, meant that the miners conceded district agreements based on revision of wage rates and hours of work, but that they would press the Government to set up a tribunal for review and coordination of district agreements in accordance with the national principles laid down by the Government and believed to have the approval of the coal owners.

Equipped with this new authority the Executive met the Coal Committee of the Cabinet and discussed the Government proposals of last week. The miners asked definitely for information concerning the Government's views on the possibility of establishing a national tribunal and also regarding the constitution and scope of such a body. It was then agreed that there should be an adjournment for dinner and that the conference should resume at 10 o'clock at night.

Board of Experts Proposed.

During the interval it became known that the Government had offered some kind of national board of experts to review any agreements where miners alleged that the owners had not observed the national principle. There was no suggestion that the board should include representatives either of the Miners' Federation or the Mining Association, which is the owners' body.

It was understood that in return for such a national body the Government would require some kind of guarantee that peace would be preserved in the mining industry for a term of years.

Evan Williams, Sir Adam Nimmo and other owners were informed of the Government's intention to consider setting up a national board by legislation if they were unable to secure the agreement of the owners.

The Government proposal is a committee of three experts, to remain in existence for six months.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Scotland Yard detectives are seeking two confidence men who swindled a New York woman out of $4,500.

The victim, Mrs. L. Owen, met, while en route to London, a man who suggested showing her the sights here. Then followed a confidence trick in its crudest form, introduced by their encountering in Whitehall another man who dropped a wallet, which Mrs. Owen's companion picked up and restored.

After a story of charitable funds to be disposed of by responsible people Mrs. Owen was induced to hand over $4,500 in American notes, whereupon the two men disappeared.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—British imports in October, 1926, compared with October, 1925, rose 2 per cent., an increase of £2,178,079 to a total of £111,013,703, and exports fell by 20.7 per cent., a drop of £13,905,323 to a total of £53,176,663. Re-exports declined by £3,016,318 to £10,361,102, a fall of 22.5 per cent.

Britain imported £7,723,000 worth of coal, against £7,745,000 worth in September, while she exported £2,406 worth, as against £4,018,000 worth in October, 1925.

The adverse balance of trade, leaving out the movement of bullion and coin, was, for October, £47,476,000, against £28,376,000 in October, 1925, and £42,962,000 for last September, and for the ten months ending in October was £364,165,000, against £30,168,000 in 1925 and £256,007,000 in 1924.

but the feeling is gaining ground that the British conciliartory attitude toward China is not being reciprocated by the Chinese and that an increasingly anti-British attitude in China must be counteracted to avert and even more serious Chinese crisis.

An interesting commentary on the chaos in China was provided in the House of Commons tonight when Mr. Locker-Lampson, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, answering a question as to what Government the British Minister to China recently appointed would present his credentials to, said that the Minister's credentials were addressed to the President of China, but that he had been instructed to defer their presentation until there was a President to whom the British Government would be able to accord recognition, and meanwhile to send copies to the Chinese Minister of Foreign Affairs in Peking and to ask that he be recognized informally as the British representative.

RAIDS AUSTRIAN ARMS PLANT

Interallied Commission Seizes Thousands of Rifle and Gun Parts.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Nov. 11.—The Interallied Military Control Commission raided the Steur arms factory at Steyr yesterday, seizing 1,000 machine gun barrels, many thousands of rifles, barrels and other gun parts, and also confiscating numerous machines for the manufacture of arms.

Though the commission refuses to make an official statement, it is understood that it caught the factory red-handed making arms, though the management denies this, saying that it was old stock.

It is not known for what specific purpose the arms were intended, but it is not believed they were intended for use here, probably being contraband for the trade abroad.

The control commission has for some time been trying to get the Government to destroy 800 machines and to remodel 2,000 others considered capable of manufacturing arms. The Government maintains that the machines are now being used for peaceful purposes.

FRENCH PLEASED WITH GERMAN DEAL

Solid Advantages Obtained for Sarre and Lorraine Metallurgical Industries.

OUTLOOK DEPICTED AS ROSY

Close Business Relations Between the Former Foes Are Regarded as Assured.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—While the diplomats are forced to mark time in carrying out the much-discussed program of Franco-German peace and conciliation decided upon by M. Briand and Dr. Stresemann at Thoiry, the industrial leaders of both countries are emphasizing their latest commercial accord as proof of the smoothness with which the business entente between the two former enemy powers is progressing on both sides of the Rhine.

The facts of the accord signed several days ago already have been heralded from Berlin, but the economic press of France is just beginning to discuss them in a detailed way and explain to its readers their importance in the relations of the two countries.

In the first place vitally essential advantages have been secured for the iron and steel trade of the Sarre and Lorraine, assuring a free market for a large quantity of products. This is especially pleasing to the French in the case of Lorraine, where commercial interests have complained of the serious blow dealt their commerce by the return of the lost provinces to France after more than forty years of close economic contact with Germany. The advantages obtained for Lorraine include the assured sale of large annual tonnages of metallurgical products and a general improvement in the exchange of these goods between the province and Germany through customs concessions. In return, customs concessions are granted to Germany which will facilitate the replenishment of her stores of metallurgical and mechanical goods from the Sarre.

Among other things the agreement provides for the admission into Germany duty free of 1,700,000 tons of steel raw and finished from the Sarre. Of this total only 40,000 tons represents the mechanical and electrical industries. The accord will have a stabilizing effect upon the whole French metallurgical industry by making it further possible to compute annual exports of this character so that domestic needs may be accurately foreseen.

In the opinion of the Journée Industrielle the accord opens up new possibilities for future commercial relations between Germany and France and the friendly way in which it has been received in both countries should convince doubters that the two powers which fought each other in the late war have now reached a point in their relations where close industrial cooperation is assured.

Meanwhile apropos of the current discussion between France and Germany over the latter's earnest desire to bring to an end interallied military control the Journal d'Alsace et de Lorraine published in Strasbourg prints an alarming story about the arrival of a detachment of German naval artillery officers at Villingen in the Black Forest.

Despite the explanation of the officers that they have come for wireless manoeuvres the Strasbourg newspaper asserts that they are there to establish eventual emplacements for long-range guns. Another detachment of German officers were recently discovered in the same place on a similar mission, the newspaper adds.

COMMUNIST DECALOGUE SET FORTH BY STALIN

He Lays Down Rules for Trotsky and Other 'Movie Revolutionists' to Stay in Party.

MOSCOW, Nov. 11 (AP).—"Moving picture revolutionists" was one of the terms hurled at Leon Trotsky, Gregory Zinovieff and Leon Kameneff by Josef Stalin, President of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party in Russia, at the recent party conference, according to a report of the meeting which has just been published.

Stalin also laid down ten commandments which the Oppositionists must keep if they wish to remain in the Communist Party. The three men were disciplined by the Executive Committee for their tactics in opposing the Stalin wing of the party.

Stalin, in his speech, cast ridicule on Trotsky, Kemeneff and Zinovieff, declaring that they were no longer genuine revolutionists and internationalists, but merely "cinema revolutionists." He said they had two alternatives: either frankly to acknowledge their mistakes or to continue to embrace Menshevism, with all that is implied.

Stalin then enunciated the following commandments:

1. You must not break the discipline or unity of the party by creating factional elements.
2. You must not take advantage of the country's difficulties to embarrass the Government.
3. You must not promises the workers greater wages than we are able to give them.
4. You must not preach increasing the prices of manufactured articles or raising the taxation of the peasants.
5. You must not undermine the basis of Leninism.
6. You must not disrupt the Communist International.
7. You must not, every time you feel yourselves in the minority, shout "crisis" or party difficulties to the housetops.
8. You must not assemble the disgruntled elements of the party for the purpose of forming a new party.
9. You must not use demagogic methods of gaining popularity.
10. You must not attempt to dupe the party by urging a democratic régime in its organization.

Historic Vienna Watchman to Go.

VIENNA, Nov. 11 (AP).—One of the traditional landmarks of Vienna about to disappear before the march of progress is the watcher stationed on the Stephans Tower, from where for centuries it was the custom to signal the outbreak of fire by a gong, the speaking tube or, after sundown, by a light. The municipality has decided to eliminate this job entirely, as the signaling can be done quicker and more efficiently by means of the more modern radio station and the telephone.

LEOPOLD AND ASTRID SECLUDED IN CASTLE

ANOTHER WEDDING AWAITED

BRUSSELS, Nov. 11 (AP).—Crown Prince Leopold and his bride, the Princess Astrid, spent the first day of their honeymoon amid the picturesque beauty and quiet of the royal Castle Ciergnon, sheltered from the world by forests on all sides.

Although the morning papers reported the couple would go to Switzerland and the Riviera, it is believed these reports were circulated merely to put curious people off the honeymoon trail. It is understood the couple will spend a few days at Ciergnon and will then return to Brussels next week for the unveiling of a monument to Leopold II.

The windows of Ciergnon look upon a great panorama toward the French Ardennes, across the valley of the river Lesse. The estate is on a high plateau and provides excellent motoring, trout fishing, hunting, picturesque walks and absolute privacy.

Plans are being formulated for a tour of the Prince and Princess through the larger cities of Belgium in order to give as many of the future subjects of the royal couple an opportunity to see them.

The absence of the young couple from today's commemmoration of Armistice Day caused a great disappointment to the population of Brussels, but King Albert and the rest of the royal family were warmly cheered as they placed a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

There is talk of another possible royal wedding — between Belgium's little Princess, Marie-José and Crown Prince Olav of Norway. Marie-José is 20 years old and Olav three years her senior. Court officials deny that a marriage is contemplated between the son of King Haakon and King Albert's only daughter, but they denied that Prince Leopold and Princess Astrid were to be married until a few weeks ago. Therefore aristocratic circles in Brussels are confident that they will get invitations to a second wedding next Spring.

MADRID, Nov. 11.—Don Jose Comas, astronomer, claims to have discovered a new comet of the twelfth magnitude during the night of Nov. 4. He said its right ascension was 2 hours 56 minutes 36 seconds and its north declination 6 31 degrees.

Don Jose said the comet now is approximately in opposition to the sun.

SHAW IS MYSTIFIED BY HIS NOBEL PRIZE

Suggests He Was Chosen for Literature Award Because He Wrote Nothing in 1925.

IN POLITICAL NEWS AGAIN

Author Finds Two Parties in Parliament and Wants Liberals to Join With Labor Party.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—"It is a great mystery to me. I suppose it is given to me because I wrote nothing at all this year," was Bernard Shaw's characteristic comment today in reply to the news that the Nobel Prize for literature for 1925 had been awarded to him. He added that he had received no official intimation of the award.

Shaw also figured in the political news today. Commander Kenworthy, a former Liberal Member of Parliament who joined the Labor Party and is a Labor candidate in Central Hull, received a letter from the sage containing this interesting passage:

"Now that the Irish Party is gone from the House of Commons it is a two-party House, and all sensible Liberals must recognize that they must be represented by the Labor Party or not at all. I am naturally glad you have formally joined the Labor Party, being a member of it myself."

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 11 (AP).—The Nobel prize for chemistry, 1925, was awarded today to Dr. Richard Zsigmondy, Professor of Inorganic Chemistry of the University of Goettingen, Germany. The chemistry prize for 1926 went to Professor Theodore Svedberg of the University of Upsala, Sweden.

The Swedish Academy of Sciences, which awards the honors, decided to divide the Nobel prize for physics for 1925 between Professor James Franck, University of Goettingen, and Professor Gustav Hertz of Halle University. The 1926 physics award was made to Professor Jean Baptiste Perrin of the University of Paris.

Professor Svedberg lectured at Wisconsin University in 1923. He was mentioned for the Nobel prize in 1913.

Professor Jean B. Perrin is an authority on transmutation of matter. He was French exchange Professor at Columbia University in 1913.

The Nobel Prizes are awarded in the fields of physics, chemistry, medicine or physiology, literature and preservation peace. In addition to their recognition of world-wide pre-eminence in the respective fields of endeavor for the year specified, they carry with them cash prizes averaging about $35,000.

The prizes are financed by a fund established by the late Alfred B. Nobel, Swedish scientist and inventor of dynamite. The first awards were distributed on Dec. 10, 1901, the fifth anniversary of his death.

ASKS LAND TO REBUILD TEMPLE OF SOLOMON

But Jewish Petition Urging League to Act Is Tabled by Mandates Commission.

GENEVA, Nov. 11 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—A petition that the League of Nations request the Palestine Government to allot a strip of land on Mount Moriah, Jerusalem, for the reconstruction of Solomon's temple was tabled by the Permanent Mandates Commission here yesterday.

The petition emanated from a group of the highly orthodox Kabbalists in Jerusalem, headed by Rabbi Bressalaner.

Several petitions concerning Palestine, Syria and Southwest Africa, were considered by the commission.

The commission also concluded the examination of the report of the mandatory power concerning the administration of Iraq.

The British Gorevnment has constantly instructed the High Commissioner to apply the principle, "the Government of Iraq by the Iraklis," in the administration of the country.

In an interview, High Commissioner Dobbs declared that the political situation in Mesopotamia had become normal since the agreement between Turkey and Great Britain on the Mosul question. The governmental budget, since 1922, had shown a surplus, he said.

MICHELIN REVEALS NEW TYPE OF TIRE

Experts in Paris Say American Exporters Will Have to Follow Lead.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—American exporters of automobile tires who wish to compete in the European field with Michelin will have to follow the lead established by that company, according to American automotive experts here. The latter have heard of an impending change in Michelin tires for several months and have awaited with impatience the public announcement issued this morning of the "Bibendum Comfort" tire which Michelin asserts has all the advantages and none of the disadvantages of existing types.

The new tire comprises a rim, casing and inner tube. The rim is composed of a single piece and is flat, except opposite the valve opening, where a narrow channel is provided, with narrow vertical flanges on each side. The tube is of the usual type except that the valve bends outward at right angles for accessibility, and a thick rubber pad in the base of the valve fits into the groove in the rim.

The casing has a new gripping design and is prevented from stretching by internal steel wires where it fits into the rim. When the tire is deflated the pad on the inner tube can be pushed out of the rim groove and the casing pushed into it, thereby freeing the opposite side. An earscrew holds the valve pad into the groove and even if the tube is punctured, the casing cannot be removed or fall off.

Tests have been made with a car driven at all speeds.

RIVIERA STILL PERTURBED.

Fears Further Demonstrations by the Italian Fascisti.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NICE, Nov. 11.—Although the Italian Government has made all possible excuses and apologies for the Ventimiglia affair and other attacks on French Consulates following the attempt on Mussolini's life at Bologna, a certain liveliness among the Fascisti on the frontier continues to cause disquiet on the Riviera.

Last evening when Cauvin, the man who invaded the Ventimiglia Consulate was arrested, the greatest precautions had to be taken by the police to avoid provoking another outbreak. A protest meeting was called and it was disbanded only on an order of the local Fascist leader backed by several files of carabineers.

On this side of the frontier the feeling of uneasiness has increased rather than otherwise during the few past days because of wild rumors which are being circulated. The Italians have, however, strengthened the regular forces on their side of the frontier in order to control the Fascist bands and the French gendarmes are sufficiently strong to prevent any incidents.

SCIENTISTS OF PACIFIC FORM PERMANENT BODY

Tokio Congress Results in Closer Cooperation of All Countries Represented.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, Japan, Nov. 11.—The third Pan-Pacific Science Congress, which was attended by leading scientists of all the Pacific nations, closed its ten-day session by organizing a permanent Pacific Science Association, with these purposes:

"To initiate and promote cooperation in study of the scientific problems relating to the Pacific, particularly those affecting the prosperity and welfare of the Pacific peoples, and to strengthen the bond of peace among the Pacific peoples by promoting a feeling of brotherhood among their scientists."

Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur of California told THE TIMES correspondent that the congress had been the most successful yet held, offering, as it did, a means for the efficient exchange of ideas, results and researches. The congress enabled the scientists of many nations to become acquainted and prepared the way for cooperation in future investigations, many of which it recommended and planned.

Among the recommendations, the Chilean Government was asked to make a national park of Juan Fernandes Island, made famous by Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe"; the anthropologists are to advance ideas regarding the Pacific peoples for discussion at the next congress; the Agricultural Department will study and make suggestions regarding the cultivation of the land on steep grading.

A regular exchange of data on volcanology and seismology was provided for, and radio stations were asked to cooperate for a quick interchange of such information; the natural monuments and the flora and fauna of the Pacific regions are to be preserved, and a coordinated and comprehensive investigation of Pacific coral reefs made.

English was adopted as the official language of the association. The next meeting will be held in Java. Dr. Wilbur and others praised the hospitality of the Japanese, who have crowded the delegates' visit with garden parties and other entertainments, even furnishing all the meals for the visitors without cost. All the delegates were specially invited to an imperial garden party given by the Prince Regent yesterday.

OPPOSES PLANE SUBSIDY.

F. Handley Page Urges Britain to Spend Money on Experiments.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—To combat German supremacy in the air, F. Handley Page, British airplane designer, urges the Government to spend more money on experiments, rather than to extend the subsidy of the Imperial Airways.

He declares that when the Airways can take a passenger to Paris and return for $25 in any weather, there will no longer be any demand for a subsidy, and he believes that this time will come.

The problem then will be, he says, how to secure enough planes to accommodate the public.

"Cheap flying will arrive as surely as cheap motoring has done," he declares. He believes such an end may be reached if the Government will devote $1,500,000 annually to research work.

Mr. Page also urges the Government to facilitate the training of foreign pilots in England and to send propagandist missions to countries now looking to France, Germany and America for the leadership in aviation.

FASCISTI SUPPRESS OPPOSITION SOCIETIES

All Known and Suspected Organizations Are Dissolved Throughout Italy.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 11.—Reports received at the Ministry of the Interior from all the prefectures in the Kingdom indicate that the recent measure adopted by the Cabinet against the anti-Fascist opposition have been already integrally applied. In only two days all anti-Fascist political parties, associations or organizations have been dissolved, together with numerous other ones of a suspicious character throughout Italy.

It is noteworthy, however, that in thirty-three provinces out of the total of seventy-five no steps of any sort whatever have been taken against the Opposition because all anti-Fascist activities had ceased there long ago without the necessity of applying special measures. These provinces are Alessandria, Aquila, Avellino, Bari, Belluno, Cagliaria, Caserta, Cosenza, Cremona, Ferrara, Foggia, Grosseto, Lecce, Macerata, Mantova, Modena, Padua, Parma, Piacenza, Pisa, Potenza, Reggio di Calabria, Reggio del Milia, Salerno, Sassari, Sienna, Siracusa, Teramo, Taranto, Trieste, Vicenza, Zara and Fiume.

As will be seen, the all-Fascist provinces are scattered all over Italy but do not include any of the larger cities.

OVERCOATS : IN THE NEW YORK MANNER

The kind of an Overcoat you can be proud to wear

To us, an overcoat is not just something to keep the wind out.

We realize that, for many months of the year, the overcoat a man wears is the symbol he presents to the world . . . . the symbol that reflects his character and the position he occupies in life.

We give you overcoats, then, that are worthy of you.

Overcoats made of fine, rich woolens. Every fabric our personal selection. Some woven to our order on world-famous Scottish and English looms. Some chosen at home.

Overcoats in the deep autumnal tones of forest foliage. Overcoats cut with exquisite precision along the lines New York men know as "the New York manner."

Overcoats, that despite their obviously high quality are priced at moderate figures. Overcoats, in short, that we are proud to sell and that you will be proud to wear.

PROPOSES MERGER OF FEDERAL BOARDS

Engineering Council Submits Plan to Save Money and Increase Efficiency.

NEW DEPARTMENT IS URGED

Public Works and Domain Would Simplify Many Activities—Early Congress Action Sought.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 11.—A big cut in the cost of Government will result, it was declared, if Congress adopts the findings of a national committee of the American Engineering Council which, meeting at Cornell University today, made public a report covering two years of study in Federal reorganization. The committee presented a plan to revamp the administrative structure.

The plan makes a complete regrouping of Federal activities into a Department of Public Works and Domain. More than a score of bureaus, boards, departmental agencies and services are incorporated organically into the new department. Numerous other units are so adjusted that they can be served in their public works aspects by this department, which in this respect would act as consulting engineer, and in which all Government effort appropriate to its sphere would for the first time be brought under centralized control.

Every function and activity of the Federal Government that has been, or might be, seriously considered for allocation to such a department was studied by the committee, it was stated by Dean Dexter S. Kimball of the Cornell College of Engineering, President of the council, which sponsored the inquiry.

Exhaustive Study by Experts.

Dean Kimball characterized the report, prepared by a committee of which E. O. Griffenhagen of Chicago is Chairman, as an influence which would penetrate the whole problem of Government reorganization brought forward under the Administration of President Harding.

The nation's engineers, Dean Kimball asserted, can go before Congress and the country confident that this plan represents the most scientific and most exhaustive study ever made in this field.

"The keynote of the argument for the proposal to establish a Department of Public Works and Domain," said the report, "is that it will make for a more logical and more simple and hence, presumptively, a more effective organization of our Federal Government."

The committee recommended that the following units be included in the new department:

Geological Survey, Bureau of Reclamation, the Alaska Railroad, National Park Service, General Land Office, all of which are now in the Department of the Interior.

Bureau of Public Roads and Forest Service, now in the Department of Agriculture.

The non-military river and harbor work of the office of Chief Engineers, Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, Mississippi River Commission, California Débris Commission, Supervisor of the Harbor of New York, the Northern and Northwestern Land Survey, Board of Commissioners for Alaska and the Alaska Telegraph and Cable System is all now under the Department of War.

The new department would also take in the Office of Supervising Architect, now in the Treasury Department, as well as the Federal Power Commission, the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks of the National Capital and the American Battle Monuments Commission, which are at present independent agencies.

The Architect of the Capitol, now under Congress, and departmental services for the maintenance and operation of buildings would be constituent units of the department.

Would Serve Other Departments.

The Department of Public Works and Domain, under the scheme of the engineers, would serve the other departments of the Government. For example, this department would be in service relationship with the Department of War in the administration of national military parks, national monuments and memorials, the Inland Waterways Corporation, the Bureau of Insular Affairs (the Philippines and Porto Ricco) and the Construction Service.

Another function of the department would be affiliated, this relation extending to the Commission of Fine Arts and the Board of Surveys and Maps of the Federal Government. The service relationship would cover a wide range of administrative bodies, including the Panama Canal and Canal Zone and the Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation.

"The proposed change," the report said, "is in the interest of simplicity. No additional department of government is created. A number of minor units are merged. An existing major department—Interior—is converted into a more homogeneous organization.

"There is logic and common sense in the association of the various activities that will make up the work of the new department. The new department will make it possible to reduce overhead costs. The country is interested in getting the most service for what it pays to support the Government."

Changes in War Department.

An important feature of the plan is the suggestion that the rivers and harbors work be placed under the direction of the Secretary of Public Works and Domain rather than the Secretary of War.

The committee also urged that "an arrangement be worked out between these two Cabinet officers that will give practical effect to a more comprehensive plan for the practical training of members of the corps of engineers of the army in responsible engineering work in a much more varied field than the rivers and harbors work to which they have been limited."

Striking economies of many kinds, direct and indirect, can be accomplished in the interest of the taxpayers by the adoption of this plan, the committee declares.

The American Engineering Council, Dean Kimball announced, will seek the support of other organizations, including architects and contractors, in an effort to have the principles of this plan enacted into law at the coming session of Congress. The public works legislation proposed by the engineers, Dean Kimball said, would be in charge of Senator Jones of Washington and Representative Wyant of Pennsylvania.

Other Notable Work of Council.

The American Engineering Council was organized under the leadership of Secretary Hoover six years ago, and since that time has been one of the most influential instruments in furthering Mr. Hoover's plans.

The council under the direction of Mr. Hoover made the famous assay of waste, which has resulted in large savings to industry. It carried out recently an international study of civil aviation for the Department of Commerce and is now engaged in a nation-wide study of the relation of accidents to production.

Formation of plans for a national department of public works, Dean Kimball said tonight, means that more than 50,000 engineers will join in an attack on waste and inefficiency due to an outworn departmental structure originally set up to meet primitive conditions in the early days of the republic.

GRIMES CLEARED QUICKLY.

State Trooper Freed of Assault Charge Brought by Hunter.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 11.—After ten minutes' deliberation, a jury in Part I of the Supreme Court here today acquitted Corporal Andrew Grimes of Troop K, State Police, who was charged with third degree assault by Lewis D. Haight of Lake Mahopac, Putnam County.

Haight alleged that on Feb. 19 of this year while hunting with his brother, Charles Haight, Road Commissioner of the town of Carmel, and his nephew, Walter Sniffen, Corporal Grimes and Trooper Edward F. Dolphin, after asking for his hunting license, insulted him. When he resented it, Haight charged, Grimes knocked him to the ground and then arrested him. Grimes, denying the charges, said he had been sworn at by Haight, who threatened him with a shotgun.

DESCRIBES DEALS IN MORSE STOCK

Ex-Treasurer Says Shares Were Exchanged for Others With No Assets Behind Them.

ON BASIS OF 3 to 205,000

Witness Testifies $2,000,000 Dividends Were Paid While Earnings Were $700,000.

Three shares of stock in the New York, Norfolk and Washington Steamship Company, a concern without any assets, were exchanged for 205,000 shares of stock in the United States Steamship Company with a par value of $2,050,000, according to the testimony of Nehemiah H. Campbell, one time Treasurer of the United States Steamship Company, given at the Morse trial before Judge Thomas D. Thacher, in the Federal Court here yesterday.

The testimony was given in connection with a contract entered into between M. L. Gilbert, a ship captain and former ship broker, and the United States Steamship Company. The contract specified the giving to Gilbert of 1,250,000 shares of steamship company stock in return for 87½ per cent. of the total stock of several small boat companies. The New York, Norfolk and Washington Company, according to the testimony, issued only three shares of stock, never operated any boats and owned no boats, but was capitalized at $10,000,000. Stock in the New York and Buffalo Steamship Company was obtained in return for 17,500 shares of steamship company stock.

Erwin A., Harry F. and Benjamin W. Morse, sons of Charles W. Morse, and thirteen others are being tried for conspiracy to use the mails fraudulently in the promotion of stock sales in companies organized by the senior Morse. Gilbert is one of the defendants.

Mr. Campbell, who is named in the indictment, but who is not on trial at this time, said that as Treasurer of the company he had power of attorney for M. L. Gilbert and identified a stack of checks used in stock transactions which were signed by him as attorney for Gilbert.

During the year 1918-1919 the United States company paid, according to Campbell's testimony, $2,000,000 in dividends. He added that during this period the actual earnings of the concern amounted to $700,000 and that the balance of the dividends was taken from the surplus.

2 Guilty of Robbing Girl of $2,300.

Victor Schmidt and Charles Keogh were found guilty last night by a jury in the Queens County Court, of having held up and robbed Phyllis Kriss, a bookkeeper, employed by the Dietz Coal Company of Woodhaven, of $2,300 which she was taking to a bank to deposit. The hold-up occurred in September, at 102d Street and Liberty Avenue. The jury asked for clemency for Keogh as the testimony indicated that he was only an accomplice. Judge Adel remanded the men for sentence on Nov. 22.

IN JAILS SINCE 1889, IN TOILS AGAIN AT 54

Gray-Haired Man, Freed Only a Week Ago, Is Arrested for Cashing Forged Check.

SAYS HE COULDN'T GET JOB

Record Against Him, He Complains —First Convicted at Age of 7, Faces Life Term Under Baumes Law.

John J. Geary, 54 years old, a pale, gray-haired man, who said he lived at 438 West Twentieth Street, was released a week ago from Welfare Island Prison from an indeterminate sentence for petit larceny. It was his tenth conviction and his tenth sentence since 1889, when he was sentenced to serve nine months for petit larceny at the Albany Prison, and yesterday he was arrested again.

Geary was identified as a man who had obtained $11 in cash and four dollars' worth of groceries on a forged check for $15 from John J. Kirk, a grocer, of 116 Broome Street.

"Don't you know," he was asked by Inspector John J. Coughlin, "that under the new Baumes law this means a life sentence for you?"

"I know all about the Baumes law," replied Geary. "But what is a fellow going to do? Nobody'd give me a job with my record, and I've got to eat."

"Any welfare organization would have helped you," said Inspector Coughlin.

"Yes—maybe," said Geary, and he was led to the Essex Market Court, where he was held without bail.

Since his first conviction on Oct. 21, 1889, when he was seven years old, Geary has been in jails in New York and New Jersey practically all the time.

He was sentenced on May 21, 1892, to serve from four and one-half to nine years at Sing Sing for a felonious assault in New York. On Sept. 23, 1907, he was sentenced here to two years at Sing Sing for cashing a forged money order. On July 5, 1909, he received from two to three years at Sing Sing for carrying concealed weapons. On May 10, 1912, he was brought here from Baltimore, where he had been arrested for disorderly conduct, convicted of violation of parole and sentenced to finish his term at Clinton Prison. On Dec. 4, 1914, he was sentenced to twenty days in the House of Correction at Holyoke, Mass., for disorderly conduct. On Aug. 9, 1915, he received one year in the Hudson County Penitentiary for carrying concealed weapons in Jersey City. On Jan. 6, 1919, he was sentenced here for two years and six months at Sing Sing for attempted grand larceny. On April 19, 1921, he was sentenced to serve from two to three years in the Trenton Prison for robbery in Jersey City. On April 29, 1925, he was sentenced to serve the indeterminate sentence at Welfare Island for petit larceny.

PRISONER FINDS PISTOL, BUT GIVES IT TO GUARD

Turns in Weapon Careless Keeper Dropped in Sing Sing—Warden Commends Him.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Petro Novello, 42 years old, a prisoner at Sing Sing from New York County, was marching with 100 other prisoners from the new dormitory outside the prison walls to breakfast at the mess hall this morning when he saw lying in the grass at the edge of the walk a .32 calibre pistol.

No one saw him as he picked it up. He saw at once that all its six chambers were loaded. He could easily have stuffed it into his blouse, but instead he carried it in his hand as he marched with the other prisoners toward Keeper William J. McDonald.

Possession of a pistol by any prisoner quartered in the new dormitory at Sing Sing might have enabled him to effect the largest jail delivery ever known. There are 400 men quartered there, most of them first offenders. The dormitory is 200 yards distant from the walls of the main prison and is surrounded mostly by open country. Only a half dozen guards are on duty there at night. Any noise there, even shooting, might have been unnoticed at the main prison for some time.

Novello paused as he reached Keeper McDonald and handed the weapon to him.

"I just found it in the grass," he said.

McDonald reported the incident promptly to Warden Lewis E. Lawes, who discovered that the pistol belonged to Harry J. Quarles, a negro keeper on night patrol duty, whom he suspended immediately.

"Quarles will be tried for carelessness," said Mr. Lawes. "It was a careless act, but of the most serious kind. I have commended the prisoner, Novello, for returning the pistol and I will see if something can be done for him."

The prison authorities would not disclose Novello's history nor the length of his sentence except that he was a first offender and had a good record.

FOR BETTER CITIZENSHIP.

Committee Is Formed to Arouse Interest in Government Affairs.

In order to obtain good government in city, State and nation, through the fullest exercise of all citizens of the privileges of citizenship, the New York City Committee on Active Citizenship has been formed, with Robert Adamson, Vice President of the Central Mercantile Bank, as Chairman, it was announced yesterday. In the preliminary conferences leading to the formation of the committee, Mr. Adamson was named by Lucius R. Eastman, President of the Merchants' Association, to represent it.

The Merchants' Association had adopted resolutions approving the committee and agreeing to cooperate with "an agency to awaken the voters of New York City to a sense of their responsibility in the exercise of the franchise."

PRAISES JUSTICE BRANDEIS.

Jewish Tribune Calls Him Epitome of Americanism and Judaism.

Tributes to Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis on his seventieth birthday are contained in the current issue of The Jewish Tribune, which refers to him editorially as "the epitome of all that is finest in Americanism and Judaism."

In addition to editorial comment, the Nov. 12 issue includes messages of appreciation and congratulation from leaders in national and civic life. These include Chief Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo of the Court of Appeals; Associate Justice Harlan F. Stone of the Supreme Court; Colonel Edward M. House, Nathan Straus, Oswald Garrison Villard, Louis Marshall, Samuel Untermyer and Senator Robert M. La Follette.

Today's issue of The Day, a Jewish daily newspaper, contains an interview with Justice Brandeis. In it the Justice gives his opinions on Zionism, on the acquisition of vast fortunes, on immigration, and on the Ku Klux Klan and anti-Semitism, which, he believes, hold no perils for American Jewry.

CITY BREVITIES.

More than 200 workers for the Diamond Jubilee Endowment Fund of the Methodist Church Home, Ninety-second Street and Amsterdam Avenue, are expected to attend a dinner this evening in the Hotel Commodore.

Professor Collins F. Bliss, Associate Dean of the College of Engineering, and head of the Department of Mechanical Engineering of New York University, has been appointed Acting Director of the Evening Division of the College of Engineering. He will fill the post left vacant by the recent death of Professor Hazen G. Tyler.

At a dinner at the Hotel Pennsylvania next Monday evening under the auspices of the Queensboro Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and the Family Welfare Society of Queens, workers in the two societies will tell of what they have been doing among poor and unfortunate families in Queens.

"Jealous of One's Own Religion," will be the subject this evening of Rabbi Maxwell L. Sacks in Temple Sinai, Arlington Avenue and Bradford Street, Brooklyn. County Judge Frank F. Adel of Queens will preside.

Dr. Thomas William Salmon, professor of psychiatry at Columbia University, will lecture at 4 P. M. today in Union Theological Seminary, Broadway and 120th Street, on "Some Modern Conceptions of Human Conduct."

HEADS BLACK SEA FLEET.

Soviet Appoints Admiral Orloff to Post Held by Pantherzhansky.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RIGA, Nov. 11.—Following reports of impending changes in the Soviet Navy the Revolutionary Military Committee has announced the appointment of Admiral Orloff as commander of the Black Sea fleet without, however, mentioning the removal of Admiral Pantherzhansky, who hitherto held that post.

Orloff does not belong to the Old Guard Communists. He was an officer of the cruiser Bogatyr and during the revolution earned the confidence of the Bolsheviki by supporting the revolutionists at Reval. He joined the Communist Party in 1918.

During the anniversary festivities, Nov. 7, a fresh batch of cadets from the Leningrad Naval School received commissions and Admiral Muklevitch, Commander of the Baltic Fleet, said that the bourgeois expectations that the fleet could not be officered by specialists had not been realized. The Soviet chiefs inspected the whole fleet following the unveiling of Lenin's statue in Leningrad.

SACO-LOWELL REFINANCING.

Directors to Propose $500,000 Increase of Capital by Notes.

BOSTON, Nov. 11 (AP).—A plan for refinancing the Saco-Lowell shops, a Massachusetts corporation manufacturing cotton textile machinery, was announced tonight by the directors and will be presented to a special meeting of stockholders here on Nov. 22.

Declaring there is no possibility of the company's meeting $4,000,000 in notes held by banks and extended from Oct. 16 last to Jan. 14, 1927, the directors advocated a plan to raise not less than $500,000 additional capital by a new issue of convertible notes. The plan also contemplates the organization of a subsidiary corporation to be known as the Kitson Machine Shop, to which would be transferred the title and rights in the so-called Kitson Plant and Walker Street Foundry in Lowell, together with other assets, which would enable the new corporation to operate as a separate manufacturing unit.

FIRST WOMEN ELECTED TO INSTITUTE OF ARTS

Edith Wharton Among the Four Chosen—American Academy Makes Two Men Members.

The election of the novelists, Edith Wharton, Margaret Deland, Agnes Repplier and Mary E. Wilkins Freeman to the National Institute of Arts and Letters, Wednesday night, marked the letting down of the bars to women in that organization. For many years women have been excluded from the Institute, and there have been several merry disputes among the members as to whether the ban on them should be removed.

"They have been arguing about that for a long time," said Owen Davis, the playwright, last night, "although I could never understand why a craftsman was not a craftsman whether man or woman. A writer is a writer, and that is all there is to it. I should be proud to be in anything with Edith Wharton."

Two new members were elected to the American Academy of Arts and Letters at the annual meeting of that organization yesterday in the Academy Building, 633 West 155th Street. They are Wilbur L. Cross of New Haven, editor of the Yale Review and Dean of the Graduate School, and Hermon Atkins MacNeil, New York sculptor.

Mr. Cross is well known as an editor and critic and is a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters. Mr. MacNeil is best known for his "Sun Vow" and "Primitive Chant" in the Metropolitan Museum and his statue of General Washington in Washington Square. He is also the designer of the pan-American medal of award and the United States Government quarter dollar.

During the meeting commemorative tributes were read for Joseph Pennell and Stuart P. Sherman, members of the Academy who died in the last year.

The following officers were elected: President, William M. Sloane; Chancellor, Nicholas Murray Butler; Secretary, Robert Underwood Johnson; Treasurer, Thomas Hastings, and Hamlin Garland, Cass Gilbert, Archer Milton Huntington, Brander Matthews and Augustus Thomas, Directors.

LODGE AVOIDS SON'S GRAVE

Spiritist Says Dead Boy Asked Him Not to Visit It.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—I have never been to my boy's grave in France because he has asked me not to," said Sir Oliver Lodge, the spiritist in a lecture tonight. "My son says, 'I take no interest in that grave. I never was in a grave in my life.'"

Sir Oliver added that death was an adventure which nobody should fear.

QUEEN LAYS WREATH AT WAR MEMORIAL

Thousands Surround Knoll at Kansas City to Hear Marie's Fervent Plea for Peace.

TRIES RADIO TO HOMELAND

After Address to Veterans in Distant Hospital, She Speaks Message to the King.

ON BOARD THE QUEEN OF RUMANIA'S TRAIN, KANSAS CITY, Nov. 11.—A reception in Kansas City, truly tremendous, brought to a climatic close tonight a day of greetings in three States, exceeding in enthusiasm any which Queen Marie has received since the first few days of her American visit.

From her first appearance this morning in Nebraska, on through her tour across the southeastern corner of Iowa and into Missouri, she was cheered by waiting crowds at every station, even those where the train whirled by without a pause.

The day was a triumph for Kansas City also. It was, as Mayor A. I. Beach said tonight in the presence of the Queen, "the greatest day in the history of Kansas City." For it brought within a space of a few hours the President of the United States and a reigning Queen to this city.

Queen Marie arrived at 6:30 P. M., exactly three hours after the President and Mrs. Coolidge had visited the city. The Queen and her party were driven at once to the Liberty Memorial, whose graceful marble shaft had been dedicated only this morning by the President.

Crowds Sweep Up to Royal Guests.

The huge Union Station at Kansas City was literally jammed when the royal party came from the train and passed through a narrow lane to the street. The police were utterly unable to keep the crowds back and they swarmed down upon the royal party as they entered their automobiles.

The highest military salute, the salute of twenty-one guns for the head of a nation, boomed for the second time today here as the Queen started for the memorial.

The great knoll which the memorial shaft crowns tonight with its smoking brazier was covered with a crowd of many thousands, fully as great as that which greeted the President, today.

The Queen, Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana were escorted to the canopied rostrum at the base of the shaft, from which President Coolidge spoke this morning, and the Queen extended her arms to the people, while they shouted for her.

Queen's Tribute to War Dead.

Then, after Mayor Beach had introduced her, the Queen spoke a tribute to the war dead.

"It is especially a wonderful moment for me to be here," the Queen said, "for it is a symbol of peace, a symbol of the great desire all the world over that there should be no more fearful wars to destroy those we love.

"I bring you a greeting in the name of the King from my country to your city. I am full of emotion at the thought that I will be the one to lay the first wreath upon your monument. I do it in loving remembrance of those for whom it was erected.

"I think you all know that we fought for the same cause and our sons and brothers lie in different fields over the wide world. And so you have put up this splendid monument to the memory of those we love and who helped us to continue the work they began.

"May this moment never be forgotten. It will be a day of remembrance to you, as it will be for me. When I see the wonderful monument you have built, I think of the great sacrifices of all those who are not here today to rejoice with us. I thank you all for having come out this evening in such numbers."

Bows as Bugler Sounds Taps

When the Queen had finished, a bugler played Taps, while Queen Marie and her party stood with bowed heads. Then the Queen deposited a bronze wreath at the base of the column.

The royal family and their suite had a private dinner tonight in the Hotel Muenienbach, after which the party attended an Armistice Day concert in the American Royal Pavilion. The evening in Kansas City closed with a private supper and reception at the home of Mrs. Jacob L. Loose, attended by about 100 of Mrs. Loose's friends. It was the third private home the Queen has seen in America. The train left at 12:30 tonight for St. Louis, which it is due to reach tomorrow morning and where it will remain twenty-four hours.

At Hastings, Neb., the first stop of the day, an elaborate radio hookup had been arranged which, it was hoped, would carry the voices of the Queen, the Prince and the Princess clear to King Ferdinand in his castle at Sinaia.

A microphone connected with Station KFKX was set up on the rear platform of the Queen's observation car when the train stopped and the Queen spoke an Armistice Day message into it, meant particularly for 500 invalid soldiers at Battle Mountain Sanitarium at Hot Springs, S. D. She concluded with a few words intended for her royal husband, who had been informed by cable that the Queen would attempt to speak to him.

Speaks to Soldiers and King.

Eight thousand persons were gathered around the railroad station when the train pulled in at 8:30 o'clock this morning, 4:30 P. M. Rumanian time. After responding to their cheers, the Queen stepped up to the microphone and said:

"It is with great pleasure that I can talk to so many hundreds of thousands today, especially while here on this Armistice Day, a day so glorious and so well remembered. I send my greetings to all those Americans who fought in the great war, and I think especially also of the many men here in the hospitals who are paying the price.

"It is a great wonder to me that I can talk so far. I hope you here in America will know that I appreciate the wonderful reception given me. I have received everywhere such a warm greeting from the American people and I think especially of those greetings with a full heart.

"Yesterday in Denver I went to one of your great hospitals. There I saw and talked with some of your soldiers who are paying the price. I send my greetings to all of you who may be listening in, and it is a great wonder to me to think that through this wonderful apparatus I am able to talk and be heard by so many."

Then the Queen spoke directly for the King's ears.

"I hope that you can hear me," she said. "It seems almost incredible that I should be able to talk to you from a far-away land. It is a wonderful thing that you can receive this message. It makes me tremble with emotion to think I can send you this greeting. Ileana would like to send a few words to you over in Rumania."

Ileana Feels Father Is Near.

When the Queen had finished Princess Ileana took the microphone. Her seventeen-year-old Royal Highness had been told that her father was listening in far off Rumania, and, in the most naive manner and totally oblivious of the great crowd grouped around her, she talked and laughed into the radio apparatus in Rumanian, as if her father were in the same room with her and she was chatting about her experiences in America.

No word had reached the train this evening as to whether King Ferdinand heard the voices of his family.

A really tremendous reception was given to the royal family at Omaha, where the train paused for fifteen minutes at noon. Twenty thousand people were waiting to see the Queen and her children, and they included a large delegation of ex-service men who marched and counter-marched to trumpet music alongside the Queen's car.

One event unscheduled by the official reception committee was an invitation to the Queen from the International Brotherhood Welfare Association, the hobo organization founded by Dr. James Eads How, to be a guest at a "jungle luncheon" at its headquarters in Omaha. Dr. How even offered an honorary membership to "this migratory Queen." A similar invitation to lunch had been extended to President Coolidge, Dr. How said. Needless to say, nothing came of either invitation.

There was another stop at St. Joseph, Mo., where the Queen and Princess Ileana stepped out on the rear platform to respond to the greetings of the immense crowd.

It seemed that fully half the crowd was composed of young girls who naturally wanted to see the handsome young Prince. The Prince, however, had been riding in the locomotive cab for an hour before the train arrived at St. Joseph. He left the cab there and with the aid of plain-clothes men pushed his way through the crowd to the royal family's car. He was unrecognizable in a cap and leather topcoat and some of the young women looked distinctly annoyed at being pushed back by a group of unknown men.

SPIRIT OF EUROPE LAUDED.

Cooperation in League Is Cited by Dr. John Finley in Boston Address.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—Dr. John H. Finley of New York addressed a large gathering at the Chamber of Commerce here today. His subject was "Eight Years Afterward" and the address was based on his recent journey through the capitals of the Old World.

He urged the ratification of the Lausanne Treaty and lauded the nations of Europe for "sitting down together" within eight years after the World War, "a shining fact today, dimmed only by America's absence from that society."

"Though Mussolini was off for Tripoli before I reached the shores of Italy," Dr. Finley said, "I became instantly conscious of his persuasive influence, which, from my observation, seemed to dominate Italy, from fishermen and peasants to scholars and financiers.

"The whole aspect of the place has been altered. Even the beggars, save the blind, seem to have been banished. Industry has apparently become a passion. There is a new attitude. Italy has entered upon a new life that will survive the voice that animated it.

"It would appear, that Greece, the mother of republics, is to take on the democratic ways of her Western children," he commented.

Referring to his visit to Egypt, the speaker paid a tribute to Dr. Reisner of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, who recently discovered the tomb of the mother of Cheops, builder of the pyramids.

"We who refused to join the Allies in making war on unregenerate Turkey are slowest to make peace with those who are giving some evidence of a desire to do better," Dr. Finley declared.

"Christian minorities, who remained to minister in the dire sufferings of minorities during the war, and who are now turning their schools and their services largely to the education of Turkish youth, are most eager for ratification of the Lausanne Treaty."

1,500 HOTEL MEN IN ANNUAL DINNER

Walker Welcomes Visitors From Many Countries at Hotel Commodore Function.

AWARDS TO CHEFS ARE MADE

The fortieth annual dinner of the New York State Hotel Association was held last night at the Hotel Commodore. Mayor Walker was present and welcomed visitors from all parts of the United States and from Canada and Europe to the function. There were 1,500 present.

Mayor Walker said he had attended twenty-one dinners of the association, and then went on to discuss the prohibition referendum approved by the voters of this State. He praised the referendum as a means of revealing the will of the citizens and declared the legislators of the State should heed its mandate.

In an interview before the dinner, Elmore C. Green, President of the association, declared there had been an overconstruction of hotels in New York City and that owners of apartment hotels, which have increased greatly in numbers in the last few years, were facing difficult problems.

Chef Faces Exacting Test.

The chef who prepared the dinner for the hotel men faced a more exacting test than any of the prize winners in the cooking contests at the National Hotel Exposition at the Grand Central Palace. An index to the tastes of hotel men is suggested by the following menu for their dinner:

Coupe Favorita

Croute au Pot aux Toastettes

Celery Salted Nuts Olives

Diamond Back Terrapin, Maryland

Supreme of Guinea Chicken Massena
Mousseline on Mushrooms

Chef de Cusine Leony Derouet directed the preparation of the dinner, and Eugene H. Marcotte, Banquet Manager at the Commodore, was in charge of its service.

The dinner was attended by nearly 1,500 hotel men, from all sections of the United States and Canada, who had as their guests hotel representatives from Great Britain, Italy and Germany.

Among those at the dinner were twenty-five members of the course in hotel administration at Cornell University, headed by Professor H. B. Meek. They have been attending the hotel exposition, and in recognition of their work at the show they were asked to rise, so that the visiting hotel men might see the type of students taking courses in hotel administration. Mr. Green was toastmaster, and the speakers incinded H. D. Cunningham, former Justice of the New York Court of Claims, and Edward Ford.

Activties at the National Hotel Exposition were suspended last night, so that visiting hotel men might go to the dinner. The exposition will be open for a complete session from noon until 10:30 P. M. today. The exhibition will end tomorrow at 6 P. M.

Medals Are Awarded.

The French Government official medal, the most coveted prize of the Salon of Culinary Art, was presented to André Gamard, assistant chef at the Hotel Plaza, for his buffet table, which won first prize in that competition on Wednesday. The President's Cup was awarded to Jacques Lindauer of the French liner Paris for the most skillfully and artistically set table for six persons.

A bronze statue by Germaine was won by Attilio Pasquetto of the Ambassador in the competition arranged by the Chef de Cuisine Association. Manrice Graziani of the Maison Fichi won the prize of honor donated by Jules Waber, Honorary President of the Société of Culinaire Philanthropique for excellence in pastry and confectionery.

TOMBS REPORT ACTION DEFERRED BY WALKER

Unable to Hear Wallis on Warren Investigation—Probably Will Act Tomorrow.

Mayor Walker did not make public yesterday the report of his Commissioner of Accounts, Joseph A. Warren, on his recent investigation of the administration of Commissioner of Correction Frederick A. Wallis and the institutions under the jurisdiction of the latter.

The Mayor has read and studied Commissioner Warren's report and his intention last Wednesday night was to summon Commissioner Wallis to the City Hall yesterday to give him an opportunity to comment upon Commissioner Warren's conclusions. The common belief in the City Hall was that Mr. Wallis would take such an opportunity to resign his Commissionership and that the Mayor would lose no time in accepting the resignation.

The Mayor, however, had one of the busiest days of his administration yesterday. He was tied up virtually all day in a meeting of the Board of Estimate. When he came down stairs to his office at 5:30 o'clock he found awaiting him not only Commissioner Warren but the representatives of the Long Island Railroad and of the Transit Commission, Board of Transportation, Corporation Counsel and others whom he had summoned into conference to discuss measures for the elimination of the grade crossings on Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn.

After the Mayor had finished with these duties he said it was so late that he would be unable to see Commissioner Wallis and that he did not think it would be fair to release the report of the Commissoiner of Accounts until after he had done so. As Mayor Walker is to spend today in Philadelphia, he announced that the Wallis matter would have to go over at least until tomorrow.

P. M. CHANDLER CLEARED.

Wins Quick Verdict in Suit Over Failure of Chandler Bros. & Co.

Percy M. Chandler of Chandler & Co. Inc., was cleared of all charges that he was connected with the failure of Chandler Brothers & Co. in 1921, when a jury before Supreme Court Justice McCook brought in a verdict yesterday in his favor as defendant in a suit against him by Whittier & Co. The jury was ont only ten minntes. A companion suit against Chandler brought by S. L. Gulberson was withdrawn when the case came to trial. The two suits involved claims for $500,000.

Mr. Chandler estahlished the fact that he had severed his relations with Chandler Brothers in 1914 and had formed the investment concern of Chandler & Co., which had no connection with the other.

BLOOD TRANSFUSION NOW FOR MRS. GIBSON

fell on Sunday, but inquiry disclosed that the office was open.

Defense to Call Burnsea.

Garvin said that Gorsline's conscisance had troubled him and that he had admitted having bean in De Ruesey's Lane. Henry Stevens had fired two shots at his feet and ordered him away, this version had it. Gorsline denied Garvin's statements. The defense, it was learned yesterday, will call upon Raymond Burns and W. Sherman Burns, sons of William J. Burns and directors of the agency, to controvert Garvin's testimony. Garvin swore that he told Gorsline's alleged story to the Burns brothers.

They are expected to deny this. They have proof, it was understood, that they were not in their office on that date.

Another witness whom the defense will call is Ervin J. Smith, head of the Ervin J. Smith National Detective Agency at 799 Broadway. Mr. Smith is Vice President of the International Secret Service Association. The defense will use him to combat Garvin's statement that he had never met Gorsline before the alleged visit of Oct. 1.

In 1908 or 1909, Smith is prepared to testify, he and Garvin were employed as operatives by the A. L. Drummond Detective Agency and were assigned with several other detectives to investigate registration lists and watch the polls at an electinn in South River, N. J., near New Brunswick. At that time Garvin is said to have met Gorsline, who was active in the election. The defense will seek to show that Garvin had ample opportunity to see Gorsline during the election. Smith talked to Russell B. Watson and former Attorney General Robert H. McCarter of defense counsel in the last few days.

Gorsline reiterated last night his denials of Garvin's testimony. Referring to Smith's statement that Garvin had been a watcher at electione in South River, Gorsline said:

"I was active during that time in the Alexander Fordyce campaign, but merely as a watcher at the polls. I worked in New Brunswick for Fordyce and a reform ticket, but I certainly don't remember having met this man. If he worked in south River I certainly did not meet him, because my activity throughout the campaign and election was confined to New Brunswick."

Schneider Also Will Testify.

A third angle of the defense fire will fall on Raymond Schneider, who discovered the bodies on Sept. 16, two days after the crime. Schneider had with him at the time Pearl Bahmer, then 16 years old. They explained that they had gone out to the Phillips farm to pick mushrooms. Schneider accused a friend, another New Brunswick youth, four years ago, of the crime. He recanted the accusation and was convicted of perjury. The Bahmer girl, who has been in a home for girls, has placed an affidavit in the hands of the defense lawyers. They admitted last night that they had subpoenaed the girl to appear in court today.

Her new story, which was incorporated in an affidavit presented recently to Prosecutor John Toolan of Middlesex County, was that two days after the murders Schneider called at her home shortly after 8 A. M. and asked her to accompany him for a walk. She explained, her affidavit declares, that she was unable to leave the house at that hour, hnt suggested that he return later. Schneider, she says, came back about 9:30 and she left with him.

They walked to De Russey's Lane, and Schneider, she goes on to say, walked her nnhesitatingly toward the crabapple tres where ths bodies lay. He pointed to the bodies, her new account describes, and said:

"You ought to be glad you're not lying there."

Has Changed Her Story.

Ths girl's new story was so widely different from her first account that Prosecutor Toolan warned her before making an affidavit that she faced a charge of perjury if she were deliberately swearing to false statements. She replied that ahs was fully aware of the penalty, but declared that her present story was true and that she had lied in ths previous investigation upon the suggestion of Schneider.

Schneider is now a driver for ths Masterson Trucking Company of New Brunswick and lives with his mother in Piscataway Township. He refused to discuss the Bahmer girl's new story.

The special prosecutor conferred in his office with Inspector Underwood, Captain Harry Walsh, Sergeant Richard Burke and Patrick J. Hayes, Chief Hudson County Detective. Also present were Philip Payne, managing editor of The Daily Mirror, and Herbert Mayer, a reporter for the tabloid. Testimony given at the trial has indicated that the calling card with the alleged Stevens fingerprint was in possession of the newspaper just before it was turned over to Senator Simpson.

Mrs. Riehl to Testify.

Senator Simpson said that the conference of his police aides, at which the newspaper men were not present, dealt with the testimony so far given and the witnesses who are to appear. He said that Payne would be a witness today, probably taking the stand as soon as Barbara Tough, former Hall maid, leaves it. She was under cross-examination on Wednesday when court recessed over Armistice Day. Other witnesses scheduled for today are Mrs. Louise Geist Riehl, another ex-servant; C. Waite, a former Scotland Yard operative, who had possession of the murder bullets for a time, and John V. Hubbard, a New Brunswick undertaker. Mr. Hubbard reported sick on Wednesday and Senator Simpson had a bench warrant issued for service today if Mr. Hubbard fails to appear. The undertaker said he would be on hand this morning.

Senator Simpson said he would offer some novel testimony on Saturday, if the Court permitted. He said he would put George Amos Dorsey, anthropologist, on the stand. Mr. Dorsey is the author, among other books, of "Why We Behave Like Human Beings." He has been associated with Harvard and with the Field Museum in Chicago. Mr. Dorsey, said the Senator, would testify concerning Willie Stevens.

At the request of Prosecutor Simpson, George D. Totten, former Somerset County Detective; W. G. Berryman, Somerville Borough Engineer, and several assistants went to the Phillips farm yesterday and measured the distance from the murder area to the Somerset-Middlesex County line. They also took measurements which are said to have proved that the old Phillips farm house and barn were well within Somerset County jurisdiction, the line being nearly a hundred yards from the nearest corner of the farm buildings. The Prosecutor's insistence on this indicated that he may attempt to prove that the murders were committed in one of the buildings, the bodies afterward being removed a hundred yards or more to the vicinity of the crabapple tree. This does not fit in, however, with the statements of Mrs. Gibson. It was learned that Gorsline had told Senatnr Simpson's aides that the shots sounded as if they came from within the farm house instead of from the crabappie tree.

In Somerville those connected with ths trial celebrated yesterday by taking a day off. Judge Cleary spent the bright crisp afternoon hunting in the countryside, the game season having opened on Wednesday. Justice Parker spent ths day at his home in Morristown. The only figures in ths case who did not have at least a few hours relaxation in their homes were the members of ths jury and the three deputy sheriffs assigned to guard them.

When Justice Parker left after adjournment of court on Wednesday, he gave orders that they be locked up. Instead of going to their homes they spent the night as usual at the Colonial house, three blocks from the court house.

The jurors spent the afternoon in their rooms. Distributing themselves among three rooms with a Deputy Sheriff in each, they resorted to pipes and tobacco and conversation.

Prisoners Have Visiters.

The prisoners in jail had an equally quiet time of it. For them the monotnny was broken by visits from friends and relatives. Mrs. Henry Carpender was one of the first of thess to arrive. After saying "hello" to Henry Stevens and Willie Stevens she went to her husband's cell and remained for two hours chatting with him.

"Mr. Carpender wishes very much that he were on trial with his cousins," she said. "It is very hard on him to be imprisoned all this time and unable to do anything about it. He spends most of the day reading novels and the newspapers. He has read all the latest best sellers."

She added that his eyes were troubling him and that he suffered from lack of exercise.

McCARTER WON'T QUIT CASE.

Pfeiffer Denies Report of Dissension in Defense Legal Ranks.

A report that former Attorney General Robert H. McCarter was to quit as chief of the defense counsel in the Hall-Mills trial as a result of dissension over procedure was officially denied last night at Somerville, N. J. by Timothy N. Pfeiffer, family counsel for Mrs. Hall, who has taken a prominent part in the defense plans.

"You can deny such a report without equivocation," said Mr. Pfeiffer. "There is no truth to it, there never has been dissension. General McCarter will continue to take the part he has assumed at the trial."

General McCarter was present at a conference of the defense attorneys last evening at the Calloway home, near Somerville, where the defense lawyers have lived since the opening of the trial.

MRS. MILLS'S BROTHER DIES.

Frederick Reinhardt to Be Buried in Grave Near Slain Woman.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 11.—Armistice Day, with no trial to occupy them, was spent quietly by Mrs. Frances S. Hall and her relatives here this morning. Mrs. Hall went for a drive with her attorney, Timothy N. Pfeiffer, accompanying him to the headquarters of defense counsel, in South Somerville. She returned after lunch, had dinner and spent a quiet evening at hnme.

James Mills visited the home of a brother-in-law who died suddenly yesterday. Frederick Reinhardt of Berdines Corners, a brother of Mrs. Eleanor Reinhardt Mills and for many years an employe of the Brunswick Kroeschell Company of New Brunswick, was stricken suddenly early yesterday morning with a heart attack. He was taken to Middlesex General Hospital, where he had recently been a patient for many weeks. He died in the ambulance on the way.

TWO YOUNG GIRLS ARE SHOT IN CHICAGO

One Dies and the Other Is Near Death—14 Suspects Are Questioned, but All but One Freed.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11 (AP).—Twn young girls have been mysteriously shot in the past twenty-four hours. One is dead and the other is probably dying.

Victoria Delimata, 16-year-old high school girl of Chicago Heights, who was shot down on the street a few feet from her nome last night, is believed to have been slain by a killer who mistook her for somebody else in the darkness.

Esther Hass, 15 years old, who lives at Thirteenth Street and Western Avenue, was shot in the left side today by a bullet from a .22-calibre rifle. She was with her twin sisters, Marion and Elizabeth, 11 years old, and they were nearing their home when a shot was heard. For a time suspicion was directed to boys shooting rabbits in the vicinity, but questioning by the police failed to substantiate this theory.

The Hass girl was taken to St. Francis Hospital, where it was said her wound is dangerous.

Fourteen men, suspected of knowing something about the murder of Victnria Delimata had been seized this afternoon, but after being questioned all but one were released. His name was kept secret, but the police said he was a well-known police character.

WEIGHTMAN OUT OF JAIL.

Bigamist Who Tried Suicide Says He Will Seek Women Who Left Him

VINELAND, N. J., Nov. 11.—William Weightman 3d, son of a well known Philadelphia family, was released from the Vineland jail today. He had been there since Tuesday, when he was arrested after trying to commit suicide by shooting himself. He suffered only a slight wound in the head.

Weightman's self-inflioted wound, according to the police, was the result of despondency over the disappearance of his third wife, Mrs. Nita Weightman, a Mexican girl.

"I am going to find Nita," Weightman said to the jail officials today. "I'll follow her even if she's gone back to Mexico."

Weightman pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy brought recently by Mrs. Marie Campbell Weightman. He was released under $25,000 bail on this charge, pending sentence.

CUP RACE PILOTS TENTATIVELY PICKED

Lieut. Champion Is Expected to Have Fastest Plane—Many Prefer Cuddihy.

2 ITALIANS HAVE MISHAPS

Capt. Ferrarin Is Forced Down and Major de Bernardi's Plane Hits Launch.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 11.—The most serious problem confronting the American team tentatively designated for the Schneider Cup race, that of the proper assignment of personnel to the trio of planes which will endeavor to win permanent possession of the most coveted air trophy in the world, had not been solved tonight.

The fastest of the American racing planes is believed to be the Curtiss-motored No. 4 plane, which Lieutenant Carleton C. Champion, United States Navy, was tentatively chosen to pilot in the coming international seaplane race in substitution for the late Lieutenant Conant, one of the navy's best speed racers, who lost his life last week when his plane, en route to the Hampton Roads naval base, hit a fish stake in the lower Chesapeake Bay and collapsed.

The most experienced naval pilot on the American team in high-speed seaplane racing is Lieutenant George T. Cuddihy, and in the opinion of many he should, as the senior remaining member of the American team, have been assigned to the Curtiss-motored No. 4 plane instead of Lieutenant Champion.

Instead of being assigned to what is generally conceded to be the fastest plane, however, Lieutenant Cuddihy has been designated to fly the Packard-motored No. 2 plane, which, while conceded to be the second fastest of the American planes, is powered with a geared motor, which is not only a distinct novelty in racing planes but exceedingly difficult to handle. The consequence, in the opinion of some of the most experienced experts here, is that the American team is psychologically and otherwise handicapped as it approaches the race.

Change Made Last Monday.

The suggestion that Lieutenant Cuddihy be assigned to pilot the No. 4 plane instead of Lieutenant Champion, it is definitely learned, was made as long ago as last Monday, when Lieutenant Cuddihy took out the No. 4 plane, which he was not designated to fly in the Schneider Cup Race, and established a new world's record of a fraction over 256 miles an hour over a measured course for seaplanes.

It was difficult to make this change, however, because it might have involved the transfer of Lieutenant Champion to the No. 2 Packard-motored plane, which he has never flown and which contains a motor with which he is not altogether familiar.

The result appears to be that, unless there is an eleventh-hour shift of personnel in the American racing team, that Lieutenant Cuddihy, the most experienced naval flier on the American team in high-speed racing, which is altogether different from other seaplaning, is scheduled to fly the No. 2 plane, which, while believed to possess remarkable speed possibilities, has not yet been thoroughly mastered; while Lieutenant Champion, the least experienced high-speed racer on the team, has been tentatively assigned to the No. 4 plane, which has the best speed record of the American planes, and Lieutenant C. Frank Schilt of the Marine Corps, second in rank to Lieutenant Cuddihy in high-speed experience of the team, has been assigned to the No. 6 plane, which is the lowest-powered one entered in the race.

This problem of personnel has been the subject of numerous secret conferences since Monday and is believed to have been partly the reason for the hurried trip which Edward P. Warner, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, made to the Hampton Roads air base Tuesday by airplane from Washington.

Decision Will Be Made Today.

Following these conferences and despite the fact that it had been officially announced in Washington after Lieutenant Conant's death that his plane, the No. 4, would be flown in the race by Lieutenant Champion, it was admitted by a high official at the naval air base tonight that no final decision to assign Lieutenant Champion to that plans had or would be made before 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. This official stated that Lieutenants W. G. Tomlinson and George R. Henderson, as well as Lieutenant Champion, were still regarded as alternates to fly Lieutenant Conant's plane and that the plans will be flown by the man who qualifies to fly it.

On top of this personnel complication Commander Homer C. Wick, Captain of the American team, was taken sick today with a touch of la grippe. Nevertheless, Rear Admiral Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Naval Aeronautics, said tonight the morale of the American team, to the extent it had been designated, was good, but the Americans were not worried ovsr its prospects in the Schneider Cup race.

Meanwhile, with improved weather conditions, the navigability tests were successfully begun late this afternoon, despite several mishaps, two of which befell the red racers of the Italians. All three of Italy's aces and one American entrant, Lieutenant Schilt of the Marine Corps, embarked on these tests and tonight only two had qualified, one an Italian, the other an American.

These were Lieutenant Adriano Bacules's No. 1 plane, and Lieutenant Schilt's No. 6 racer, the first and last scheduled to hop off in Saturday's cup race. Major Mario de Bernardis's No. 3 plane qualified today in flying and taxiing tests but its flotation trial was forced over until tomorrow by an accident that damaged the plane's pontoons.

The only other plans to attempt navigability tests was the No. 3 Italian racer, piloted by Captain Ferrarin. It hopped off at 5:14 o'clock this afternoon, less than half an hour before dark and experienced motor trouble which compelled a forced landing in Hampton Roads at a point three miles west of the Hampton Roads air base, in the direction of Newport News.

After taking off, Captain Ferrarin made his first landing and taxi test, then took off for another taxi test when he was forced down. It was not until 8 o'clock that Captain Ferrarin's No. 3 plane was towed from Hampton Roads to the air station.

The first plane taking off in today's tests, Major de Bernardi's No. 5, went into the air at 4:15 o'clock and successfully completed both its flight and taxiing tests. All that remained was a flotation test during which the plane was to have been moored for six hours to determine its water tightness.

Despite the afternoon's misshaps tonight's prospects are that all six planes may enter the race, none having been eliminated. Two Italian and two American planes yet have tests to face or complete. Major de Bernardi's No. 5 plane must yet undertake only flotation tests. The No. 2 plane of Lieutenant Cuddihy, the No. 3 plane of Captain Farrarin and the No. 4 plane, tentatively assigned to Lieutenant Champion, have all their navigability tests in flight, taxiing and mooring to undergo. Unless they are completed in time for the race, which means tomorrow, the delinquent planes will be barred from the contest.

TELL WISH TO HEAL PRINCETON BREACH of the Princeton Board of Athletic Control received by Harvard's Director of Athletics this morning. The Harvard committee regrets the action taken by the Princeton board severing all athletic relations between the two universities.

"In regard to the remaining engagements already arranged for, had not Princeton decided that it would be inadvisable to complete such engagements, our feelings would have prompted us to carry out the program.

"Believing that all great universities exist for the same end—namely, public service through education—the Harvard committee hopes that the action taken by Princeton may in no way impair the larger cooperation and kindly relations between the universities and between their Alumni."

Harvard and Princeton will engage jointly in athletic competition today. Both schools have sent their cross-country teams to New Haven to race over the Yale cross-country course. Professor Charles W. Kennedy, director of Harvard athletics, said yesterday that Princeton's severance of relations with Harvard applied only to dual meets, not to competitions in which several schools were involved.

The statemsnt of President Howard Elliott of the Board of Overseers of Harvard University was as follows:

"As a member of the Board of Overseers of Harvard, I wish to express my very great regret over the strained relations that have developed between Princeton and Harvard. Princeton may be justified in severing all athletic relations with Harvard, but in spite of this, I hope the authorities of both of these institutions will come together and 'bury the hatchet.'

"The situation today affects much more the graduates of these two historic colleges than it affects the undergraduates, the athletic teams, the Lampoon or the Crimson. Princeton and Harvard graduates all over the country are closely associated socially, in professional and business life and in work for civic advancement; and this unfortunate incident will strain these pleasant and useful relations and do harm.

"Again, for these two national institutions to show to the world that they cannot engage in manly sports without friction and bad feeling weakens their influence in the nation and does not help the general cause of wise education.

"I hope most earnestly that Harvard will, man fashion, say, through President Lowell, the editors of the Lampoon and the Crimson, Athletic Committee, the Student Council and any other undergraduate bodies, to Mr. Hibben, Mr. Kennedy and the Board of Athletic control at Princeton, 'Regret this break in our long time relations and if we seem to have been rude and unthinking and unfair in any of our actions and statements, we are sorry. We would like to sit down in good temper with you and talk over things and arrange for a resumption of the cordial relations that have existed between Princeton and Harvard for fifty years.'

"I happen to be President of the Board of Overseers, but I act as presiding officer and have no power to speak for the board without their direction. I am, therefore, speaking as one overseer, but I feel sure I represent the views of many overseers and Harvard graduates—namely, that we have a feeling of genuine sorrow over the situation and hope most earnestly it can be composed, either in the way above suggested, or by some other suitable means."

Another Overseer's View.

Frederick Roy Martin, a member of the Harvard Board of Overseers, said:

"I am very sorry that the break in athletic relations comes at a time when there has been an exhibition of ill manners by a few Harvard undergraduates, but I think it is well in the circumstances that there should be no intercollegiate sports between two colleges whose undergraduates do not feel more kindly toward one another than Harvard and Princeton undergraduates have felt in recent years."

Many alumni regard the Big Three contests in the light of sacred games and feel that undergraduate wrath should take the form of increased eagerness to beat a rival rather than that of dropping a rival from the schedule.

In the Princeton letter severing relations objection was voiced to the Harvard resolution of Oct. 13. To explain this resolution, Director Bingham authorized the publication of the following report:

"The meeting of the Director with Professors Nettleton of Yale and Kennedy of Princeton at New Haven on Oct. 6 last hsiped to bring about a clearer understanding of the athletic relations between the three universities, and, as the joint announcement which was given out after the meeting said, 'No change in the essential athletic relations of the three universities is contemplated.' In view, however, of the current misunderstandings, some of which have continued since that announcement, it seems advisable to make Harvard's attitude and policy perfectly clear.

"In recent years the playing of football games against the same colleges every year has tended to keep the excitement of the contests at too high a pitch for too long a period almost throughout the whole Autumn, and has exaggerated the part which intercollegiate rivalry should properly have in the game. Moreover, the schedule is coming to be so fixed and prearranged year after year that there is a danger of difficulty in shortening it, if that should be thought necessary.

"Except for its final game with Yale, it is therefore Harvard's policy, as soon as circumstances permit, to play football with other colleges only at suitable intervals. This policy is adopted in the interests of the student body, and since its purpose is the promotion of objects for which colleges exist, no other institution can have cause to object.

"Our agreement with Yale and Princeton made in 1916 with a view to maintaining in mutual confidence at these three universities the same theory and practice in matters of eligibility and every provision therein, as revised in 1922, will be observed, as it has been. We have no intention of withdrawing from that agreement. There is nothing in this policy that should disturb the friendship which exists between us. The other parties to the agreement are as free as we are to change their athletic schedules in the future as they have been changed in the past. Harvard has not, nor has it ever had an intention of severing athletic relations with, or dropping permanently from its schedule, any college, nor has it the slightest hostile feeling against any one."

Outside of this simple statement of regret at the break, no official communication was sent to Princeton from Harvard.

A question which was automatically brought up was what college team would fill the empty date created by Princeton's absence on the 1927 schedule. The Princeton game was to take place on Nov. 5 between the University of Indiana and Brown University on the Crimson schedule. With Yale playing Harvard at Cambridge next year, and the Tiger game at Princeton wiped off the slate, all of Harvard's games will take place at home.

The college allows its football team to play one game away from home each year. When the question of competing against the University of Michigan at Michigan came up last year the main objection to such a contest was that it would necessitate a second game away from Cambridge. With the Princeton game no longer on the schedule, the Michigan rumor once more appears.

Neither Director Bingham nor Head Coach Horween would make any statement concerning who would take the place of Princeton on the Crimson schedule, however. The possibilities of Dartmouth's being placed in Princeton's niche is regarded as extremely doubtful, though, and the future policy of Harvard will probably be to play various colleges from year to year, with the tendency toward a broadening policy, rather than concentrating on any one college in particular.

Lampoon Is Attacked.

Since the publication of The Lampoon letters have come to The Harvard Crimson and to President Lowell, deploring the conduct of The Lampoon editors.

James W. D. Seymour, spokesman of the college, when questioned as to what would be done in regard to The Lampoon, said no action would be taken by the university.

The editors of The Lampoon gave out a statement in which they denied that The Lampoon had anything of importance to do with the real "break" between Harvard and Princeton and that the severance in relations came as a result of something "far more deep" than mere bufoonery.

An elm tree which formerly stood in front of The Lampoon Building, a gift of Josiah L. Wheelwright, a founder of The Lampoon, was found cut down this morning. Whoever was responsible for the act had reached through the bars of a cage in which the tree had been transplanted two years ago and sawed through its trunk.
